Held that, in second appeals, Chief Court should interfere in exceptional cases only with the discretionary power given to the first appellate Court by S. 5 of Act IX of 1908, particularly when such indulgence has been shown owing to the change brought about by the New Punjab Courts Act III of 1914, on the ground that the appellant was advised (though erroneously) by his legal adviser that the appeal could be presented within 60 days.

Where a plaint in a pre-emption case is returned for presenting it to a competent Court on the ground that the pre-emption money exceeded the Munsif's pecuniary jurisdiction, and after excluding the time under S. 14 of Act IX of 1908, it was a few days late when it was re-filed:

Held, that the suit must be taken as instituted on the day of the first presentation to the District Judge. The proper course in such a case is to send the case to the Court having jurisdiction. Azam Ali v. Akhtar Hussain, 18 P.W.R. 1916=33 Ind. Cas. 808.

Where it is essential to a proper decision of a point of limitation to determine whether the provisions of the Limitation Act of 1877 or of the Act of 1908 are applicable and the lower Court fails to determine this question the omission amounts to a material irregularity, and a revision is competent (a).

An application made after the 1st of January 1909 to set aside an ex parte decree passed before that date is governed by Art. 164 of the new Act and not by Art. 164 of the old Act. The law to be applied in a case of this kind is the law existing at the time when the application is made (b).

The period laid down in Art. 164 for an application to set aside an ex parte decree cannot be extended on the ground of minority under S. 6 of the new Limitation Act of 1908 which is limited to applications for the execution of a decree. Manohar Lal v. Mussammat Sadiqa Begam, 101 P.R. 1916.

Where the defendants were denying their liability to the plaintiff in respect of the latter's claim for damages for breach of a contract, but when a suit was threatened they agreed in writing to refer the dispute to arbitration and promised to pay whatever sum the arbitrators may find to be due.

Held, that such writing did not constitute an unconditional undertaking to pay the debt but was only a conditional acknowledgment of liability, and it was clear law that, where there was a promise to pay on a condition, that condition must be fulfilled in order that the promise may operate as an acknowledgment (a).

A mere reference to arbitration which prima facie is only a mode of settling disputes and not an admission of any liability does not import a subsisting jural relationship of debtor and creditor which must be admitted in order to operate as an acknowledgment.

The English Law is clear that a mere submission to arbitration containing a promise to pay what is found due is not available as an acknowledgment if the arbitration proves abortive unless the submission contains an unqualified acknowledgment of the debt, and there is nothing in S. 19 of the Limitation Act to suggest that the law in India is different.

A covenant not to raise the plea of limitation in case a suit has to be filed is invalid and inoperative since its effect is to defeat the provisions of the Limitation Act and as such falls within S. 23 of the Contract Act.

Parties to a contract may agree to postpone the accrual of any rights under it, but they cannot postpone the period of limitation, since under S. 9 of the Limitation Act it follows that, when once limitation begins to run, it cannot be stopped by any subsequent event.

There can be no estoppel from pleading the provisions of a statute (b). Bollapragada Ramamurthi v. Thimmanna Gopayya, 4 L.W. 48=20 M.L.T. 129=31 M.L.J. 231=35 Ind. Cas. 575.

In appeals, the period of limitation should be calculated from the date on which the decree was actually signed (a).

An applicant for a copy should deposit the required number of folio not later than the first day on which the office of the Court is open after that on which the number of folio was notified to him and in calculating the time required for obtaining a copy the applicant is not entitled to deduct the days during which the preparation of the copy was delayed by his own neglect to furnish the folio. ought not to vary with the dilatoriness of the applicant in supplying the required number of folios.

The fact that a guardian ad litem, is not formally appointed, but is allowed to represent minors in a suit is not fatal to the suit.

A party is not entitled to an allowance for the interval between the delivery of judgment and the signing of the decree under S. 12, Limitation Act, unless the delay in obtaining copies was due to decree not being prepared or signed (a).

If a party has not applied in time for copies of judgment and decrees, he will not be excused on the ground that the decree was not in existence at the date of his application, for the decree relates back to the date of judgment and he must make application for a copy of decrees in reference to that date; and if he does not do so, the delay is not due to time requisite for obtaining a copy (b).

But where the delay in the preparation of the decree was not an administrative delay due to the laches of the officers of the Court, but the Court by its own order directed that the decree should not be drawn up on the day that it gave judgment, but it postponed the drawing of the decree till certain payment is made, the judgment is a provisional judgment and does not become an operative judgment till the date when the preparation of the decree is ordered. In such a case this latter date is the date of the judgment as well as of the decree from which limitation runs (c). Khudadad wd. Mahomed v. Morlokhan, 9 S.L.R. 193=34 Ind. Cas. 867.

Where the sons (B and M) and grandsons by a predeceased son (C) of a deceased Hindu (G), being members of a joint Dayabhaga Hindu family, with a view to deceive the creditors of B and M, in 1891, executed a document whereby they purported to acknowledge that G's widow S was the real owner of properties which in fact they had inherited as G's heirs; and S having begun to deal with the properties adversely to the real owners from January 1892, C's branch of the family in 1896 sued for a declaration of their own title and the title of M's representatives (whom they joined as defendants) to shares in the properties, and the latter associated themselves with the plaintiffs and asked for an adjudication of their right to a one-third share, and a distinct issue in respect of their claim was without objection raised and decided and the Court made a decree on 20th April 1903 in favour of both the plaintiffs and M's representatives; but on appeal the decree so far as it was in favour of the latter was set aside on 22nd February 1904 on the ground that not being plaintiffs they could not be given any relief in that suit, and M's representatives thereupon on 14th November, 1904, instituted a fresh suit for their share.

Held—that though limitation began to run against them from 1892, it remained in suspense, whilst they were bona fide litigating their rights in the previous suit, and this suit was therefore not time-barred (a).

That in the previous suit the appeal Court should, in exercise of power possessed under the Civ. Pro. Code, have transferred M's representatives from the category of defendants to that of plaintiffs and maintained the decree passed in their favour by the Original Court.

(50) Ss. 14, 19—S. 14 when applies—Due diligence, what amounts to—Plea that money received had been more than repaid—Not an acknowledgment of subsisting liability within S. 19.

Under S. 14, Limitation Act, the person, who claims an exclusion of time during which a former proceeding was pending, must prove two things, first, that he had prosecuted the former proceeding with due diligence; and, secondly, that the former Court had been unable to entertain it from defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature (a).

So where each of two plaintiffs came into Court originally to sue separately in respect of a contract which gave them a joint but not a several right, and their error was pointed out to them and they were given every opportunity of rectifying it, and they elected, however, to proceed with their suits as then framed, and by the time that those suits were decided the period of limitation for a fresh suit had expired, held, it was impossible to hold in these circumstances that the plaintiffs exhibited that degree of diligence which alone could entitle them to claim the benefit of S. 14 of the Act.

Where a person admitted in a previous case that he had received Rs. 1,000 as earnest money but stated that the sum had been more than repaid by delivery of cotton to the value of Rs. 3,000, such a statement cannot be construed into an admission of a subsisting liability in respect of the Rs. 1,000 within the meaning of S. 19, Limitation Act (b). Kalu v. The plaintiffs brought this suit on the 2nd of September, 1909 in the Court of the Munsiff who had no jurisdiction to try the suit. On the 23rd of June, 1910, the Munsiff ordered the plaint to be returned for presentation in the proper Court and directed the plaintiffs to pay costs. The plaint was returned on the 27th of June, 1910, with the permission to re-file it in the proper Court within five days and an order fixing the amount of costs was recorded on the 30th June. The suit was re-filed on the 1st of July 1910:

Held, that the order allowing further time must be considered as a nullity.

Held also, that a plaintiff who files his suit on the very last date available to him under the Law of Limitation, takes the risk and the law does not make any provision for extension of time except in case coming under cl. 2 of S. 14 of the Limitation Act.

Held further, that the return of the plaint terminates the connection of the Court with the plaint which it cannot entertain, and though the costs were calculated later, the plaintiffs were not prosecuting the suit in the Court of the Munsiff after that Court had returned the plaint, and the explanation to S. 14 of the Limitation Act cannot be read as extending the time excluded, beyond the time when the plaintiff may be said to have been prosecuting their suit. *Ganga v. Where a simple mortgage document bears an endorsement of payment towards principal signed by the debtor but not in his writing, such payment is ineffectual to give a fresh period of limitation under S. 20 of the Limitation Act. But the endorsement operates as an acknowledgment of liability within the meaning of S. 19 of the Act, and a suit on the mortgage is not barred by limitation (a).

S. 20 of the Limitation Act does not prevent the operation of S. 19 and the two sections are not mutually exclusive. These sections cannot be treated as being one general and the other special.

Per Napier, J.—(1) S. 19 only operates against the person who makes the acknowledgment, but S. 20 makes the part-payment good in favour of any suit on that liability.

(2) An acknowledgment under S. 19 need not be addressed to the person entitled but a part-payment under S. 20 must be made only to the person entitled to payment.

An endorsement under S. 20 must be in the actual handwriting of the debtor to have the full effect of a part-payment.

To avoid the bar of limitation in a suit for the recovery of money due on a mortgage deed, a plaintiff must establish, not only that there was payment within 12 years prior to the date of the institution of the suit, but also that there was either an express intimation by the debtor, or proof of the existence of circumstances going to show, that the payment was on account of the interest on the particular debt sued on.

In the absence of express agreement, debiting to interest in the books of account cannot be regarded as payment of interest (a).

Payments made by the debtor in reduction of the general balance of account against him, but without intimating that any of such payments was to be appropriated in satisfaction of the interest due on his debt, do not amount to a payment of interest as such to save the bar of limitation (b). *Muln-ud-din v. A mortgage by conditional sale was made on February 25, 1806, for a period of six years. It was provided that if after six years, any thing remained due to the mortgagee, they might forthwith enter into possession of the mortgaged property and realize the principal and interest. It further provided that the property would not be transferred so long as any principal or interest remained due, and that, if it was transferred, or if the money due to the mortgagee was not paid, the latter, without waiting for the expiry of the six years, might bring a suit for recovery of the principal and interest and might also get possession "by completion of sale." Nothing was paid on foot of principal or interest on the mortgage. Proceedings under S. 8 of Reg. XVII of 1806 were not taken by the mortgagee. Part of the mortgaged property was transferred by the mortgagor in 1867. In the year 1910 the mortgagee instituted a suit for foreclosure:—

Held, that the suit was barred by limitation, the cause of action having accrued in 1867. Bansgopal v. Sheo Ram Singh, 14 A.L.J. 1 = 38 A. 97 = 32 Ind. Cas. 95.

mortgage—Article applicable—Transfer of Property Act, S. 66.

On the 26th October 1900 the 1st defendant, as the manager of an undivided family consisting of himself and defendants 2 to 9, hypothecated certain immovable properties among others with a cashuarina plantation thereon to the plaintiffs to secure the repayment of a loan advanced by them. In 1905 the trees having become fit for cutting, the 1st defendant sold them to the 12th and the 13th defendants who cut and carried them away. On 26th July 1909, the present suit was instituted against defendants 1 to 9 for enforcing the mortgage security and against defendants 12 and 13 for having, in concert with defendants 1 to 9, cut and removed all the trees and appropriated them to their own use with the knowledge of the mortgages in favour of the plaintiffs, and thereby having impaired the value of their mortgage security to the extent of Rs. 1,000.

Held that, so far as the defendants 12 and 13 were concerned, the action was one on tort, governed by Art. 36 or 49, Limitation Act, 1908, and not one to enforce the security under Art. 132 of the said Act, and that consequently the suit was barred by limitation.

According to Mahomedan Law, a brother is not a guardian of the property of his minor brothers and has no legal authority to alienate the property of the latter, and the latter are not bound to set aside the alienation within the shorter period prescribed by Art. 44.

Such an alienation may be treated as a nullity by the minor on attaining majority.

Art. 144, and not Art. 44, governs a suit for possession of the immoveable property alienated by a person who is neither a guardian by Mahomedan Law nor by appointment by Court.

Art. 91 is restricted to a suit between the parties to the instrument or their successors-in-interest, and a plaintiff is not bound to set aside an instrument not executed by himself or by his predecessor-in-title.

The situation of an unauthorised guardian is not bettered by describing him as a de facto guardian. Sajjad Ali v Muhammad Zulfikar Ali Khan, 83 P.R. 1916=125 P.W.R. 1916=33 Ind. Cas. 943.

On 19-5-1907, plaintiff respondent entrusted a jewel to K. who undertook to sell it on commission. K, instead of selling, pledged the jewel with the appellant, a money lender, on 20-5-1907. K died 2 months after without redeeming the pledge. On 15-12-1909 appellant took the jewel to plaintiff respondent and asked him to sell it for him. Respondent then came to know that the jewel had been improperly pledged, and on 29-6-1911 sued for the return of the jewel or its value. Held, that Art. 49, Limitation Act, applied to the case, and the suit having been brought within 3 years from 15-12-1909, when respondent learnt that the jewel was in the appellant's possession, was not barred (a).

Held—That Art. 145 of Sch. I of the Limitation Act applied to a suit for recovery of the gold deposited.

Art. 145 applies even when the property is not recoverable in specie and does not cease to be applicable merely because the defendant refuses to return the property. Such refusal does not bring into operation (Art. 48 or 49.)

Even if Art. 49 applied, limitation would begin running from 8th April 1914 before which there was no refusal.

(130) Arts. 57, 60 and 115—Suit for money of thavanai account—Custom of Natukottai Chetties—Fixing of rate of interest.

The relationship between the parties to a thavanai transaction is that of lender and borrower, that the loan is made for a fixed and certain period of two months at a rate of interest which is fixed weekly by members of the Chetty community for transactions which may be entered into during the ensuing week; the lender cannot demand re-payment before the end of two months for which he has lent the money; if he does not demand it at such time and the borrower does not elect to re-pay it then, the loan is taken to be extended for another full two months at the rate of interest fixed by the weekly meeting of the community for the then period, and so on until the money is re-paid.

Art. 60 of the Limitation Act does not apply to a suit for money lent on thavanai account, because the money is not payable on demand according to legal meaning of the terms. Art. 57 of the Act governs the suit and not the residuary—Art. 115. The period of limitation commences from the time when the money was lent. Annamal Chetty v. M.L.R.M. Lutchman Chetty, 36 Ind. Held that:

(1) An account is said to be stated only when there have been cross demands between the parties and the balance struck then becomes the consideration for the discharge on either side. Such an account stated amounts to a new contract and is a substantive cause of action (a).

Plaintiff advanced loans to defendant from time to time, and in re-payment defendant occasionally passed grain to plaintiff, which the latter sold and credited to the former's account. After some months the accounts were examined and a balance struck in plaintiff's favour. Subsequently defendant borrowed more money from plaintiff and overpaid him in this latter account. Plaintiff, after giving credit in the previous account of this overpayment in the subsequent open account, claimed the balance under the former account availing an oral agreement for re-payment of balance with interest:

(2) Held, that plaintiff's suit was on a closed account and not on an open account and that

(142) Sch. I, Art. 62, 116—Mortgage—Mortgagor receiving rents—Suit by mortgagee for amounts improperly collected by mortgagor—Breach of contract—Period of limitation—Practice—Proper method of framing plaint.

R the defendant mortgaged certain property on 12th September 1898 to H the plaintiff. The property consisted of certain occupancy holdings. As H lived at some distance, the rents were collected for him by an uncle who died in 1906. After 1906, R collected rents and became possessed of the property. In 1913, H sued for recovery of possession of the holdings and of rents collected by R during the last three years immediately preceding the suit. The claim for rent was contested on the ground that the rents have been received for more than six years.

Held that the claim for rent was governed by Art. 62 of the Limitation Act, 1908 and that it was not barred because each time the defendant received rent, he committed a breach of contract (a).

The plaintiff might have claimed in several distinct causes of action although combined in one suit all the rents received within six years of the suit on the ground that each receipt was a separate breach of the mortgage contract or money received to his use.

A practice seems to have grown up of framing claims of this nature as claims for general damages for the original breach of the contract by dispossession. This form of claim is attended with serious risks to the litigant. In future, pleaders would be well advised to frame their claims for what they are in substance, namely, money wrongfully received from time to time as defined by Art. 62 of the Limitation Act or as successive breaches under Art. 116. Harpal v. Ram Sarup, 34 Ind. Cas. 173.

to proper Court—No representation—Subsequent suit, if barred—Non-presentation, effect of.

Art. 62 of the Limitation Act only applies to cases where a definite sum of money has been received by the defendant, which the law says he must hold for the use of the plaintiff. That article does not apply to cases where it is sought to recover from the defendant moneys which he ought to have received but which he failed to receive.

A suit against the defendant who had been appointed by the Government as a manager of a Jaghir, asking him to account for moneys which he received as such Manager, to the plaintiff, who is entitled to a particular share therein, is purely a suit for accounts and is governed by Art. 120 of the Limitation Act. Art. 62 does not apply to such a case as the defendant is entitled to receive the money and is bound to pay over what is due to the plaintiff only after the deduction of the legitimate expenses and outgoings, and it cannot be said (and this is the conclusive test) that the money which may be found due to the plaintiff was received by the defendant at any particular point of time that is put down in Art. 62 as the starting point of limitation (a).

O. II, r. 2, Civ. Pro. Code, is no bar to a subsequent suit if the plaint in the former suit had been returned for presentation to the proper Court and was not represented. In such a case the prior suit, having been practically withdrawn, must be treated as not having been filed at all. Subba Row v. Rama Row, 3 L. Where an application for substitution was made more than six months after the appellant's death before the Registrar, and the respondents did not put in any objection before the Registrar to the hearing of the appeal, the application for substitution was treated as an application for the restoration of the appeal after abatement.

The plaintiff, a purchaser at auction-sale of a revenue-paying estate, made default in the payment of Government revenue and the estate was sold and the surplus sale-proceeds were withdrawn by the defendants, the original proprietors, whose names still remained in the register, and a suit was instituted by the plaintiff, for the recovery of the money so withdrawn, more than three years after the date of withdrawal.

Held—that Art. 62 of the Limitation Act applied and the suit was barred by limitation (a).

Money paid to one party with the implied intention that it should finally reach the hands of the party to whom it actually belongs, is money, within the meaning of Art. 62, paid to that party for the use of the actual person in whom the right to receive vests.

(147) Sch. I, Arts. 66, 67, 80—Unregistered bonds, how governed—Bond providing for repayment on happening of certain contingency, suit on—Starting point of limitation.

Art. 67 of the Limitation Act has to be read with Art. 66 and both these Articles apply to unregistered bonds. Neither of these can properly be applied to a bond which, though it does not specify a particular day for payment, yet in effect lays down that the money due on the bond is payable on a future date upon a certain contingency happening.

Where, therefore, a bond provided that the money due upon it would be paid at the time of payment of a certain sum of money due on two mortgage-deeds executed previously:

Held, that since, according to the true construction of the bond, the money due on it could not be demanded by the plaintiff before the money due on the mortgage-deeds was paid to him, the starting point for limitation was the date of such payment and that Art. 80, Limitation Act, governed the case. *Kirpa Ram v. A mortgage-bond dated 1st November 1898 provided for the payment of the principal on 1st November 1899 and for annual payment of interest at 6½ per cent. per annum. There was a further stipulation, "If I, without paying the interest on the due date and also the principal and interest on the respective due dates according to the aforesaid conditions, allow the same to fall into arrears, I shall pay the principal sum together with interest at 12 per cent. from date of default till the date of payment without raising the plea of future instalment on the liability of the mortgage property." Interest was not paid as provided for. In a suit by the mortgagee in 1911, the defendant pleaded limitation on the ground that the cause of action arose on the date of the first default.

Held, (1) that the above clause reserved an option to the mortgagee to anticipate the due date;

(2) that the right to sue did not accrue until the expiry of the date provided for the payment of the principal (a);

(3) that the mortgagee was not bound to take advantage of the default clause (b);

A suit to recover the whole amount of an instalment mortgage bond under a clause which provides that in default of payment of an instalment all the instalments would become due, is governed by Art. 132, sch. I of the Limitation Act, and would be barred if it has been instituted more than 12 years from the date of default, notwithstanding that the plaintiff has received a part of the over-due instalment, for acceptance of a part of an over-due instalment is not a waiver, and would consequently be inoperative to save the bar of limitation even if the principle indicated in the third column of Art. 75 should be adopted in determining "when the money sued for becomes due" within the meaning of Art. 132. Reyazaddin v. (165) Sch. I, Art. 93—"Attempt to enforce a forged instrument", meaning of—Application for succession certificate as heir—Right as legatee not set up—Genuineness of will not gone into—Registration.

A widow applied under the Succession Certificate Act for a certificate to enable her to collect the debts owing to her deceased husband and in her petition she stated that her husband left no heirs nearer than herself and she based her right to collect the debts expressly on the ground that she being her husband's widow, she was entitled as such to the certificate under the Hindu law. In the petition she made mention of a will and stated that under it she was the legatee of her deceased husband. But nowhere did she base her right to collect the debts upon her position as legatee. The judge declined to go into the question of the genuineness of the will in the proceedings and gave the certificate on the ground that under the Hindu Law she would be entitled to collect the debts. Some time after, she made a further application to have the will registered and after contest and difficulty, the will was registered. In a suit by the reversioners of the husband to declare that the will was a forgery.

Held that the mention of the will in a superfluous paragraph in the certificate proceedings was not an attempt to enforce the will within the meaning of Art. 93 of the Limitation Act (a)

An attempt to register a document cannot be treated as an attempt to enforce it against other person's rights (b). Yudathu Kamalanabhan v. Yudathu Sattiraju, 32 Ind. Cas. 99.

(168) Sch. I, Arts. 95, 96, 116—Mortgage with possession—Suit for refund of money advanced by mortgagee—Fraud.

The plaintiff sued for recovery of money which he had advanced to the defendant together with damages alleging that the registered mortgage-deed which the defendant executed in his favour stipulating delivery of possession of land mortgaged to him, cannot be enforced as he has discovered that the land is already mortgaged with possession to another person. He stated that the defendant had practised fraud on him.

Held, that Art. 116 of the Limitation Act was applicable to the case and neither Art. 95 nor Art. 96 governed the suit. The plaintiff's allegation as to fraud did not affect the article that applied to the claim. Bishen Singh v. Dadna, 106 P.B.R. 1916 = 130 P.W.R. 1916 = 36 Ind. Cas. 262.

In January 1912, the plaintiff sued to recover the consideration money from defendant No. 1. The lower Courts decreed the suit holding that the suit was in time under Art. 97 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908:—

Held, that, even applying Art. 97 of the case, the suit was time-barred, for, the moment there was a conveyance to V whatever possession the plaintiff was allowed to retain must have been on sufferance and by the grace of V, and defendant No. 1 could have had nothing to do with it. Gulabchand v. Defendant bought an undivided moiety of a house from father of plaintiffs and also executed a lease to him in respect of the other moiety for 3 years. After expiry of the lease, defendant was in possession of the whole house without executing any fresh lease to plaintiffs or paying them rent. Plaintiffs sued for possession of their half of the house after partition and for arrears of rent for 6 years. Held, Art. 120, Limitation Act, applied, as the possession of the defendant after the expiry of the lease might reasonably be referred to his rights as co-owner (a).

Arts. 110 and 115, Limitation Act, presuppose the existence of a contract, express or implied. These two articles would not apply to the circumstances of this case, as the defendant cannot be regarded as a tenant holding over, nor was there any relationship of landlord and tenant subsisting between the parties subsequent to the expiry of the lease.

Where properties were purchased in the name of B for the benefit of A and the profits of the properties were also credited to A in his account books though deducted as payments to B towards amounts due by A to B and subsequently A and B entered into an agreement whereby B was to convey the properties to A on the payment of a certain sum which was already due by A to B and A's heir instituted a suit for recovery of possession of properties on payment if necessary of such sum as may be found due and for the execution of a conveyance.

Held (1) that A was the real or beneficial owner and B had only the legal estate in him;

(2) that such an agreement was not a contract of sale;

(3) that the suit was in effect and substance not one for specific performance but one for recovery of possession;

(4) that the execution of a conveyance was not an essential or necessary relief and Art. 113 of the Limitation Act was therefore no bar to the suit.

owner, the burden of proving that that third person had actual or constructive notice of the real title is on the person who so allowed the other to hold himself out as the real owner (a).

The facts that the person so held out was more than a mere benamidar and had a lien on the property for payments made by him do not make any difference in the principle of law above enunciated.

The fact that the person so held out has an interest of his own in the property is no intimation to a purchaser of the right of the real owner.

The proposition that the defence of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice is a single defence and cannot be split up has reference more to the form of pleadings and cannot be treated as decisive of the question of onus in all cases in which such a defence is pleaded (b). Rajah of Karvetnagar v. (187) Arts. 114, 132—Vendor and vendee—Lien—Sale of mortgaged property—Agreement that vendee should redeem mortgage with purchase-money—Suit by vendor to recover the money—Limitation.

Where by the terms of sale of a mortgaged property the vendee is to retain part of the price and apply it in redeeming the mortgage, the vendor has no lien over the property for the money left with the vendee, and a suit to recover it from the vendee is therefore not governed by Art. 132 of the Limitation Act, but by Art. 111 (a).

Though a mere recital by the vendor in the sale-deed to the effect that he has received full payment of the purchase-money does not necessarily amount to evidence of a contract which is inconsistent with the existence of the statutory lien for unpaid purchase-money, the lien cannot be treated as existing in respect of any money which is not purchase-money in the proper sense of the term (b). Mukta Pershad v. It turned out that the vendor had no right to sell the lands and the vendee lost them at the suit of a third party. In a suit then brought by the vendee against the vendor on the covenant for damages for breach of the contract.

Held that the suit was governed by Art. 116, Sch. I of the Limitation Act and limitation ran from the date when the lands were lost to the vendee as the result of the suit, and not from the date of the execution of the sale-deed.

A party to a deed who has executed it with knowledge of its contents and with appreciation of the effect it was intended to produce, cannot be exempted from liability under it on the ground that she is a pardanashin woman.

Where the execution of a sale deed is proved but one of the executants says that he has not received any portion of the price, the onus lies upon him to prove the plea, and he would not be exempted from liability under the deed by the mere fact that the consideration is stated in the deed to have been paid to another of the executants. Musst. O, the predecessor-in-title of the plaintiffs executed a zur-i-peshgi lease in favour of T, the defendant. By the terms of the lease, T was to pay the rent payable to the superior landlord for the property and to apply the balance of rent which was fixed at Rs. 221 in liquidation of the mortgage debt. On the expiry of the period of the lease, there was to be a mutual adjustment of accounts and it was agreed that the mortgagor would pay any amount which might be due to the mortgagee and that the property would remain liable for such amount after the expiry of the lease. The lessee failed to pay the rent to the superior landlord, the latter obtained a decree for rent against the mortgagor and in execution of that decree the property was sold on the 23rd November 1904. The ejara expired on the 13th April 1905, and on the 11th April 1908, the plaintiffs brought a suit for adjustment of accounts against the defendant and the suit was decreed in part. The present suit was instituted on the 11th April 1911 in which the plaintiffs claimed damages in respect of the loss occasioned by the sale of the property in consequence of the non-payment of rent by the defendant.

Held that the suit was barred by limitation.

A suit for compensation for breach of a contract in writing registered is to be brought within six years from the date on which the contract is broken. The contract to pay the head-rent must be taken to have been broken on the date of the sale, if not earlier.

Held also, that, even if the suit be treated as one founded on mortgage, it is barred by O. II, r. 2 (2), Civ. Pro. Code, the present claim not having been included in the previous suit for adjustment of accounts.

A mere statement in the plaint of a previous suit that the plaintiff reserved the right of bringing the present suit for damages cannot prevent the suit, from being barred by the provisions of O. II, r. 2 (2), Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, or from being barred by limitation. Taran Krishna Bhowmik v. Munshi Samiruddin, 34 Ind. Cas. 51.

(197) Arts. 118, 120 and 125—Alienation by Hindu widow and her adopted son—Suit by reversioner to set aside alienation after bar of remedy re: adoption—Specific Relief Act, S. 42.

Per Wallis, C.J.—Where a reversioner neglects to sue for a declaration that an adoption or alienation made by a widow is invalid and not binding on him within the time allowed by law, he does not thereby lose his right to question the adoption or alienation on the death of the widow of the last male owner by instituting a suit for possession to dispute the alienation or adoption on such evidence as may then be available. If, however, the reversioner allows the right to sue for a declaration of the invalidity of an adoption during the lifetime of the widow to become barred by limitation under Art. 116 of the Limitation Act, he cannot be permitted to sue for a declaration that an alienation made by the adopted son is invalid and not binding on him, on the ground that the alienation by the alleged adopted son gives him a fresh cause of action against him and the alienee. As regards the adopted son, the alienation does not involve any further denial of the reversioner's legal character or right of property than was involved in setting up the adoption in the first place, which became barred. The starting point of limitation in a declaratory suit of this nature is not the time when the person claiming to be adopted son takes some steps in that character.

Though it may be said that the action of the alienee in taking the property from the alleged adopted son involves a denial of the next reversioner's title and gives rise to a fresh cause of action, at any rate as against him, the remedy provided by S. 42, Specific Relief Act, being discretionary, the Court would refuse to make a declaration against or in favour of the alienee alone after the right for a declaration in respect of the adoption has become barred by limitation.

Per Coutts Trotter, J.—It is competent to a reversioner to sue for a declaration that an alienation made by the widow and an alleged adopted son is not binding on the widow's life interest, although the right to declare the adoption invalid might have become barred by limitation. A reversioner ought to be entitled to keep quiescent until there is a definite and material invasion of his reversionary rights. A reversioner is not bound to enter into litigation in consequence of an adoption which may do him no harm, under pain of finding himself time barred when a definite act of waste is committed against the estate. The reversioner has one remedy while the adoption is a mere possibility of danger to him, and a fresh and separate remedy when the danger actually takes concrete form and the widow seeks to use the adoption as means to alienate the estate. Kodali Bapayya v. Art. 120, Limitation Act, is applicable to suits for declaratory reliefs, but not for declaratory reliefs with prayer for confirmation of possession and for injunction.

A prayer for injunction is a prayer for consequential relief quite as much as a prayer for confirmation of possession (a).

Entries in a record of rights adversely to a plaintiff do not affect his possession, though they may be used in evidence against him in a suit for declaration of title. Time does not begin to run against him till an actual claim is made on the strength of the entry in the record of rights (b). Dina Nath v. Rama Nath, 23 C. L.J. 561 = 34 Ind. Cas. 702.

A hypothecation decree is moveable property and the mortgage thereof is one of moveable property which is governed by Art. 120, Sch. I to the Limitation Act. But where the moveable property has become converted into immovable property, the mortgage becomes entitled to the substituted security and also to the larger period of limitation prescribed by Art. 132 of the Limitation Act.

It does not necessarily follow that because a person in the position of a mortgagee purchases a portion of the mortgaged property the mortgage thereby becomes pro tanto extinguished. Every thing depends upon the terms of the sale, and unless it is stipulated that the mortgage is to be extinguished or unless there are circumstances from which an intention to extinguish the mortgage in whole or part may be inferred, it cannot be held that the mortgage merges in the purchase. *Jamna Dei v. L came of age in 1895, and the present suit for possession of the property and cancellation of the sale-deed was brought more than twelve years after 1898 by L and his sons. The sons of L were born after 1898:—

Held that the suit was barred inasmuch as L could have brought the suit in 1898, and not having done so his right to the property became extinct and it became the property of the purchasers and ceased to be joint family property, and his sons born subsequently to 1898 were not entitled to question the sale. Lachmi Narain Prasad v. One V sued to recover Rs. 2,000 as due on a mortgage of two absolute occupancy fields mortgaged to him by the tenant G on 5—4—1885. Defendants were the legal representatives of one L to whom G's entire holding consisting of 5 fields in all was mortgaged in 1894. L foreclosed and obtained possession on 14—3—1895. The malguzar purchased the holding under S. 38 (5), C.P. Tenancy Act (1883) for Rs. 1,600 as fixed by a Revenue Officer and paid to L in Court on 16—6—1902.

Held, there was no new cause of action and the burden of the mortgage was merely transferred from the holding to the purchase money. Art. 132, Limitation Act (1908), (and not Art. 62 or 120) applied to the case and the claim was not barred (a).

Held also, that it was not the practice to construe Mofussil pleadings strictly (b).

A suit by a decree-holder purchaser for possession of properties purchased is governed by Art. 138, Sch. I of the Limitation Act.

The plaintiff is entitled to apply the law to the fact established at the trial even though he had failed to prove what he came to prove.

Where a decree-holder purchaser sued for possession of lands purchased on the basis of his prior possession and dispossession by defendants and fails to prove that he ever obtained possession of the lands, he is nevertheless entitled to succeed if he can show that his claim is not barred by limitation under Art. 138 of the Limitation Act. The rule of estoppel by reason of inconsistent positions does not apply to such a case.

In such a case the person in possession can set up the fraudulent nature of the decree in answer to the decree-holder purchaser's suit for possession.

A plea of limitation can be raised at any stage of a case. Bankay Behary Lal v. Bhagwan Das Marwarl, 34 Ind. Cas. 897.

Held, the lease was not determined by the redemption of the lessor's mortgage. Plaintiff sued to recover possession from the defendants who were alleged to be his tenants. It was admitted in the plaint that the defendants had for many years not paid any rent to him. The defendants denied their liability to pay rent. It appeared that in certain settlement proceedings which took place more than 12 years before the present suit a contest arose between the plaintiff on the one side and the defendants on the other side, the defendants contending that they were exempted altogether from the liability to pay rent as they held the lands on a brahmottar grant. The Settlement Officer came to the conclusion that rent was not being paid and therefore the Record of Rights was published to the effect that the defendants held a jote for which rent was not being paid. Held that, as the defendants had set up a claim more than 12 years before the present suit that they were not liable to pay rent on any ground and as no suit was brought within 12 years from the date of the denial of the plaintiff's title the present suit was barred by limitation. Gour Chandra Chakraborty v. The plaintiff sued in 1911 as a reversioner to recover possession of property alienated by a Hindu widow. The widow had disappeared in 1865 and was not heard of since 1870. The Court of First Instance decided in plaintiff's favour and held on the point of limitation that, under S. 108, Evidence Act, the Court should presume that the widow died at the time of the suit and that therefore the suit was in time. This decision was reversed and the suit was dismissed by the lower appellate Court on the ground that the presumption of the widow's death at the time of the suit would not be drawn, and that the onus probandi lay heavily on the plaintiff to show when the widow died, and that consequently the suit was not shown to be within time. The plaintiff having appealed:—

Held, that it lay on the plaintiff to show affirmatively that he had brought his suit within twelve years from the actual death of the widow (a).

Art. 141 of the Limitation Act is merely an extension of Art. 140, with special reference to persons succeeding to an estate as reversioners upon the cessation of the peculiar estate of a Hindu widow. But the plaintiff's case under each article rests upon the same principle. The doctrine of non-adverse possession does not obtain in regard to such suits, and the plaintiff suing in ejectment must prove, whether it be that he sues as a remainderman in the English sense or as a reversioner in the Hindu sense, that he sues within twelve years of the estate falling into possession, and that onus is in no way removed by any presumption which can be drawn according to the terms of S. 108, Evidence Act. Jayawant Jivanrao Deshpande v. (1) to (10) of S. 22 of Act I of 1869.*

The estate of the Hindu or Mahomedan female referred to in Art. 141 of the Second Schedule of Act IX of 1908 need not be an estate created in the same way as the particular estate upon which the estate in remainder or reversion contemplated by Art. 140 leans, that is to say by grant or devise, nor need it necessarily be an estate characterised by the same incidents which attach to such a particular estate.

Limited estates of the type of the estate taken by a Hindu female in property inherited from a male are not life estates in the sense in which that term is understood in English law, but they present certain points of resemblance to them which have led the Legislature to assimilate them for the purposes of limitation to life estates in the strict sense of the term.

When successive trespassers have been in possession of an estate adversely to the claimant, the subsequent trespasser, if his title was not quite independent of the previous trespasser, can, in pleading limitation as a bar, tack the period during which the previous trespasser has remained in possession on to the period during which the estate was held by the subsequent trespasser himself.

In ascertaining the single heir to the estate of an Oudh Taluqdar, whose name was entered in List 2, the case being one to which the special provisions of cls. (1) to (10) of S. 22 of Act I of 1869 do not apply, the limitations in the sanad granted to the Taluqdar cannot be appealed to as all such limitations had been wholly superseded by the Act.

The rule of primogeniture does not regulate the succession to a separate property as between collaterals who have not been co-parceners with the propertus in a joint family governed by Mitakshara law—all the more so when the property in dispute has not been the property of a joint family since its grant by the British Government made after the annexation, even if it be presumed to have been such property before it. *Ghisa Singh Thakur v. The territory of the Crown does not cease at low water mark and its right over what extends seawards beyond that is not merely of the nature of jurisdiction or the like. The law in this respect is the same in India as in the United Kingdom. The Crown is the owner, and owner in property, of islands arising in the sea within the territorial limits of Indian Empire.

Where Government seeking to constitute into a reserved forest certain islands which had formed in the bed of the sea near the mouth of the river Godavari within much under three miles of the mainland, was opposed by certain persons who preferred claims before the Forest Officer under the Madras Forest Act, and the Forest Officer having rejected them, they appealed to the District Court as provided by the Statute:

Held—That the decision of the District Court in such cases was not final.

When proceedings of this character reach the District Court, that Court is appealed to as one of the ordinary Courts of the country, with regard to whose procedure, orders and decrees, the ordinary rules of the Civ. Pro. Code apply; and when an ordinary Court of the country is seized of a dispute relating to a legal right to possession of, and property in, land, it would require a specific limitation to exclude the ordinary incidents of litigation (a).

Nothing is better settled than that the onus of establishing property by reason of possession for a certain requisite period lies upon the person asserting such possession; and it would be contrary to all legal principles to permit a squatter to put the owner to a negative proof that the possession of the squatter was not long enough to fulfil all legal conditions.

The position of the objectors to afforestation in this case was in law the same as that of persons bringing a suit in an ordinary Court of Justice for a declaration of right by adverse possession, with this difference only that the period of 12 years provided by Art. 144 is extended by Art. 149 to 60 years (b).

The statement of law by the High Court that "It rested upon the Crown to prove that it had a subsisting title by showing that the claimant's possession commenced or became adverse within sixty years" was erroneous on the above view of the onus and also because the fact that islands formed in the sea belonged to the Crown was fundamental, and until adverse possession against the Crown was complete that fact formed "subsisting title" and it was not incumbent on the Crown to fortify that fundamental position by any enquiry into possession or the acceptance of any onus on the subject. The Secretary of State v. An application for a final decree for foreclosure or sale is an application under the Code of Civil Procedure, for it is made under O. XXXIV, r. 3 or r. 5 which expressly requires an application.

An application for such a final decree presented after the passing of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and of the Limitation Act, 1908, is governed by Art. 181 of the present Limitation Act (a).

(284) Art. 182—Decree—Appeal against one portion or by one defendant, if saves limitation as regards the other portion or against other defendants—Rule, if different when the decree of First Court consists of two independent decrees—Limitation periods to be laid down with clearness and certainty—Subtle distinctions not to be introduced, if not warranted by language—Final decrees, if two, can exist—Imperilling decree, theory of, limitation, if can be made to depend on.

All periods of limitation being more or less arbitrary, it is of the highest importance that they should be laid down with clearness and certainty. Subtle distinctions, not warranted by the language of the Legislature, should not be introduced by the Courts.

In a suit for recovery of money from two persons, there cannot be two final decrees, one by the Court of First Instance and the other by the Court of Appeal.

The question of limitation ought not to be made to depend upon the difficult and doubtful point whether an appeal by one of the defendants or as regards a part of the decree of the First Court imperils the decree passed against the other defendants or the other portion of the decrees.

Quare.—Whether, when the decrees of the First Court itself consists of two definitely independent decrees, an appeal against one of such decrees saves limitation as regards the other decree? (a).

When the transferee of a decree has not been recognized by the Court, the decree-holder on record is entitled to execute the decree in spite of the transfer (b). Art Chetty v. Theerthamalai Chetty, 3 L.W. 521=34 Ind. Cas. 791.

A mortgage decree was passed on 6th July 1901. The first application for execution was made on 6th July 1904, but this did not contain a prayer for making the decree absolute. The next two applications were made on 22-3-1907 and 23-9-1909 and these contained a prayer for a decree absolute. The next application was on 5-7-1910, but this contained only a prayer for sale. Every one of the above applications was returned for amendment and not represented. The last application was made on 5th July 1913 and this too did not contain a prayer for making the decree absolute.

Held that a prayer for sale implied also a prayer for making the decree absolute and that the application was not barred by limitation. Natesa Udayan v. Annasami Udayan, 3 L. W. 468 = 34 Ind. Cas. 756.

Plaintiff presented his first application for execution on 27th April, 1907. Certain properties were attached in pursuance of that application which were claimed by one N as his own but his claim was rejected.

N then brought a suit to establish his right to the property which was decreed by the first Court but was dismissed on appeal on 11th August, 1911. Meanwhile, the first application for execution had been dismissed for non-payment of batta by the plaintiff. He then brought his second execution application on 22nd October, 1912.

Held, that the first execution petition having been dismissed for the plaintiff's own default in paying batta and that dismissal having had nothing to do with the claim or suit brought by N, the second application could not be treated as a continuation or a revival of the first application, and that the second application being made after more than three years from the date of the first one was barred by limitation. Yellampalle Venkatappa v. Held that it cannot be said that the action of the decree-holder was not bona fide.

The plaintiff obtained a decree in O. S. No. 11 of 1903 on the file of the District Court of Vizagapatam. The decree was transferred to the District Munsif's Court of Parvatipur for execution on the 3rd of October 1904. The decree holder got certain immovable properties attached, but the petition was dismissed on the 10th of March 1905, and no further steps were taken in the District Munsif's Court. On the 13th December 1907 when the copy of the decree was not returned by the District Munsif of Parvatipur, the decree-holder applied to the District Court of Vizagapatam for the sale of property attached by the District Munsif and for notice to the judgment debtor. The application was returned for amendment of certain defects, and it was again presented to the District Court without having been amended and was recorded by the Court without any further action being taken thereon. On the 27th of April 1910, the decree-holder made the present application to the District Court for notice and for realisation of the amount by sale of the properties already attached by the District Munsif of Parvatipur. The District Munsif returned the copy of the decree sent to him for execution with a certificate of non-satisfaction only on 3rd August 1910.

Held that, having regard particularly to Ss. 223, 224, 228 and 230, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, the petition of the 13th December 1907 which was presented to the District Court was not made to the proper Court, and that the proper Court to which the application should have been made was the Court of District Munsif of Parvatipur, as that was the Court whose duty it then was to execute the decree so far as it could be executed by that Court.

Held also that, consequently the petition dated the 27th April 1910 was, when made, time-barred under Art. 182 of the first schedule of Indian Limitation Act, as no application had been made within three years in accordance with law to the proper Court for execution or to take some step-in-aid of execution. Held further that the application of 27th April 1910 was not made to the proper Court. Maharaja of Bobbili v. An Application by the decree-holder certifying payment of a portion of the decretal amount of Court is a step-in-aid of execution of the decree within the meaning of Art. 182 (5) of the Limitation Act, provided the payment asserted has actually been made. The fact that there is in the application a prayer that the execution case might be struck off after satisfaction does not take it out of the operation of the above rule.

Where an application for execution filed within time, which had been returned for amendment of certain formal defects, was re-filed after the period of limitation had expired and after the time allowed by the Court for the purpose, with an application explaining the delay and the petition was accepted.

(297) Art. 182 (5)—Mortgage-decree—Execution application by widow—Subsequent application by adopted son—Widow disputing adoption—Widow's application, if enures for benefit of adopted son.

An application for the execution of a decree by the widow of a deceased decree-holder will not enure to the benefit of the adopted son, when the widow claims hostilely against the adopted son.

The widow cannot be treated as the representative of the adopted son to the prejudice of the judgment-debtor. Saminatha Asari v. G. Gopalakrishna Aiyangar, 4 L.W. 291.

(299) Art. 182, Cls. (5) and (6)—Suit for arrears of rent in respect of separate tenancies—Passing of single decree—Execution application in respect of one tenancy—Saving of limitation.

Plaintiffs instituted a suit for rent against defendants who hold under them three distinct tenancies under three separate contracts.

The plaintiffs obtained a decree which specified different sums as being realisable from the different tenures. The decree-holder applied for execution of the decree so far as it related to one of the tenures. The question was whether this application saved the decree from limitation in respect of the realisation of the other sums mentioned in the decree, which were directed to be realised from the other tenures. Held that the decree having recognised the plaintiff's right to bring to sale distinct tenures for the realisation of the arrears leviable respectively therefrom, the position of the plaintiffs was as if he had brought three distinct suits for rent against the defendants, one in respect of each tenancy. The single decree passed must be construed as three distinct decrees made for the benefit of the plaintiffs and the rule of limitation applicable would be the same as if three separate decrees had been passed. Therefore the prior application in respect of the sum decreed so far as one of the tenancies was concerned cannot operate to save limitation for the sums due under the other tenancies. Dhirendra Nath Sarkar v. (301) Art. 183—Application to enforce Privy Council order—Revivor, meaning of.

On 22nd January 1915 an application for execution of an Order of Her late Majesty in Council dated the 28th November 1899 was made to a Subordinate Judge to whom the execution proceedings were transferred:

Held, that the application was governed by Art. 183 of the 1st Schedule of the Limitation Act, 1908, according to which an application to enforce an Order of the Sovereign in Council must be made within 12 years from the date on which a present right to enforce the order accrued to some person capable of releasing the right, provided inter alia that, where the order has been revived, 12 years shall be computed from the date of such revivor.

Where, on an application for execution, notice is issued under S. 216 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, or S. 248 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and the Court has decided that the decree is still capable of execution and makes an order for execution, there has been a revivor within the meaning of the article.

Where an Order in Council is transmitted to a Subordinate Court for execution without any notice being given to the judgment-debtors, it would not be a revivor of the order. Tribikram Deo Narayan Singh v. Badri Misser, 20 C.W. N. 1051=1 Pat. L.J. 385=36 Ind. Cas. 633.

(304) Sch. I, Arts. 183 and 182 (5) and (6)—“Revivor,” meaning of—It covers every one of the matters in Art. 182, cls. (5) and (6)—Application for transmission of decree and order permitting same, if revivor—Issue of notice under S. 248, Civ. Pro. Code (1882), if proper—Application for execution if to follow or precede transmission and to be made to which Court—Question whether decree capable of execution if may be determined on application for transmission—Order, if quasi-judicial and may be delegated to Registrar—Civ. Pro. Code (1882), S. 637.

The word “revivor” in Art. 183 to Sch. I of the Limitation Act does not mean the same thing as one or more of the matters which are mentioned in Art. 182, cls. (5) and (6) to Sch. I of the Act.

To constitute a “revivor” of a decree within the meaning of Art. 183 of Limitation Act, there must be expressly or by implication a determination that the decree is still capable of execution and the decree-holder is entitled to enforce it; and such determination must be by a Court or person duly qualified to make it.

An application for transmission of a decree is not an application for execution.

No notice under S. 248 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1882 can be properly issued upon such an application. The notice required by that section must, when the decree has been transmitted, be issued by the Court to which the decree has been sent for execution and which is the Court to decide whether the application is capable of execution.

R. 370 of Mr. Belchamber's Rules of the Original Side was not consistent with the Code of 1882.

Where, on an application being made for the transmission of a decree of the Original Side of the High Court, the Registrar issued notice under S. 248, Civ. Pro. Code, on the judgment-debtor to show cause why the decree should not be executed against him and, the judgment-debtor not appearing, ordered execution to issue as prayed.

Held—That the application and the order did not operate as a revivor of the decree.

That, looking into the substance of the matter, there was no determination that the decree was capable of execution.

That to determine whether the decree was or was not capable of execution was a judicial act which could not be delegated to the Registrar under S. 637 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1882.

For Mookerjee, J.—S. 230 of the Code makes it plain that the application for execution must be presented to the Court to which the decree has been transmitted for execution. Chatterpat Singh v. Rai Bahadur Salta Soomarmull, 20 C.W.N. 899=23 C.L.J. 645=43 C. 903 (F.B.)=36 Ind. Cas. 602.

Lis Pendens.

- (1) Mortgage suit and lease by mortgagor after decree, but before sale—Auction-purchaser not affected by lease or by payments by lessee—Proceeding, where ceases to be contentious.

Lis pendens continues in a mortgage suit up to the time of actual sale of the property and hence the lease by the mortgagor after decree but before sale does not bind the auction-purchaser.

The view of the Bombay High Court that the lis pendens depends upon the active prosecution of applications for enforcing the decree not approved.

A person who obtains a lease when a lis subsists takes considerable risks and any payments made by him to the judgment-debtor do not bind the purchaser.

For Bakewell, J.—The contentious proceeding terminated with the decree and therefore the lease does not fall within S. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act. Ramaswami Aiyangar v. Govinda Iyer, 20 M.L.T. 512=5 L.W. 443=31 M.L.J. 839.

Mafidar.

(1) Mafidar—Owner in cultivating possession of land—Right of former to recover share of produce—Whether exists.

A mafidar brought a suit against the recorded proprietor who is in cultivating possession for the value of one-half share of produce claimed for kharif 1912. The muafi was granted about 1828 A.D. by the Maharajah Ranjit Singh to one B 'ba sgha dharmath sur ba ivaz puja path.' On enquiry after annexation in 1849, the mafidar was found in possession and the grant was accordingly confirmed for life. On his death, it was resumed by order dated 12-6-1862 but was again released by order dated 8-6-1863 in favour of his son, the present plaintiff. The grant appears to have been continuously enjoyed up to the present. The Courts below decreed revenue only.

Held that it is quite possible that a proprietor should hold land and pay rent as a tenant-at-will under his own occupancy tenant or under his own mortgagee who would then be in the possession of a landlord.

No assignee of land revenue as such is entitled to a share of the produce, nor is mere receipt by him of such a share in the past sufficient to give him a title in the future. To secure the latter, it is necessary that in addition to the position of mafidar or assignee, his status should include certain elements or incidents of proprietary right or ownership explained in r. D1 31 framed under the Land Revenue Act of 1871 on the analogous subject of the settlement of revenue assessable on resumed assignments with the ex-assignees or their heirs (a).

If the owner was in cultivating possession of the land concerned, the mafidar would not be entitled to a sub-settlement; as a result of which he would of course have no title to take a share of the produce from the cultivating owner (b).

Held that as it had not been proved that the plaintiff had at any time any proprietary interest or had ejected tenants or admitted new ones, he was not entitled to realise a share of the produce from the tenant who had been in Mahomedan Law—Custom—Rajput Mussalmans—Custom permitting widow to take life-estate in husband's entire property—No proof—Bengal, N.W.P., and Assam Civil Courts Act XII of 1887, S. 37—Effect of the section.

Held that it was not established by evidence in this case that a custom obtained among the Rajput Mussalmans under which a widow got a life-estate in her husband's entire property in case of his death without issue. (Per Tudball and Rafique, JJ.; Walsh, J. doubting) (a).

Per Walsh, J.—S. 37 of the Bengal, North-Western Provinces and Assam Civil Courts Act means that the Mahomedans are governed by the Mahomedan Law and the Hindus by the Hindu Law and that neither of them against their will should be subjected to the law of the other or to the English or any other law. The section does not apply to a dispute between the Mahomedan themselves or on the other hand to a dispute between the Hindus themselves; where, for example, a point is raised by a Mahomedan himself that he, if it can be proved in fact, should be allowed by the law to apply to himself an exception to the general Mahomedan Law which would otherwise be applicable to him. The section must be read to mean that the Mahomedan Law is not to be applied to a Hindu against his will, but a man is free to adopt for himself any special custom which he pleases. *Raja v. The condition in a Kabinnama that the husband should live with the wife in her father's dwelling house and if he broke this condition she would be entitled to divorce him is void under the Mahomedan Law (a).

Where in an appeal against the dismissal of a suit by the plaintiff for restitution of conjugal rights, it was represented that the appellant had deposited the amount of the prompt dower in the lower Court and that he had set apart a separate hut within his compound for the residence of the defendant, held that under these circumstances there was no reason why the plaintiff should not be given a decree for restitution of conjugal rights. *Imam Ali Patwari v. Where a Mahomedan transferred certain property to his wife in lieu of relinquishment of her claim to dower the amount of which was specified, held, that the transaction was not one of sale but of hiba-bil-ewaz.

Held further, that a hiba-bil ewaz is not a sale within the meaning of S. 9 of Act XVIII of 1876 and confers no right of pre-emption under Chap. II of that Act. Ram Prasad v. Rahat Bibi (Mussammat), 18 O.C. 367 = 33 Ind. Cas. 622.

- (2) Widow's lien for dower—Whether interest on unpaid dower is chargeable—Usury—Abrogation of—Act XXVIII of 1855—Equitable considerations.

Where a Mahomedan widow had been in possession for a number of years of her deceased husband's landed property under her lien for unpaid dower, and the other heirs sued her to recover possession of their shares and prayed for accounts, and the question arose whether in taking such accounts she was entitled to interest on her dower:

Held, that it would be inequitable to make her account for the profits except on the terms of allowing her reasonable interest on her dower debt.

The question whether the Mussulman rule relating to usury was or was not abrogated by Act XXVIII of 1855 discussed but not decided.

Compensation for forbearance to enforce a money payment is best calculated on the basis of an equitable rate of interest. The rules of equity and equitable considerations commonly recognised in the Courts of Chancery in England are not foreign to the Mussulman system, but are in fact often referred to and invoked in the adjudication of cases. Hamira Bibi v. Held, that the cause of action for a claim for dower is distinct from the cause of action for a share in the inheritance.

Where a Mahomedan husband sued for the recovery of his share out of the property left by his wife on her death in possession of her mother and the mother did not plead as a defence the non-receipt of her share out of the dower which fell due on her daughter's death, held, that it did not operate to bar as res judicata a subsequent claim by the mother for her share in her daughter's dower money.

Held also, that in fixing the amount of dower, under S. 5 of the Oudh Laws Act, the Court is not to take into consideration the means of the husband at the time he entered into the contract of dower, but his means at the time it is sought to enforce the contract. Amir Khan v. - (4) Dower, claim for, in a suit for share, in the inheritance—Nikah during subsistence of muta marriage, validity of—Childless Shia widow's right to succeed to her husband's property—Dower, matters to be considered in determining, whether excessive or not—Oudh Laws Act, S. 5.

Held, that it being a clear principle of Mahomedan Law applicable alike to Shias and Sunnis that the estate of a deceased Muhammadan is, before its distribution among the persons who are entitled as heirs, liable for the debts which were owing by the deceased at the time of his death and that the claim of the wife for dower is a debt which is chargeable against the general estate of deceased husband, where the claim is made after his death, it is competent for the widow of a deceased Muhammadan to put forward her claim for dower in a suit brought by one of several heirs for his share in the estate of the deceased.

Where a husband and wife during the subsistence of a muta marriage entered into a marriage in the nikah form, but before doing so the husband surrendered the unexpired portion of the muta period, held, that the second marriage by nikah was valid.

Held further, that under S. 5 of the Oudh Laws Act the first matter to be considered is whether the sum agreed upon is excessive with reference to the means of the husband. It is not found to be so it is unnecessary to go any further and there is no occasion to discuss the status of the wife for the purpose of reducing the amount.

Held also, that the expression "means of the husband" as used in S. 5 of the Oudh Laws Act signifies the value of the husband's estate at the time of his death, in cases where the claim is made by a widow.

Held further, that the principal matters to be considered in determining whether any sum fixed for dower is reasonable or excessive are the extent and nature of the claims of the various persons who, as heirs, are entitled to divide the estate. If it were made to appear that the payment of a certain sum on account of dower would reduce the divisible estate to such an extent as to leave the heirs poorly provided for, it might reasonably be held that such a sum was excessive.

Mahomedan Law—(Continued).—4.—Dower—(Concluded).

It is settled law that a childless Shia widow is not entitled to any share in the landed property of her deceased husband. But where the property consists in the right to receive a fixed annual sum of money in the nature of a rent charge, the widow is not excluded by the rule of Shia law from participation in property of this description.

Conduct of counsel, in the matter of cross-examination of witnesses examined on commission, commented upon. Baqar Mirza v. Mehdi Hassan, 19 O.C. 246.

(5) Decree for dower in favour of widow, form of—Onus of proof—Assets of deceased person, whether includes annuity.

A decree for dower in favour of a Mahomedan widow can be passed only against the assets of her deceased husband. A personal decree against the person in possession of the assets is not proper.

A defendant who relies on the happening of an event in discharge of his liability is bound to prove its happening. The onus is not on the plaintiff to prove that it had not happened.

The assets of a deceased person who had been in enjoyment of an annuity, e.g., a wasika pension which ceased on his death cannot include any money due on account of annuity after the date of his death. Ali Muhammad Khan v. Mueet Sajjadi Begam, 33 Ind. Cas. 516.

(1) Hiba-bil-ewaz (gift for a consideration)—Delivery of possession—Consideration (ewaz).

Under the Mahomedan Law a voluntary gift is not valid unless it is also accompanied by delivery of the thing given so far as it is capable and admits of delivery. In the case of a gift for consideration, (Hiba-bil-ewaz) delivery of possession is not necessary, but, actual payment of consideration and a bona fide intention on the part of the donor to divest himself in presenti of the property and to confer it upon the donee are necessary and must be proved.

(2) Separable gifts—One portion invalid—Gift, in lieu of dower—Hiba-bil-ewaz—Ordnance Estates Act (1 of 1869), ss. 8, 10, 15—Primaogeniture—Property alienated by talukdar—Waqf of profits of land—Mortgage of property bequeathed.

If a gift in regard to a certain property is invalid, its invalidity would not affect another and a separable portion of it (a).

According to Mahomedan Law, a gift made in lieu of dower is a hiba-bil-ewaz, for the validity of which the delivery of possession is not essential. The consideration of a hiba-bil-ewaz may or may not be adequate and it is enough to perfect such a gift that some ewaz or consideration should be given and there should be an intention to divest oneself in presenti of all interests in the property (b).

Where a sanad whereby an estate was granted to a talukdar lays down the rule of primogeniture, that rule would not apply to persons to whom the estate has been alienated in whole or in part by the holder thereof in his life time or to the property that has been alienated (c).

The Mahomedan Law does not recognise a waqf of the profits of land apart from the land itself. In some cases, the disposition may, prima facie, appear to convey an immediate interest, and yet the intention may not be to give it operation during the lifetime of the testator; when that is so, the disposition will take effect as a wasalat.

According to the Shia Law, such a bequest may take effect in favour of some of the heirs without the consent of the other heirs, if it does not affect more than one-third of the estate, or if it exceeds one-third, it is made for the performance of such religious duties as are incumbent upon the testator (d).

A subsequent mortgage is not necessarily inconsistent with the rights conferred by a bequest. Qasim Ali Khan v. Ahmad Shah, 32 Ind. Cas. 516.

An apparent finding of fact will not be binding on a Court of second appeal, if it is either based on no evidence or proceeds on a misapplication of the law to the facts found.

It is a cruel and abominable thing to bind in wedlock a girl of 12 years who is approaching puberty to an infant in arms.

A marriage contracted by a father of a minor 'to one who is not an equal' is not lawful when it is known that the father acted carelessly or wickedly in the matter. The Mahomedan Law subjects the paternal guardian for marriage to the control of the Courts.

(3) De facto guardian, release by: if should be set aside, when not binding—De facto guardian, release by, when to be upheld—Family settlements, when not binding on minor—Test—Mother, power of as de facto guardian—'Delay defeats equities,' limitations to the maxim—Laches and inconvenience, when no bar to re-opening of settled matters—Evidence debts proved prima facie by acceptance by major members—Compromise, views of parties as to, if absolute.

A conveyance by a de facto guardian of a Mahomedan minor need not be set aside by him after attaining majority, if the document is not binding on him (a).

A release deed executed by the mother and de facto guardian of a Mahomedan minor will not be upheld unless it is shown to have been beneficial to the minor so as to justify the mother in entering into it as the de facto guardian.

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—II, in pursuance of a general purpose of settling family affairs and of bringing peace among the members of the family, separate releases are executed by the members of the various branches of the family in favour of the sole senior member of one branch, each of such releases will be valid and binding as one of a series of transactions by which the family arrangement was secured (b).

Under the Mahomedan Law, a mother is not the de jure guardian of her infant son, and as a de facto guardian, her powers of binding her son's interests are very limited.

It is well established that, under the Mahomedan Law, a transaction will not be upheld against a minor unless it is found to be to his manifest advantage or for necessity (c).

When a major member of a family executes a release deed on the footing that certain debts exist, the deed is prima facie evidence of the existence of such debts.

A person whose conduct is not above board will not be permitted to plead laches on plaintiff's part, and the inconvenience that may be caused to him by re-opening certain matters is no bar to the plaintiff's suit.

The maxim that 'delay defeats equities' should not be applied to a case where want of fair dealing and inequality have been proved to exist.

The tests to be satisfied before transactions by way of family compromises, entered into on behalf of infants, can be upheld, are :

(1) In forming the agreement of compromise there must have been a full disclosure of all material circumstances in the knowledge of the parties thereto. It is immaterial whether the information withheld was asked for by the other contracting parties or not (d) :

(2) all the members of the family should have been treated impartially, (e) and

(3) if the parties be not on equal terms but one of them stands in such relation to the other as renders it incumbent on him to give a fuller account of the matter or question in dispute than he has done, the Court, although no intentional fraud may be imputable to such person, will not support the compromise (f).

A family arrangement will not bind a minor if it is unconscionable in any way.

The proposition that a compromise should be judged, not by what the Court concludes to be the rights of the parties, but by what was regarded as just and proper by those who entered into the transaction, is subject to the proviso that the transaction should have been entered into honestly and with a view to secure full justice to the various parties to the instrument, that, although mistakes in calculation or in the ascertainment of rights might exist, there was no undue advantage taken by one of the members of the family and that there was an honest desire to put an end to litigation and secure family peace. *Abdul Hussain Rowthan v. Plaintiff's father and the defendants, all belonging to the class of Cutch Memon Mahomedans, were trading as partners till October 1907, when plaintiff's father died. In November, accounts were taken of the amount due to plaintiff, then a minor, one year old, and a settlement arrived at that Rs. 16,000 was due. This amount was left in the hands of defendants who were to pay interest at 7½ per cent. The mother, and maternal grandfather of plaintiff, and two other respectable gentlemen were parties to the settlement which was registered. The interest amounting to Rs. 100 a month was regularly paid by defendants and used to be received by the plaintiff's maternal uncle, who now brought this suit as his next friend, for accounts; and for a share of profits, since plaintiff's father's death.

Mr. Justice Bakewell on the Original Side, held that the settlement was void, as the plaintiff was not properly represented, his mother not being his legal guardian, and no record the suit, without even giving credit to sums regularly paid after the death of plaintiff's father. In appeal:—

Held, reversing, the decree of Mr. Justice Bakewell, that plaintiff is not entitled to maintain this suit and ask for an account.

In cases of urgent and imperative necessity, or where the transaction from its nature must necessarily be beneficial to the minor, a de facto guardian can alienate the property of the minor, whether moveable or immoveable—other acts of a de facto guardian, if of a similar nature, are also binding (a).

The view of the law of the learned Judge on the Original Side was quite, erroneous regarding the nature of the settlement, as the settlement had been set aside without any allegations being made against its bona fide character.

The settlement having been accepted and acted upon for so many years by the minor's mother, his maternal grand-father, and even his present next friend, the next friend cannot now be allowed to turn round and say it was unauthorised and therefore should be set aside, without even alleging that the settlement was not fair and bona fide or that it was liable to be opened on account of errors.

Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—A minor who is entitled to claim the assets of his deceased father in a partnership is not entitled to claim as of right a share in the profits of the concern. There is no fiduciary relation between the surviving partners and the legal representatives of the deceased partner. The amount due to the deceased is a loan and nothing more (b).

It is always a very difficult process to find out to what exactly the profits earned in the trade are due, whether it is the capital left by the deceased, or to the capital brought in by the other partners or to other things. Therefore there are innumerable difficulties in the way of an account being taken. Discretion must be left in the Court in such matters to act on behalf of the minor (c).

Under the Mahomedan Law all classes of property follow one rule of devolution. That law makes no distinction between ancestral and self-acquired property, and recognises no principle of differentiation in the matter of lineal and collateral succession, as is the case under the Hindu Law of the Mitakshara school. Under the Mahomedan law if a custom governs the succession to the ancestral estate, the presumption is that it attaches also to the personal acquisitions of the last owner left by him on his death; and it is for the person who asserts that these properties follow a line of devolution different from that of the ancestral estate to establish it.

Where in Oudh a summary settlement of the Government revenue was made with one J.A.K., a Mahomedan, on January 22, 1859, a Talukdari sanad was granted to him on October 17, 1861, and his name was entered as a Talukdar in the first and second of the lists prepared under the Oudh Estates Act, 1869 (Act I of 1869), but it was contended that as J.A.K. had died before the Act came into force it applied neither to him nor to his Taluk.

Held, that the lists which the Chief Commissioner was directed to "cause to be prepared" under S. 8 of the Act were obviously in course of preparation long before the passing of the Act, and the limit of six months was clearly meant as a limit for their completion and not for their initiation; and that J.A.K. was a Talukdar within the meaning of the Act and he had acquired, as declared by S. 3 thereof, "a permanent, heritable and transferable right" in his estate.

Held, also, that the inclusion of J.A.K.'s name in list 2 also was, by virtue of S. 10, conclusive evidence of the fact that there was a pre-existing custom attaching to his estates on which their inclusion in that list was based; and that in the case of a Mahomedan Talukdar the existence of the pre-existing custom gave rise to a presumption that the custom applied to non-talukdari property, and the person who alleges that there is a different course of succession in respect of the non-talukdari property must prove his allegation (a).

A wajib-ul-arz is a village administration paper, prepared by a village official, in which are recorded the statements of persons possessing interest in the village relative to existing rights and customs; and as such they are of considerable value in the determination of such rights and custom; but statements which merely narrate traditions and purport to give the history of devolution in certain families not even of the narrators, stand in no better position than any other tradition. *Murtaza Hosain Khan v. - (2) Nasab—Rule as to social inferiority of the husband whether mandatory—Social inferiority of husband—No ground for annulling marriage—Sumis—Shias—Ante-nuptial conditions—Breach thereof—Effect.

Held that, among Muhammadans, the inferiority in the social status (nasab) of the husband does not render the marriage invalid ab initio nor does it justify the Court in dissolving the nuptial tie.

As regards ante-nuptial stipulations, the law appears to be that when a marriage contract is entered into subject to an essential condition of a reasonable nature, not opposed to the policy of Muhammadan law, the Court may set aside the marriage on the breach of that condition, unless the condition has been waived or the breach thereof has been acquiesced in, by or on behalf of the wife.

A girl not sui juris given in marriage by her father, cannot, in the absence of fraud, avoid the marriage merely on the ground of the husband's social inferiority (a).

It is a moot point of sunni law whether a marriage otherwise lawfully contracted by an adult woman can be, or must be, set aside by a Civil Court at the instance of the so-called guardians (that is of the relatives, who would be guardians, if the woman had been a minor), if they can prove such social inequality on the part of the bridegroom, as would injuriously affect the family credit or interest. But the doctrine of Shia school is clear that social inferiority on the part of the husband affords no ground for the cancellation of the marriage. Jamali Ali Shah v. Mir Muhammad, 119 P. by Commissioner, if should be allowed to be read in Court.

According to Mahomedan law, a girl becomes a major on the happening of either of two events, first, the completion of her fifteenth year, and second, on her attainment of a state of puberty at an earlier period. The burden of proving that a girl has in either of these ways reached her majority rests upon those who allege it and rely upon it. And this must be done by legal evidence.

The evil consequence of the admission of hearsay evidence is not merely that it prolongs litigation, and increase its cost, but that it may unconsciously be regarded by judicial minds as corroboration of some piece of evidence legally admissible and thereby obtain for the latter quite undue weight and significance.

The reading of undoubtedly hearsay evidence recorded by a Commissioner who is not empowered to rule out evidence on the ground of inadmissibility disapproved.

Held, on the evidence, that the respondent who had sued the appellant (who at the time of the marriage ceremony was an orphan girl under 15 years of age) for restitution of conjugal rights had failed to establish, first, that the appellant had attained puberty before the date of the marriage; and, second, that she was not then merely given away by her grandmother (she not being authorised by law to do so), but had herself consented to the marriage and the performance of the ceremony. Mussammat Atkia Begum v. In the performance of the ceremony of Talab Musabat, what is necessary is an expression by the pre-emptor in clear and explicit terms that he demands to make the purchase and it is not necessary that he should, at the time of the performance of the ceremony, make any mention of the price.

There is no authority in Mahomedan Law that if the pre-emptor fails to state, while making the immediate demand for pre-emption that he is willing to pay the price named in the sale deed, or such a sum as a Court may award, he loses the right of pre-emption.

The claim of a co-sharer to pre-empt is not barred by the pendency of a proceeding for partition of a joint-estate.

An appeal to a District Judge from a suit for pre-emption valued honestly at Rs. 4,500 by the plaintiff but decreed at the value of Rs. 7,000 held not to be incompetent especially as no objection was taken either before the District Judge or in the memorandum of appeal to the High Court. 1. A mutwalli has no right to create a permanent encumbrance on wakf property. His creating a permanent or hereditary post of a servitor of that property is in the nature of a permanent alienation of or encumbrances over such property.

2. Anything in the nature of a permanent alienation of, or encumbrance upon, wakf property created by a mutwalli is not binding upon his successors, if it is challenged within 12 years from the date of the successor's appointment (a).

3. Where a document executed by the mutwalli of a mosque stated that the office of charkhban had been filled by a certain person and the word "alalduam" occurred in the closing passage of the document:

Held (1) that, inasmuch as the words following the word "alalduam" related to the duties of the grantee and not to his privileges, this could not be taken as intended to create a permanent and for all time irrevocable alienation of rights in wakf property.

(2) That there was nothing to show that the post was to be held in the incumbent's family for ever, and that the charkhban, was liable to dismissal like any other servant of the mosque.

4. Where in a suit by the mutwalli for possession of certain shops belonging to the mosque by the ejectment of the servitors, it appeared that they had erected certain shops on a site belonging to the mosque and the mutwalli had allowed them to stand unchallenged for a long time:

XXXIX, r. 1—Deputy Commissioner taking action under Punjab Court of Wards Act, Ss. 11, 12—Injunction to restrain alienation and registration of a document—Validity of—Aligarh College a beneficiary—Sub-Registrar a trustee of that College—Authority to register—Registration Rules, r. 174—Mahomedan Law—Hajr—Injunction, whether a prohibitory order—Wakf, construction—Direction of payment of debts—Whether suspension of—Failure of objects—Bequest to poor—Mutawalli, whether wakf can be a.

One R was the owner of certain property which was situate in the Punjab and the Province of Agra. He created a wakf of the property in the Province of Agra on 25th August, 1908 by a deed appointing himself the first mutawalli and remained in possession as such till his death in December of that year. The deed of wakf was registered by a Sub Registrar who was a trustee of the Aligarh College which was also one of the beneficiaries under the trust. Before the execution of the deed of wakf, on the 24th August 1908, the Deputy Commissioner of Karnal, on being approached by the defendants, who were the legal heirs of R, took action under S. 11 of the Punjab Court of Wards Act and for the protection of the estate took possession of it under S. 12, but the next day the possession had to be given up under the order of the Commissioner. On the 30th August the Deputy Commissioner issued an injunction restraining R from alienating his property pending inquiry under S. 11. But on 9th November executed a trusteesnama framing rules for the management of the trust property and mentioned six persons, the plaintiffs being among them, to succeed to him as trustees and appointed one Q as a co-mutawalli, to assist him. This deed was not registered. On the death of R the defendants took possession. On a suit being brought by the plaintiffs, held that, by the trusteesnama, the wakif only appointed Q to help him as a co mutawalli and did not purport to transfer property to any person or modify the terms of the wakfnama in any way, and therefore it was not compulsorily registrable under S. 17 of the Registration Act.

Held also that the action of the Deputy Commissioner of Karnal, in restraining R from alienating his property, was ultra vires, inasmuch as there was no proceeding pending before him in which there was any danger of the property in dispute being wasted or alienated, and S. 492 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 (O XXXIX, r. 1 of the Act of 1908) did not apply.

Held further that rule 174 of the Rules made by the Inspector-General of Registration did not make the registration of the deed of wakf invalid simply because the Sub-Registrar was a trustee of the Aligarh College. Moreover the defect, if any, was one of procedure and could not vitiate the proceedings.

Held also that the rule of hajr under the Mahomedan law did not apply to this case, because there was no order of prohibition except the order of the Deputy Commissioner which was ultra vires.

The deed of wakf directed that the mortgages on the dedicated property should be paid first and then the income was to be applied to certain charities among them being an Islamia School. On failure of any of these the wakf was to be applied to the poor and indigent. It was proved that the Islamia School mentioned in the wakfnama had never existed at any time.

Held that wakf subject to a mortgage was valid and the condition as to payment of mortgage did not amount to a suspension of the wakf for an indefinite time.

Held also that the wakf did not fail by reason of the non-establishment of the Islamia School, but it continued for the benefit of the poor, the doctrine of Cypres being applicable.

Held also that a wakif can appoint himself a mutwalli of the wakf property. Rustam Ali Khan v. Muntaq Husain, 14 A.L.J. 554=35 Ind. Cas. 718.

The wife died in 1911. The plaintiff alleging that he had been elected as a mutwalli by the raises at a meeting convened for the purpose, brought the suit for declaration of right and injunction; Held, that the suit was not maintainable because the plaintiff had not been validly appointed, the persons alleged to have appointed the plaintiff being an undefined, uncertain and fluctuating body of men as to whom it was impossible to say whether they did or did not answer the qualifications required of them by the wakf. Muhammed Shafi v. (5) Public religious or charitable trusts—Mosque—Appointment and succession of trustees or mutawallies—How far the rule laid down by the founder is to be followed—Discretion of Kazi or Court—Code of Civil Procedure (1882), S. 539—Appointment of trustees and settling scheme of management for a religious institution—Discretionary powers of Civil Court.

The Mussulman Law, like the English Law, draws a wide distinction between public and private trusts. Generally speaking, in a case of a waqf or trust created for specific individuals or a determinate body of individuals, the Kazi, whose place in the British Indian system is taken by the Civil Court, has, in carrying the trust into execution, to give effect, so far as possible, to the expressed wishes of the founder. With respect, however, to public religious or charitable trusts, of which a public mosque is a common and well known example, the Kazi's discretion is very wide. He may not depart from the intentions of the founder or from any rule fixed by him as to the objects of the benefaction; but as regards management which must be governed by circumstances he has complete discretion. He may defer to the wishes of the founder so far as they are conformable to changed conditions and circumstances, but his primary duty is to consider the interests of the general body of the public for whose benefit the trust is created. He may in his judicial discretion vary any rule of the management which he may find either not practicable or not in the best interests of the institution.

In giving effect to the provisions of S. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (1882), and in appointing new trustees and settling a scheme, the Court is entitled to take into consideration not merely the wishes of the founder, so far as can be ascertained, but also the past history of the institution, and the way in which the management has been carried on heretofore, in conjunction with other existing conditions that may have grown up since its foundation. It has also the power of giving any directions and laying down any rules which might facilitate the work of management, and, if necessary, the appointment of trustees in the future. Mahomed Ismail Ariff v. (6) Registered deed of wakf—Real or nominal transaction—Subsequent conduct of settlor—Voluntary settlement—Void as against creditors—Dedication reserving life-estate to settlor in the income of property, if valid.

In cases where the question is whether there has been a real dedication, the production of a registered instrument in writing making a transfer of the property would no doubt be strong prima facie evidence of such dedication. But it is also competent to parties interested in the matter to prove that the instrument was merely nominal and that in fact there was no real dedication. The user of the property subsequent to the alleged dedication has always been held to furnish excellent evidence of the reality or otherwise of the transaction (a).

A dedication of his property by a Mahomedan which does not create an immediate wakf of the properties, but gives a life-estate in the income to the grantor himself as a beneficiary under the trust may be valid under Mahomedan Law (b).

Where a Mahomedan trader in involved circumstances executed and got registered a deed of wakf comprising all his immoveable properties, reserving to himself the use of the entire income of the properties till his death, and appointing his son as manager after his death, on a specified salary, and where it was found that both before and after the alleged dedication, the creditors of the settlor were pressing for payment, and that the residue of the settlor's estate was not sufficient for the payment of his debts, and that sometime after the execution of the wakf-deed, the settlor himself mortgaged some of the properties comprised therein and gifted away others to his children, and that the sons of the settlor also dealt with and treated the properties as their own, it was held that under such circumstances, the so-called wakf was a voluntary settlement and therefore void as against the creditors of the settlor. Mulla Yeettil Ussain v. (8) Proof of dedication—Allegation of custom governing succession opposed to general rules—Burden of proof.

Where no record of actual dedication of property as wakf has been traced dedication may be inferred from the actual user of the property for such purpose.

Where a custom as to succession to wakf property is set up in opposition to the general rules of Mahomedan Law the burden of establishing such a custom lies heavily on the person who sets it up and there must be such evidence as would amount to a clear proof of the existence of such custom. It must be shown to have been certain, invariable and continuous by clear and unambiguous evidence.

Where such custom is proved it must be construed strictly. Haji Mukhl Gazi v. Mastanshah, 36 Ind. Cas. 951.

(9) Trustee absconding—Incapacity of trustee—Nature of incapacity—Legal effect

The incapacity of a trustee means the mental or physical incapacity and does not apply to the case of a mutwalli absconding for fear of arrest.

Where property was dedicated by a document called wakfnama and the document provided that the executant, who was a mutwalli, becoming incapacitated the person in whose favour it was executed should act as the mutwalli in his place, the absconding of the executant by reason of the fear that the police were after him did not incapacitate the executant to give room for his nominee. *Sriwati Bibi v. (10) Lease of wakf house property for more than a year—Sanction of kazi—Earnest money paid to mutwalli for a lease—Right to recover—Contract—Partial guarantee for performance—Default—Effect—Act IV of 1882, S. 8.

Sanction of the kazi is necessary to validate a lease of wakf house property for more than a year.

When such a lease has been made improperly and many years afterwards it is impugned before the Court, the Court would not disturb the arrangement which was made in the ordinary course of management of an estate for the benefit of the beneficiaries (a).

But that does not in any way debar a person from seeking at the outset of the negotiation to obtain the best title which the transferor is capable of giving him and to insist upon the transferor doing all that is necessary and that he is capable of doing to give him a good title, although he entered into the bargain with full knowledge that the transferor was a mutwalli and that the property was wakf house property.

A mutwalli who receives earnest money for giving a lease of wakf property is not entitled to retain it unless he is willing to get the sanction of the kazi to validate the lease which he is bound to do under S. 8 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Where a certain amount was advanced by the lessee to the lessor not only as a mere part of the consideration for the granting of a lease but as a partial guarantee for the performance of the contract on the part of the lessee, the lessee could not seek to recover this sum unless there was some default on the part of the lessor in refusing to carry out the contract to the extent to which he is capable of carrying it out. *Golam Muhammad v. (11) Dedication—What it involves—Proof thereof—Limited dedication—Possibility—Express or implied dedication—Presumption—Grave-yard—Land dedicated as grave-yard—Reservation of produce thereon—Legality.

Dedication involves original proprietorship. The proprietor of land may dedicate in one of two ways. He may do it by express grant. In such a case, the law requires a donee. If the property is transferred it must vest in some living agent, that is to say, either in a trustee or a body of trustees who represent the beneficial interest, hold the property for the user specified and execute the trust. The Civil Courts will in case of need administer or control the administration of the trust provided the trust is valid by the general law. But a man cannot, divest himself wholly of all interest and title in immoveable property without vesting it in some legal person. He may, however, and this is the second method, dedicate his land without any formal transfer or specific act of dedication. In such cases, the fact of dedication is proved by long user, while the date and often even the person of the actual dedicator are presumed. Inasmuch as the subsequent user constitutes the proof of the prior act of dedication to which such user is referable, it is only from the user that the extent of dedication can be presumed. Limited user is evidence of a limited dedication.

There can be an implied dedication of a grave-yard with a reservation of the produce of the land in favour of the dedicator.

There is no difference between an express dedication limited to special uses for secular purposes and one limited for religious purposes. What may be limited by express grant may be equally limited under an implied grant.

Under Mahomedan Law, there may be limited dedications.

A grave yard once dedicated and adopted cannot be used for any secular purpose or any purposes inconsistent with the purpose for which it is dedicated.

There is nothing in the Mahomedan Law to prevent the reservation of natural products, the appropriation of which to other uses is not inconsistent with the use of the soil as a grave-yard(a).

The Civil Courts in administering the Mahomedan Law are not bound to hold as a matter of law that a man has dedicated something more than the evidence shows that he intended to dedicate. Fakhruruddin v. Mohammad Rafiq, 33 Ind. Cas. 91.

The junior members of a tarwad to which a private temple belonged, could bring a suit to protect the Devaswom against an alienation made by the Karnavan trustee (a).

Although the Karnavan is not a trustee, he is in a position of special responsibility to the other members of the tarwad (b).

In the case of alienation of trust property, viz., the properties belonging to the private Devaswom of a tarwad by a Karnavan without the consent of the other members of the tarwad, as much must be proved to uphold the transaction as is necessary to uphold any other alienation by the Karnavan. Both can be upheld only if they were effected in good faith and for necessity. The Court must inquire into the bona fides of the Karnavan and of the purchaser.

Sadasiva Iyer, J.—Courts in India must scrutinise alienations by compromise and awards out of Court made in reference to properties relating to religious and charitable trusts with very great care, before they are accepted as valid as against the trust.

A subsequent agreement, modifying the terms of the previous mortgage, is not a mortgage and need not comply with the provision of S. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. Ravi Varma Raja v. Ramasubramania Pattar, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 312=31 M.L.J. 733=4 L.W. 576.

- (2) Malabar Law—Marumakkattayam—Will—Devise to the senior male member of a tavazhi—Presumption—Manager owning equity of redemption remaining in possession as Kanomdar—Plea of discharge—Burden of proof—Duty to account.

A devise to the senior male member of a tavazhi, that is to the natural representative of a family governed by the Marumakkattayam Law, is to be presumed to be a putrayakalam gift to the tavazhi, and not merely to the donee individually. But this presumption which is based on the principle of construing the terms of a Will in the light of the surrounding circumstances must not be used for the purpose of controlling and modifying the express words of a Will, but can only be used for the purpose of construing it. Though the fact of the donee being the manager of the tavazhi may lead to a presumption that the gift was intended for the benefit of the tavazhi of which he was the manager, no such presumption can be made in a case where the gift was only to a sub-tavazhi, and where absolute powers of alienation are expressly given to the donee (a).

Malabar Law—(Continued).—2.—Alienation—(Concluded).

Where the manager of a family is in possession of the suit properties and is himself the owner of the equity of redemption, when he pleads that he has discharged his liability to the family by payment to two of its members, there is a heavy burden on him to prove satisfactorily that he did, as a matter of fact, make the payment. The only person who ordinarily could give a discharge is the de jure manager of the family. He could discharge himself of his liability by investing the money in some security on behalf of the family or by payment to all the members of the family. He is not entitled to pay to two of the members of the family, constituting them managers for the mere purpose of receiving the money and giving him a discharge. In any event he is bound to account for the application of the money. Paru Amma v. Itticheeri Amma, 32 Ind. Cas. 459.

—3.—Gift.

Malabar Law—Gift by person following Marumakkattayam Law—Character of estate taken by donee—Deed of gift affording no clear indication of the estate conferred—Presumption—Relationship between donor and donee—Construction of deed of gift.

Per Kumaraswami Sastri, J.—Where a person following the Marumakkattayam Law gives properties to his wife and children or to his children alone following the same law, the presumption is that he intended the donees to take the properties with all the incidents of tarwad property. The mere fact that the donor states that he had a right to sell the property and that the donee should have all his rights, or the use of the words "with all my rights" or "as I was enjoying" will not take the case out of the general rule laid down in the Full Bench case in 22 M.L.J. 481. Express words indicating that the donees were to take the property as tenants-in-common and not under Marumakkattayam Law are necessary (a).

A Hindu ordinarily intends to confer on the donee such an estate as the donee would take under the personal law governing him. The degree of propinquity is, therefore, immaterial and affords no test. The case may be different where a donor not following Marumakkattayam Law gives properties to those who do (b).

Where the terms are clear and unambiguous and expressly confer an absolute heritable and alienable estate, there is nothing in the Marumakkattayam Law or usage to prevent the donee from taking an absolute estate like any other donee in the Madras Presidency and there is no reason to treat the clauses as repugnant and unenforceable simply because the gift is to the donee and his or her children or heirs.

In construing a deed of gift what Courts have to see is the intention of the donor as evidenced either by the deed or by the surrounding circumstances at the time of the gift. No amount of dealing by the donee could convert a limited into an absolute grant.

Where the gift was by an uncle following the Marumakkattayam Law to his nieces, children of the same mother, and there was nothing in the deed of gift to indicate that an absolute alienable estate was intended to be conferred on the donees.

Held that the property was intended to be given as putrayakassam property.

Per Coutts-Trotter, J. (dissenting).—As the donor assigned to his nieces “in full all the rights he possessed in respect of the lands” and the deed recited that he possessed “the right of holding with liberty to sell,” the donees took an absolute estate without the incidents of tarwad property.

The presumption in favour of a gift being subject to the incidents of tarwad holding is necessarily weaker when the objects of the gift are not the wife and children of the donor. Kuyyattil Kundan Kutty v. Yayalpath Parkum, 32 Ind. Cas. 107.

—4.—Husband and Wife.

Malabar law — Husband and wife — Permanent lease to wife alone — Deed containing no words of conveyance to children — Makkalapaanpna.

Where a donee is a female Makkalin is the proper word to denote the course of devolution.

A husband gave a permanent lease of his properties to his wife. She in her turn executed a deed of gift in respect of the major portion of these properties in favour of her two daughters. One of the daughters sold some of the properties which fell to her share to a third party. In a suit by the daughter's children for a declaration that the alienation is not binding on them, held that the donor intended to give an absolute estate to his wife and that the gift by the wife to her daughters conferred an absolute right on them and the daughters' children had no right to contest the alienation. Duja Bhandary v. (1) Malabar Law—Power of tarwad to limit power of Karnavan — Family Karar — Abstention of one member, effect of—Revocation of Karar by a Karnavan who was a consenting party.

Ordinarily a Karnavan has the right to grant a melcharth but it is in the power of the tarwad to limit the ordinary powers of a Karnavan and this limitation may be effected by a family Karar which the Karnavan is not entitled of his own authority to set aside (a).

The usual object of a family Karar, whereby a Karnavan's ordinary powers are restricted, is to settle family disputes or to provide against mismanagement by an incompetent or unscrupulous Karnavan, and is often a means of averting a suit to remove the Karnavan from his office. When, therefore, a Karnavan is a consenting party to such a Karar, he is bound by its terms, unless the other contracting parties are willing to release him from his obligations, or he can show that the Karar is no longer beneficial to the interests of the tarwad.

But the abstention for personal reasons of one member of the family cannot affect the binding character of the Karar on those who were parties to it (b).

Such a family Karar cannot be held to be a mere delegation of authority or a power of attorney which is capable of being revoked at any time by the Karnavan. Consequently so long as the Karar is in force, the Karnavan has no power to grant a melcharth of tarwad property without the consent of the other signatories to the Karar. Pangl Achan v. Malabar Law—Anubhavam grant conferring permanent tenure.

The word “anubhavam” has been held to confer a permanent tenure when used with reference to a grant of land (a).

A deed of grant to the children of a certain man containing the words “as before you shall in future also hold” the properties on anubhavam right on a certain rent construed as a whole held to show that the parties intended the tenure to be permanent. The subsequent reference to a portion of rent as “anubhavam” held to mean a fixed allowance to be taken by the grantee in perpetuity out of the rent, notwithstanding that the gross rent may be varied from time to time upon a customary renewal of the tenure (b). Krishna Iyer v. Suit for the recovery of the amount of repairs paid and of costs incurred on the ground that the defendant, the jenmi, had represented to the plaintiff, the Melkanomdar, that no repairs had been effected by the Melkanomdar, and that defendant was liable to pay, as he had undertaken to do so in the kanom deed itself.

Held, that the suit was premature. Although under S. 74 of the Transfer of Property Act, the Melkanomdar succeeded to all the rights of the Kanomdar, it was held on a construction of the Kanom deed that the Jenmi did not undertake to pay these sums, until he paid the mortgage money.

Under S. 63 of the Contract Act, although the Jenmi is bound by law to make the payments, the Jenmi is not bound by law to pay for improvements, till he himself redeems the property. Arakkalakath Koyatti v. Paulgalatt Kunhammad, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 358.

—7.—Partition.

Malabar Law — Tarwad — Partition, right to—Karar—Family arrangement—Junior members, when bound by acts of Karnavan —Minor member, right of, to impeach Karar—Customary Law, how ascertained.

Per Sankaran Nair, J.—According to the constitution of a Malabar Tarwad, it is open to the members to enter into an arrangement for the management of the Tarwad affairs. It is open to them also to divide the Tarwad properties among themselves. Such a partition would ordinarily be binding on the minors, but if on attaining majority they are able to show that they have been prejudiced, that partition could be re-opened so far as they are concerned and they would be awarded the share which should have been set apart for them; but subject to this, the partition is final as between those who were parties to it.

Per Sankaran Nair, J.—According to Malabar Law "division cannot be enforced by a coparcener" and "the head of the family has entire control over the concerns and property of the family which he has to administer for the good of the whole (S. 397 Strange's Manual of Hindu Law). 'The unity of the family may not be broken up by any member claiming a share and forcing on a division.' The head of the family, holds the property to administer it for the good of the whole and it cannot be for the good of the family to allow strangers on behalf of minors to re-open family arrangements, if it can be prevented by securing to those minors their share without detriment to them or their Tarwad

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—The principle of the father of a joint Hindu family allotting the share of some of the members and keeping the rest of the properties of the family in tact is no doubt prevalent in the East Coast; and that is due to the development of the theory of partition mostly by the commentators on ancient Smriti texts. There has been no such development so far as Malabar is concerned.

Per Coutts-Trotter, J.—It is not open to minor members of a Malabar Tarwad to interfere with the family arrangement carried out by the karar of the members in so far as the persons who were parties to it and who were adults at the time are concerned; and all that they are entitled to is to come to the Court for relief for themselves on the footing that their own maintenance has to be provided for by the Court. The onus will be upon them to show that the karar was carried out in fraud of their rights. The onus will also be upon them to show that subsequent to the date of the karar there was mismanagement by the karnavan. If they can show that the karar was carried out in order to defeat their rights and can show that by fraudulent recitals of non-existent debts the property in the hands of the karnavan was misrepresented or understated in the karar, they will be entitled to relief in respect of those false debts and in respect of subsequent acts of mismanagement. What they are not entitled to is to have the whole karar set aside in a manner that would affect the position of the signatories to it. Veluthakkal Chirudevi v. Veluthakkal Tarwad Karnavan, 31 M.L.J. 879=(1917) M.W.N. 106=34 Ind. Cas. 818. COUTTS-TROTTER and SESHAGIRI IYER, J.J.

Per Seshagiri Ayyar, J.—(Napier, J., dubitante):—An arrangement among the members of a Malabar tarwad by which a previous karnavan who had become a stani was given certain specific powers of management in respect of the tarwad, without any express power to obtain renewals of mortgages in favour of the tarwad, does not deprive the actual karnavan however incapable he may be, of the power of renewing usufructuary mortgages in favour of the tarwad. The renewal being binding on the members of the tarwad, they cannot set up adverse possession, but must submit to a redemption by the mortgagee.

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—The karnavan has two capacities—a temporal and a spiritual one. In the former he is the manager of the family properties, maintains the junior members, represents the tarwad in transactions with strangers, etc. In his latter capacity he presides at the ceremonies and performs all the religious duties which are incumbent on him. A stranger cannot supplant him in this latter office; his duties as manager may sometimes be delegated to a stranger. If a receiver is appointed pending a suit for the removal of a karnavan, this officer will have all the rights of a karnavan so far as management is concerned. An agent who acts with the consent of all the members in managing the temporal affairs of a tarwad cannot be in a worse position (a). Krishnan Kidavu v. Raman, 39 M. 918.

In an action for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff has to prove first that he was innocent and that his innocence was pronounced by the Tribunal before which the accusation was made.

A man is not to be mulcted in damages merely because he fails to prove another's guilt, and a man is not to receive compensation merely because there is a reasonable doubt about his guilt; if there is any doubt about his innocence, he fails to prove the absence of reasonable and probable cause.

A man is acquitted in a criminal case if there is a reasonable doubt as to his guilt but a Civil Court will not award him compensation in a subsequent suit for damages for malicious prosecution, unless it has not only itself no reasonable doubt as to his innocence, but considers that the prosecutor either had or should as a reasonable man have had none either. Maung Tha Hla v. Master and Servant.

(1) Wrongful dismissal of servant—Damages—Month's pay—Reasonable damages—Reasonable notice.

When a servant is wrongfully dismissed, he can sue for damages and the amount of damages to be awarded for such a wrongful dismissal will depend on the nature of the hiring contract and the wages agreed upon.

In the case of a domestic or menial servant and also in the case of a clerk, a month's wages would be reasonable damages.

In the absence of any definite agreement or established custom, the contract of service is terminable by a reasonable notice. M. E. Moola v. K. C. Bose, 9 Bur. L.T. 63=8 L.B.R. 420=33 Ind. Cas. 931.

Material Alteration.

(1) Document, execution of—One executant, non-signing of—Addition of that executant's name—No material alteration of document.

Material Alteration—(Concluded).

A material alteration of a document by a party to it after its execution without consent of the other party, renders it void.

But the mere addition of the name of one of the executants in a document who did not sign is no alteration.

It was originally proposed that two men should sign a hand-note; one signed it and the other did not. Subsequently the note was renewed by the man who signed it and yet again it was renewed by the same person.

Held that there was no question at all of any alteration having been made in the document; that as the man who did not sign the first note had nothing whatever to do with the transaction from first to last, could not be held responsible, and that a decree should be passed only against the man who did sign all the three notes. *Babu Lal Beladar v. Mesne Profits—(Continued).

respect to mesne profits—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), S. 6 (a)—Code of Civil Procedure (V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 10—Procedure.

Two persons obtained a decree (a) for possession of certain immoveable property and (b) directing an enquiry as to mesne profits. The decree-holders obtained possession of the immoveable property through the Court. They then sold to A and B their right to recover mesne profits under the decree which they had obtained. The two original decree-holders as well as A and B then applied to the Court of first instance to ascertain the amount of mesne profits due under the decree. In the petition it was stated that the original decree-holders had transferred their rights to A and B.

Held (i) that the right of the original decree-holders was not a mere right to sue within the meaning of cl. (a) of S. 6 of the Transfer of Property Act, but was a right to have the amount of mesne profits ascertained under the decree which had declared that they were entitled to mesne profits.

(ii) The decree for possession and mesne profits was passed under the present Code of Civil Procedure and it is quite clear that under the present Code proceedings taken to ascertain mesne profits are proceedings in the suit and not proceedings in execution.

(iii) That it was open to A and B to have made an application to the Court under O. XXII, r. 10, praying for permission to continue the suit, as assignees of the original plaintiffs decree-holders.

(iv) But although no such application was made but an application was made by all four persons as above explained, yet, as the first Court made an order in favour of A and B, the Court must be taken to have allowed them to continue the suit as assignees of the original decree-holders.

(v) The omission to make a formal application under O. XXII, r. 10 cannot be held to be fatal to the right of A and B to carry on the proceedings. Harl Prasad Misser v. Kodo Marya, 1 Pat. L.J. 427.

- (1) Contract of sale—Guardian purchasing property for minor—Suit for possession of property maintainable—Transfer of Property Act, Ss. 54, 55—Contract entered into with father of minor—Effect of.

One S, a minor, purchased, "through his father and guardian" a house from certain persons. The price was not paid except a sum of Rs. 51, which was alleged to have been paid as earnest money. The sale-deed was compulsorily registered. The vendor, however, remained in possession of the house. Upon a suit by the minor to recover possession of the house from the vendor, she contended that the sale-deed was invalid having been executed in favour of a minor and that she was not bound by it.

Held, that the suit was not one for specific performance of a contract to sell but was founded on the title acquired by the plaintiff under the sale-deed executed in his favour, and consequently it was maintainable, there being nothing in the Transfer of Property Act which prevented a minor from purchasing property (a).

Held further that, the contract having been entered into with the father and guardian of the minor, no contractual obligations were undertaken by the minor, and any personal obligations arising as between the vendor and the vendee would have to be discharged by the party contracting with the vendor (b). Narain. Das v. Musammat Dhania, 14 A.L.J. 65=38 A. 154=35 Ind. Cas. 23.

progress depends upon the appointment of a suitable guardian ad litem.

Where proceedings taken to appoint a guardian ad litem for a minor in a suit have been declared to be invalid, and the suit cannot proceed unless such proceedings are properly initiated and completed, the Court whose duty ultimately is to appoint such a guardian has inherent power under S. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure to revive the suit under O. Held, that although a minor is entitled to impeach a decree passed against him during his minority for sufficient reasons such as fraud or collusion, yet if no such special reason exists the decree passed against the minor is just as good and conclusive a decree as a decree passed against an adult.

Held, that the mere fact that the guardian ad litem did not appear on the date of hearing and allowed an ex parte decree to be passed against the minor would not suffice of itself to justify a presumption of gross negligence against the guardian. Raghuraj GIr v. (2) Mortgage—Suit for sale—Parties—Person alleged as benamidar impleaded as defendant—No defence by such person—Whether suit maintainable.

One N made a simple mortgage of a house in favour of one S. S brought a suit for sale on foot of the mortgage against M, alleged to be representative of N and she got a decree. The house was sold and purchased by K. Upon K suing to recover possession it was found that M was not N's representative. In the meantime the purchase-money deposited by K was attached by a creditor of D, the husband of S on the allegation that D was the real mortgagee. D objected that the money belonged to his wife S. The creditor succeeded. D now brought the suit upon foot of the mortgage made by N. He impleaded S as a pro forma defendant on the allegation that she was a benamidar for him. S did not enter appearance. The Lower Appellate Court held that D had failed to prove that he was the real mortgagee and dismissed the suit. In second appeal the finding was accepted and the decree was affirmed. Held in appeal under S. 10 of the Letters Patent (reversing Chamier, J.) that D was competent to maintain the suit, the benamidar being a defendant to the suit, and she having omitted to deny the allegation made by D. *Dujal v. (5) Mortgage when deemed to be extinguished—Mortgage transferred—Rights of transferee—Effect on right of redemption—S. 91, Transfer of Property Act.

When a mortgage is redeemed by the mortgagor or by some one 'having' a right under S. 91, Transfer of Property Act, to redeem, the original contract is completed and all the mortgagee's rights created under it cease. The contract of mortgage is no longer in existence and the mortgage is said to be extinguished.

The same thing happens when the mortgagor's rights are invaded and some one having no right to redeem redeems in opposition to the mortgagor. The mortgage is then extinguished because the mortgagee recognizes the title of the person redeeming and allows redemption in view of the terms of the original contract, he does not give up his rights of his own free will, but because he thinks that by the terms of his contract he is legally bound to do so. The contract is therefore at an end and the rights created by it cease.

But a mortgagee may either sell or mortgage his rights under the contract. When he mortgages them, the transaction is a sub-mortgage and the mortgagee may redeem his right so long as the mortgagor does not exercise his paramount right of redemption. When the mortgagee sells his rights, those rights do not cease to exist; they become the rights of the purchaser; the original contract is still in force just as in the case of the negotiation of a negotiable instrument. The mortgage is then said to be transferred. This is what happens when a person having no right to insist on redemption redeems either with the permission of the mortgagor or without such permission but recognizing the mortgagor's title. He merely purchases the mortgagee's rights. Mi Hla Yin v. Mi Hman, U.B.R. (1915), 3rd Qr., 89 = 32 Ind. Cas 506.

Defendant contended that she had a previous oral charge or hypothec of the same properties as security for the advances made by her.

Held, that the hypothec created in favour of defendant over the property in suit gave her as much right to that property as the unregistered deed of mortgage subsequently executed gave to the plaintiff Bank, and that, quite irrespectively of all questions of notice, her rights being prior in time must prevail over the rights of the latter Bank.

There is no provision of law in force in the Punjab which requires a charge of this kind in respect of moveable property to be by deed in writing; nor is there any authority for the proposition that, if made orally, it is not as effectual for all purposes (except, of course, in the cases provided for by S. 48, Registration Act) as if it were effected by an instrument in writing, provided always that its existence can be proved. *Mrs. Stewart v. (7) Mortgagor and mortgagee—Rights of first and second mortgages to bring the property to sale—Rights of purchasers.

Coutts-Trotter, J.—What passes to a mortgagee is a right to sell the mortgagor's interest as it stood at the date of his mortgage, subject only to this, that in his suit he must make all subsequent mortgagees parties, if he wishes the sale to be free of their encumbrances.

Of any number of mortgagees the latter can always redeem the earlier but cannot be compelled to do so, and the earlier cannot redeem the later except by consent.

The decisions in 22 M.L.J. 129, 2 M. 108 and 24 M. 171, are in conflict with the Full Bench decision in 21 M.L.J. 213.

Srinivasa Iyengar, J.—A puisne mortgagee who is not made a party to a suit for sale by a prior encumbrancer is entitled to insist on a decree for sale subject to the previous mortgage.

Rights of prior and subsequent mortgagees to bring the properties to sale and the rights of the purchasers elaborately discussed.

Taking two single mortgagees, their rights and liabilities will be as follows:

(1) If the 2nd mortgagee sues first, he can, without making the first mortgagee a party, sell the property subject to the first mortgage; the purchaser will become the owner of the equity of redemption instead of the mortgagor, but subject only to the first mortgage, as the second mortgage is extinguished by the sale. The first mortgagee can sue to recover his mortgage money by sale without making the 2nd mortgagee or the mortgagor a party but only the purchaser. If he wants a personal decree against the mortgagor, he can also be joined in the same suit.

(2) If the 2nd mortgagee sues first, he can join the first mortgagee and redeem him and sell the property and realise the amount due on both the mortgages.

(3) If the 2nd mortgagee sues first, he can join the first mortgagee, and with his consent ask for a sale of the property free of all encumbrances. The proceeds will be distributed according to priority.

(4) If the 2nd mortgagee sues first without making the 1st mortgagee a party, the 1st mortgagee may in execution of the first decree require the property to be sold free of his mortgage, and if the amount due to him is admitted, the Court can order a sale free of all encumbrances.

(5) If the 2nd mortgagee sues first without making the 1st mortgagee a party, the 1st mortgagee can, while the first suit is pending, sue for sale making the 2nd mortgagee and the mortgagor parties, in which case there can be no sale in the 1st suit, and, if there had been a sale pending the 1st mortgagee's suit, the purchaser will be affected by lis pendens. He can redeem the 1st mortgagee in which case there will be no sale in the 1st mortgagee's suit or, if there is a sale, can claim the balance of the sale-proceeds after payment to the 1st mortgagee, as both 2nd mortgagee and mortgagor must be presumed to have obtained the value of their interests in the property out of the sale proceeds in the first sale. In this case the purchaser under the second sale gets the property and is entitled to possession against the 1st purchaser.

(6) If the 1st mortgagee sues first, making the 2nd mortgagee a party as he ought, there cannot be a trial of a further action.

(7) If the first mortgagee sues first without making the 2nd mortgagee a party, the 2nd mortgagee is not affected and can bring his own action for sale making the mortgagor a party if there had been no sale in the 1st mortgagee's suit, or, if there had been a sale, making the purchaser a party in his capacity of the ultimate owner of the equity of redemption, and the purchaser in the 2nd mortgagee's execution sale gets a good title to the property. He is not affected by any lis pendens while any purchaser in the first mortgagee's sale would be. Chinnu Pillai v. Yenkatawami Chettiar, 30 M.L.J. 347=(1916) M.W.N. 245=19 M.L.T. 217=40 M. 77=34 Ind. Cas. 507.

Delivery of symbolical possession is operative against the judgment-debtor who from that date becomes a trespasser, and the remedy of the decree-holder who has failed to get actual possession is by suit.

Where A and B, two out of three brothers, A, B and C, members of a joint Mitakshara family, executed a mortgage of their whole property, and the mortgagee on the death of A sued to enforce the mortgage against B as mortgagor and also as the legal representative of A, and against C, describing him only as A's legal representative:

Held—that the decree and the sale could not affect C's original one-third share in the mortgaged property, since the question of the validity of the mortgage as against C who was not a party thereto could not be raised and decided in the mortgage suit.

That, in a suit by the purchaser to recover the property, C was not barred from raising the question by the doctrine of constructive res judicata.

That the plaintiff, as purchaser of an undivided two-thirds share in huts used as residence by a joint Hindu family, could not be given a decree for joint possession, regard being had to S. 44 of the Transfer of Property Act.

That the proper course to follow is either to direct delivery of possession by partition in execution proceedings or to leave the purchaser to his remedy by a separate suit for partition. Girja Kanta Chakrabarty v. Mohim Chandra Acharjya, 20 C.W.N. 575=23 C.L.J. 587=35 Ind. Cas. 294.

Pro. Code, Ss. 15 to 20 and 21.*

Where a mortgagee, when he brought the suit to enforce his security, had a right to recover the principal amount due under the mortgage only by taking possession of the mortgaged property, but acquired the right to bring the property to sale subsequently, a decree could be passed for the sale of the properties.

Where it is necessary to prevent injustice or avoid multiplicity of proceedings, the appellate Court can take cognizance of matters which happened after the institution of the suit, for the purpose of moulding the relief which the plaintiff was entitled to.

Quare.—Whether Court has power to allow a plaintiff to claim reliefs, to which he was not entitled at the time of the action, on a new title which accrued later.

An objection that the Court taking cognizance of the suit is not entitled to adjudicate upon the claim, whether in whole or in part, for want of jurisdiction for any of the grounds given in Ss. 15 to 20 of the Civ. Pro. Code, is an objection to 'the place of suing' within the meaning of S. 21 of that Code.

Therefore an objection that the Court could not give any relief in a mortgage suit with respect to property comprised in the mortgage bond, on the ground that it is situate in the Agency tracts, is an objection to the place of suing. Sri Raja Satrucherla Ramabhadra Razu v. Mortgage—(Continued).—1.—General—(Continued).

Puisne mortgagee in possession under usufructuary mortgage — Puisne mortgagee, effect of decree on, to which he was not a party—Auction-purchaser, rights obtained by.

Held, that an auction-purchaser who has purchased property at a Court sale in execution of a decree on a simple mortgage obtained by a prior mortgagee cannot obtain possession against a puisne mortgagee who was not a party to the suit in which that decree was obtained, and who is in possession under the terms of a usufructuary mortgage of a later date.

Held further, that the rights of a puisne mortgagee cannot be affected by the provisions of a decree to which he was not a party.

Held also, that such a purchaser cannot obtain a right greater than the right possessed by the prior mortgagee. He can do exactly what the holder of the prior mortgage or the mortgagor could do—no less and no more. Sheo Indar Bahadur Singh Kunwar v. Ghazludda, 18 O.C. 347=33 Ind.Cas. 243.

A second mortgagee in possession under a mortgage under which he was entitled to possession, cannot be lawfully ousted from possession by his mortgagor or by the 1st mortgagee or by a purchaser at a sale under a decree in a suit on the 1st mortgage to which he was not a party. The purchaser in such a suit, whether he is a first mortgagee or a stranger, does not acquire the rights of the mortgagor as at the date of the first mortgage but only those that subsist in him at the date of the suit.

Therefore a puisne mortgagee's suit for declaration that the decree and sale in the first mortgagee's suit were inoperative against him and that the purchaser was not entitled to disturb his possession, without asking for further relief is maintainable. Maung San Bwin v. - (13) Mortgagor and mortgagee—Assignment of mortgage—Equities—Decree debt against assignor—Subsequent to date of assignment—Equitable set-off—Extent.

In a mortgage suit by an assignee of the mortgage a decree debt subsequent to the date of the assignment against the assignor cannot be allowed to be set-off.

The doctrine that there is a right of equitable set-off is well founded but has always been confined to unascertained sums arising out of the same transaction. To give the words "equitable set-off" a wider meaning than this appears to be very dangerous.

Assignment of a mortgage is not an actionable claim within the meaning of S. 132 of the Transfer of Property Act.

It is well settled that, where a mortgage is transferred without the privity of the mortgagor, the transferee takes subject to the state of account between the mortgagor and the mortgagee at the date of the transfer.

An assignment of a mortgage is not covered by the same rules that govern assignments of other choses-in-action. Subramania Iyer v. Subramania Patter, (1916) M.W.N. 351=30 M.L.J. 615=34 Ind. Cas. 859.

- (14) Execution of decree—Preliminary decree for sale—Decree absolute—Code of Civil Procedure (1908), O. XXXIV, rr. 4 and 5 —"Mortgaged property," meaning of.

A puisne mortgagee brought a suit for sale on foot of his mortgage. He impleaded the mortgagor and also a prior mortgagee who held a mortgage over the property mortgaged to him and also over other properties belonging to the mortgagor. A decree for sale of the mortgaged property was passed in his favour upon his redeeming the prior mortgage. The prior mortgage was redeemed by him, and then he applied for a decree absolute for the sale of the property common to both the mortgages and also of such properties as were mortgaged to the first mortgagee but not to him. The Courts below disallowed his application.

Held, that the puisne mortgagee had been subrogated to the rights of the first mortgagee upon his redeeming the latter, and the Courts below ought to have made the decree absolute in his favour allowing him to sell the properties in the first mortgage over and above the property common to both the mortgages.

Per Piggott, J.—So far as the terms of O. XXXIV, r. 5 are concerned, these merely lay down that, in a certain event, the Court shall pass a decree that "the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof" be sold. The meaning clearly is that the mortgaged property which the plaintiffs are under the peculiar circumstances of the case entitled to bring to sale shall be ordered to be sold. Neither r. 4 nor r. 5 of O. XXXIV says anything about the specification of the mortgaged property.

Held, that the definitions of "sale and mortgage" as given respectively in Ss. 54 and 58 of the Transfer of Property Act should be unreservedly adopted in the Punjab and given their full logical effect, and that a mortgage is a "transfer of interests" in property, which is a contract completed at the time of execution and not liable to rescission at the option of either party, in the absence of express or implied stipulation to that effect.

Held, also, that, in the absence of a covenant or stipulation to the contrary, a mortgage is complete and the "transfer of interest" in property is effected, not when the consideration for it is paid or made good, but when the mortgage contract is entered into, regardless of whether and when the consideration is paid or made good.

Held, further, that the presumption being in favour of immediate transfer of interest when the deed of mortgage is executed, it could be rebutted by proof of an express stipulation to the contrary or by proof of facts and circumstances from which such a contrary intention might reasonably be inferred. *Allah Ditta v. A mortgagor left a portion of the mortgage-money with the mortgagee to pay off a prior mortgage but the money was not paid to the prior mortgagee. Thereafter the mortgagor sold his equity of redemption to the plaintiff. After the sale the mortgagee paid to the mortgagor the portion of the mortgage-money which had been left with him for payment to the prior mortgagee.

Held, that any dealings between the mortgagor and the mortgagee made after the plaintiff's purchase could not affect his rights and therefore the plaintiff could not be liable to pay the money paid to the mortgagor after his purchase.

Held further, that the law does not require the purchaser of a property which has been mortgaged to give notice of his purchase to the mortgagee. Sheo Prasad v. Bisheshar Nath, 19 O.C. 12 = 34 Ind. Cas. 266.

Where a prior mortgagee obtained a decree for sale on the basis of his mortgage without impleading the puisne mortgagee, and the puisne mortgagee subsequently brought a suit for redemption of the prior mortgage and impugned therein the correctness of the account contained in the previous decree, held, that the proper course in such a case is to proceed on the basis of the mortgage to find out whether the amount declared in the previous decree to be due to the mortgagee was excessive and, if it was, to readjust the account as if no such decree had been obtained. The puisne mortgagee in such a case is entitled to repudiate his liability for anything beyond what is actually due on the mortgage. *Gouri Shanker Singh (Thakur) v. In execution of a mortgage-decree, the mortgaged property was sold on 21st December 1912 and was purchased by the decree-holder and the sale was confirmed on the 15th February 1913. On 24th August 1914, the judgment-debtor applied to set aside the sale on the ground that, under S. 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, the sale was null and void.

The definition of rent in the Bengal Tenancy Act includes road cess, and therefore, under S. 65 of that Act, a decree for road cess is a first charge upon the tenure. The provisions of Ss. 47, 64 (A) and 64 (B) of the Road-cess Act also support this view (a).

The purchase in execution of a decree for road-cess gives the purchaser a title paramount to a mortgage over the same property, even though the mortgage was prior to the decree. Cheoditti v. Quadress, 1 Pat. L.J. 161.

The doctrine of marshalling which finds expression in S. 81 of the Transfer of Property Act cannot be availed of by a subsequent mortgagee who has notice of the prior mortgage.

A subsequent mortgagee is interested in the equity of redemption and is a necessary party to a suit brought by the prior mortgagee on the footing of his mortgage.

Where, therefore, a decree is passed behind his back, he is entitled to treat it as a nullity and his rights remain unaffected by the decree and by proceedings in execution thereof.

There is no provision of law preventing a prior mortgagee from bringing a suit with the object of getting the full benefit of the security which he holds (a).

A puisne mortgagee, who has not been joined as a party to the suit of the prior mortgagee, is entitled to redeem the prior mortgage with a view to enforcing his own mortgage upon payment of such sum as may be found due (b). Kishen Chand v. A mortgagee sued the mortgagors on the mortgage and obtained a decree, in execution of which he purchased the mortgaged property and obtained formal delivery of possession, but in the meantime the mortgaged property had been sold for arrears of revenue and purchased by strangers. The purchase at the revenue sale was subject to the plaintiff's mortgage.

The mortgagee purchaser now brought a suit for possession against the purchasers at the revenue sale. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for possession, but he was entitled to the ordinary remedy of a mortgagee, namely, to have the mortgaged property put up for sale, if the defendants failed to redeem. Balli Singh v. (23) Stipulation to pay by instalments—Provision to call up whole amount 90 days after demand—Failure to pay instalments—No final demand—No right to sue for whole amount—Construction of the bond—Proper relief.

On the 14th November 1912, the defendant mortgaged certain immovable properties to the Alliance Bank of Simla (plaintiff), in lieu of a sum of Rs. 15,000 bearing interest at 7 per cent per annum with six-monthly rests. According to the terms of the bond, the principal was to be repaid in five annual instalments of Rs. 3,000 each beginning on the 1st January 1914. The bond also contained a provision that the mortgagor will, 90 days after demand, pay to the Bank or its assigns the amount for the time being owing by the mortgagor to the Bank on account current to be made up with interest and other charges.

The defendant failed to pay the first instalment, and the Bank, after some correspondence, sued for the recovery of the whole amount due. It was contended by the defendant that according to this provision the Bank was not entitled to claim even the amount of the first instalment until 90 days after demand and that the Bank having failed to make a demand 90 days before filing the suit, the suit was not maintainable.

Held that the Bank was fully entitled to sue for the amount of each unpaid instalment as soon as it fell due, and that the provision in question is one which confers on the Bank the further right to call up the whole amount of the debt whenever it thought fit and whether or no there had been any default on the part of the mortgagor, 90 days after demand.

Held, also, that, although the defendant has failed to carry out the terms of the mortgage contract, the Bank was not entitled to put an end to the contract and to call up the whole amount although the remaining instalments have not fallen due (a).

Held further that, as there was no final demand for the payment of the whole debt 90 days before the institution of the suit, the Bank was only entitled to claim the amount of the first instalment plus the interest due on the whole debt up to the date of institution of the suit. Kanhaya Lal v. (24) Mortgage—Decree for sale with provision for recovery of balance of decree amount from the other properties of the mortgagor if sale-proceeds are insufficient—Execution—Starting point of limitation.

Held on a reference to the Full Bench that "where a mortgage decree for sale also includes a provisional decree for recovery of any balance from the other properties of the mortgagor in case the sale-proceeds of the mortgaged property are found insufficient to satisfy the entire decree amount, the period of twelve years limited by S. 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for execution of the decree against the other properties of the mortgagor begins to run, not from the date of the decree, but only from the date when the mortgaged properties are sold and the sale-proceeds are found insufficient to satisfy the decree" (a).

Properly speaking, there should be first a decree for sale of the mortgaged properties, and if the mortgaged properties were found insufficient, a separate decree or order should then be made for realization of the balance from the person and other properties of the judgment-debtor. But as there was a very prevalent practice in the mofussil Courts to draw up one decree providing for the sale of the mortgaged property and if the sale-proceeds were insufficient to satisfy the decree, for recovery of the balance from the other properties of the mortgagor, it was held that a combined decree like this, though irregular, would be within the competency of the Court and binding on the

Where a mortgagee, who had purchased mortgaged properties in execution of the decree in the suit on his mortgage, to which a second usufructuary mortgagee, whose mortgage was before the decree and who had taken a new usufructuary mortgage after the date of the decree from the owner, was not a party, brought a suit for possession under O XX1, r. 103, Civ. Pro. Code, against the owner and the second usufructuary mortgagee.

Held, that in the absence of proof of any intention on the part of the usufructuary mortgagee to give up his security under the first deed he must be presumed to have intended to keep it alive and he was entitled to rely on it against the plaintiff's decree and sale under it.

Held also, that, the defendant being in the position of a puisne mortgagee with possession and the plaintiff, in that of first mortgagee who had purchased the property in execution of the decree on his mortgage to which the puisne mortgagee was not a party, the plaintiff's suit for possession must fail.

The question whether previous incumbrances paid off or renewed were to be treated as still kept alive or as extinguished against mesne incumbrances is one of intention of the parties to the transaction and, where there is no clear evidence of that intention from express declarations or attendant circumstances, parties must be presumed to have intended what is for their benefit; the mere fact that the incumbrance has been paid off or renewed does not decide the question.

Where a subsequent incumbrancer alleges that a prior incumbrance has been extinguished by payment or renewal it must be clearly established by cogent evidence, whether direct or inferential that the person making the payment or taking the renewed deed, deliberately and with the knowledge that it was to his benefit to keep the prior incumbrance alive elected to extinguish it for all purposes; otherwise the presumption that a man intends what is to his benefit should be allowed to prevail.

The principle under which protection is granted to persons renewing prior incumbrances against intervening incumbrances applies also to cases of intervening decrees under which property has been sold.

plaintiff or the guardian and the plaintiff advanced the money on the mortgage which was executed by the guardian and the entire amount was applied to the benefit of the minor's estate. The rate of interest was not placed before the District Judge and was not sanctioned by him but that stipulated in the mortgage bond was Rs. 1-8-0 with annual rests:

Held—That even assuming that the order of the District Judge, revoking the lease was effective as against the plaintiff the transaction stood in the same position as if there was no sanction by the Judge to the certificated guardian. The order was merely a voidable one under S. 30 of the Guardians and Wards Act at the instance of the minor on coming of age after restoration of the benefit received by him under the order and the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for the amount advanced by him on the mortgage bond but only to interest at the rate of 12 per cent. simple interest. *Manasharam Das v. There are three ingredients in S. 78 of the Transfer of Property Act—fraud, misrepresentation, or gross negligence. The section makes these ingredients disjunctive and one cannot be defined in terms of the other or others. They are three different kinds of conduct and are in no way co-extensive (a).

Per Holmwood, J.—The mere omission on the part of the mortgagee to take and keep the title deeds is not of itself gross negligence and the existence of gross negligence must be determined according to the circumstances of each case—and one of the circumstances to be taken into consideration is the fact that in this country a universal system of registration exists (b).

Per Holmwood, J.—What constitutes gross negligence is always excessively difficult either to define or by way of anticipation to illustrate.

Per Holmwood, J.—Neglect to recover the title deeds by a vendor from a vendee who has secured the greater part of the purchase-money to the vendor by giving him a mortgage on the property itself, when the vendor has full notice that the vendee is impecunious and a bad paymaster and thereby the vendee is enabled to obtain a second mortgage on the property by deposit of the title deeds, is gross and culpable negligence, and is rendered more so by a deliberate suppression of the existence of the mortgage in the sale deed and a suggestion that the purchase-money was required in cash and paid accordingly. Such negligence postpones the rights of the prior mortgagee.

Registration not being in itself notice a search made by the clerk of the solicitor to the vendee who has an interest to conceal the encumbrance from the second mortgagee cannot saddle the latter with notice of the encumbrance. Nanda Lal Roy v. Abdul Aziz, 43 C. 1054=34 Ind. Cas. 115.

(30) Difference between English and Indian law as to the conception of mortgage—Transfer of Property Act, Ss. 58 and 66—Lease by mortgagor in possession.

Under the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, a mortgage is a transfer of an interest in specific immoveable property for the purpose of securing (1) the payment of money advanced or to be advanced by way of loan, (2) an existing or future debt, or (3) the performance of an engagement which may give rise to a pecuniary liability. In whatever terms the document may be expressed nothing more than what is stated in S. 58 (a) is effected. Consequently although in the case of an English mortgage the mortgagor transfers the property absolutely to the mortgagee the Indian law does not recognize that he does so in fact, and the mortgagor remains in Indian law owner of the property subject of course to the mortgage.

The fictions of English law in regard to the legal and equitable estate have not been continued in India.

A mortgagor in possession can prima facie exercise the ordinary rights of an owner in possession.

The only restriction imposed on him is that contained in S. 66 of the Transfer of Property Act, that is to say, he must not commit any act which is destructive or permanently injurious to the property if the security is insufficient or will be rendered insufficient by such act. Tana Peena Cheena Pitchay Meera Rowther v. one transaction, namely, that of a usufructuary mortgage.

In this case the mortgagee was ejected from the property on the expiration of the lease, but was subsequently restored to possession of a portion of the property. It was alleged that the arrangement between the parties was that the mortgagee was to enjoy the profits, crediting them to the repayment of the principal money.

Held, that the alleged arrangement, which was not one for satisfaction of the terms of the deed of mortgage, but in direct contradiction of the terms of the deed of mortgage, could not be proved under S. 92 of the Evidence Act.

Held further, that S. 76, cl. (h) of the Transfer of Property Act has no application to a case where the mortgagee has not been shown to be in possession qua mortgagee. Muhammad Husain (Mlr) v. Muhammad Ashgar (Sayed), 19 O.C. 328.

When a mortgagor is allowed to remain in apparent possession and ownership of the mortgaged properties, the recitals in the mortgage-deed are very important in considering the nature and the scope of the implied authority which arises as between the mortgagors and mortgagees.

A deed which is expressly called a mortgage-deed and expressly mortgages and hypothecates the property charged as security for the mortgage debt, is according to the law of India, a valid simple mortgage. The deed need not contain any words involving a transfer of any specific interest in immoveable property (a).

Where a mortgage bond is executed on behalf of certain minors by the manager appointed by the Court and in pursuance of a statute, viz., the Guardian and Wards Act VIII of 1890, the fact that the Manager was the person who executed the mortgage and is declared to be the Manager of the estate, rather limits than extends the ordinary rights of a mortgagor in possession (b).

While a mortgagor remains in possession after the date of a mortgage he can deal with the property in the usual and customary way so as to bind the mortgagee; but he must not do anything prejudicially affecting the mortgaged property as security for the mortgage-debt.

Where a person gets a contractual benefit from a mortgagor in possession after the date of the mortgage, the onus is upon such person to prove that it was a benefit which he might derive and retain in the usual course of the management of the property.

Where the status of the defendants as recorded in the Record-of-rights was made on foot of an agreement not legally binding upon the mortgagees, the High Court is entitled in law to inquire and examine into the grounds and basis upon which the entry in the Record-of-rights was made. Anand Kam Marwarl v. A mortgagee in possession is required to keep the property in repair, and reasonable expenditure upon irrigation comes under the heading of keeping the property in repair. But where it is impossible for the Court to say from the mortgagee's accounts what sums were actually expended for the bare keeping of the property in repair, and what sums were spent on improvements of the property, the Court will not assess any figure under this head.

A mortgagee is not entitled to add the expenses he incurred for payment as cesses (e.g., road-cess) to his mortgage security.

The payment of a public charge for which the property may not be summarily sold cannot be constituted a charge upon the property (a).

S. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act does not cover a case in which the right, title and interest only of the mortgagor is to be put up for sale. It covers only the case of a payment made to save the security itself. Rajendra Prasad v. Bahuria Ratan Jote Kuer, 1 Pat. L.J. 589.

Where a mortgage-deed purports to have been executed in consideration of a debt due under a prior mortgage-deed and the execution of both deeds is proved, the evidence afforded by the execution of the prior deed read with further admission of the existence of the debt evidenced by it, in the subsequent deed, is sufficient proof of the existence of the antecedent debt in satisfaction of which the second deed was executed. Narain Singh v. - (36) Unregistered mortgage-deed—Personal liability—Covenant for payment of money on certain contingency—Absence of such contingency.

The question of the personal liability of a mortgagor depends upon the construction of the document in each case. The test is what is the remedy provided for the satisfaction of the mortgage debt in each case.

Suit on an unregistered mortgage bond. The principal issue for decision in the case was whether the defendant was personally liable. The mortgage-deed had provided that in case of there being any dispute as to the title to the mortgaged property or in case any defect in title to come to light the mortgagor was to be personally liable. It also contained a promise to pay the money within a fixed period. The remedy provided in the bond for the satisfaction of the mortgage-debt was the transfer by way of sale to the mortgagee. Held that the contingency mentioned in the bond did not arise and as the personal covenant is entered into in every form of mortgage, the remedy provided for non-payment also showed that there was no personal liability on the part of the mortgagor to pay. Consequently the present suit to enforce the personal liability was not maintainable. Nazim Husain v. Mahabir Prasad, 30 Ind. Cas. 224.

The Court is not bound to give a simple money-decree where the plaintiff sues to realise his debts on the foot of a mortgage. No doubt a simple money-decree is frequently given by the Court but this is a matter of grace. When it does so it should, strictly speaking, amend the plaint by adding a claim for a simple money decree against the individual and the decree ought to be against that individual.

(43) Mortgage—Mortgage of zamindari and sir lands—Loss by mortgagor of zamindari rights—Mortgage to be effective against mortgagor's ex-proprietary rights—Suit to establish ex-proprietary rights—Adverse possession.

When a zamindar having mortgaged his zamindari rights together with his sir land loses his zamindari rights and becomes an ex-proprietary tenant of the sir, the mortgage does not become ineffectual as regards the sir but takes effect as a mortgage of the ex-proprietary rights.

By three deeds the plaintiff mortgaged to each of three persons A, B and C, 1/3 of his share of the lands together with the sir area annexed to it, and subsequently executed a simple mortgage of the entire share in favour of C. Under this mortgage the entire share was in 1893 brought to sale and purchased by D. D sold the share in 1896 to E the successor in interest of C. More than 12 years after this the plaintiff sued to establish his ex-proprietary rights in the sir which accrued to him in 1893.

Held (i) that the claim as regards the 1/3 share in E's possession was barred, for in 1916 the plaintiff was against E entitled to claim 1/3 share of the ex-proprietary tenancy which had been mortgaged to C, without any payment whatever under the mortgage deed, and E's possession was therefore from that time forward, as regards that share, adverse to the plaintiff; (ii) that as to the two-thirds mortgaged to A and B as the plaintiff was not entitled to possession of his ex-proprietary rights till the mortgages were redeemed, his rights might be recorded as existing subject to the mortgage rights of A and B. Ram Dhari Singh v. Jugul Singh, 33 Ind. Cas. 483.

puisne mortgagee—Decree by puisne mortgagee, application for—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 6—Person and other property of judgment-debtor liable to balance of money due.

A decree-holder obtained a decree for a sale of the property mortgaged against the judgment-debtor in August 1912. That decree was made absolute in May 1913. The property mortgaged was meanwhile sold in execution of a prior mortgage decree obtained by a third party to which the decree-holder was a party. The decree-holder did not pay the money due on the prior mortgage and allowed the mortgaged property to be sold, contending himself with a small sum of money received by him out of the surplus sale-proceeds in part satisfaction of puisne encumbrance. In October 1913 he applied for a decree under O. XXXIV, r. 6 of the Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908) for the balance of the money due to him against the person and other property of the judgment-debtor.

Held that the decree-holder was entitled to obtain a decree for the balance due on his mortgage against the person and other property of the judgment-debtor; that because he was a party to decree in execution of which the mortgaged property was sold he was bound by the sale and could not bring the mortgaged property to sale again in execution of his decree; and that it was not obligatory on him to redeem the prior mortgage and if the property could not be sold again it was open to him to give up his lien and seek a decree for the balance due to him under O. XXXIV, r. 6 of the Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908). Wasil Ali v. Jang Bahadur Singh, 34 Ind. Cas. 48.

Held also that the onus must be thrown on the defendants who have been shown to be in possession as mortgagees in 1877 and still in possession in 1913, that the defendants having failed to show any change in the circumstances between the two termini, the defendants are in possession as mortgagees and that they have not discharged the onus of showing that the plaintiff's equity of redemption has been extinguished. Pakaria v. Where part of the mortgage money was left in deposit with the mortgagee and was to be taken from time to time by the mortgagor on receipts to be furnished by him, the mortgagor is entitled to sue for such amount. It is not a suit to enforce a contract to lend money. (49) Mortgage—Consideration, plea regarding—Onus—Mahomedan Law—Alienation by mother as de facto guardian of minor's son—Minor's benefit—Onus—Registrar—Admission re-signing of blank sheets only—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), S. 35 (3).

Where a document is in the hands of the mortgagee, the presumption is that consideration passed. The onus is on the mortgagor pleading want of consideration. The first step in throwing the burden on the other side, is a statement of fact which might render it probable that the mortgagor executed the mortgage without consideration.

Where a Mahomedan mother, as de facto guardian of her minor son, undertakes to alienate or encumber her minor son's property, the burden of proof is on the alienor or mortgagee to prove that the transaction was for the benefit of the minor (a). The paying of the debt of the brother of the minor having no interest in the property of the minor, though a fine act, is a quixotic act. Such a transaction cannot be entered into by the mother, and is void against the minor unless accepted by him on his attaining his majority.

If there has been no admission of execution of a document the Registrar has no jurisdiction to register the document (b).

Execution consists in signing a document written out and read over, and understood, and does not consist of merely signing a name upon a blank sheet of paper. To be executed, a document must be in existence; where there is no document in existence, there cannot be execution. Where an executant clearly says that he signed on blank paper and that the document which he contemplated, the statement is a denial, not an admission of execution (c). Ebadut Ali v. There were two mortgages to two persons, the first being usufructuary and the second simple. The second mortgagee got a decree and purchased in execution in January 1898. The prior mortgagee then brought the property to sale in execution of his decree obtained subsequently in 1898 and got symbolical possession on the 2nd August 1901.

The sale was confirmed on the 31st August 1901. In a suit on 20-2-1911 to eject by the first mortgagee, the second mortgagee held that the 1st mortgagee could not eject the second mortgagee if the latter desired to redeem (a). Spencer, J.—A mortgage without consideration is a nullity and so inoperative and it creates no charge on the property as against a subsequent purchaser (b).

Kumaraswami Sastri, J.—It is well established that in cases of sales and assignments, mere non-payment of purchase money would not vitiate the transaction, and in such cases, so long as the deed stands, it is no concern of a person, who was no party to the transaction, to call in question, the non-payment of consideration.

Where the transfer itself is impeached on the ground of its being a colourable transaction, or of its being otherwise invalid in law, different considerations will prevail (c).

A mortgage is prima facie security for a debt, and, where the debt does not exist, it is difficult to see how the security can be enforced. Where, therefore, a puisne incumbrancer or a person in possession of mortgaged property and claiming title thereto, succeeds in showing that there was no debt, it is difficult to see how the property can be ordered to be sold (d). Kumarappan Chettiar v. Narayanan Chettiar, 35 Ind. Cas. 455.

It was not alleged by the plaintiffs that B was benamadar for them and it was clear that B purchased the property for himself.

Held (i) that the plaintiffs' equity (if any) attached to the purchase money and not to the property purchased, and (ii) that their right to the purchase money was barred by time, (iii) that S. 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, was not applicable to the case. Ganesh Lal v. —3.—By Conditional Sale.

(1) Oral agreement putting mortgagee in possession in lieu of interest—Evidence of such agreement, admissibility of—Evidence Act, S. 92.

When after executing a mortgage by conditional sale the mortgagor put the mortgagee in possession of the property mortgaged under an oral agreement, authorising the mortgagee to enjoy the profits and devote the amount realized towards satisfaction of the interest; held, that there was nothing illegal in the agreement, and evidence to prove it was admissible. There is nothing in such an agreement which varies, contradicts or adds to the terms of the original deed. On the other hand, it merely provides for the satisfaction of one of the conditions of the deed. Jagatpal Singh v. Harnam Singh, 19 O.C. 166 = 34 Ind. Cas. 745.

—5.—Equitable.

(1) Validity of equitable mortgage in places where Transfer of Property Act does not obtain—Priority of such mortgage over subsequent registered mortgage with or without notice—S. 49, Registration Act (1977)—Applicability—Title-deeds whether include copies where originals are lost—Intention to keep alive prior mortgage—Presumption—Merger.

In the Punjab and in other places where the Transfer of Property Act does not obtain, a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds is a valid legal mortgage and has the same legal effect as a mortgage created by any other means recognized by law; the English doctrine of the legal estate prevailing over the equitable estate does not obtain in a country where there is no distinction between legal and equitable estates; and consequently a mortgagee, who holds a registered deed of mortgage, cannot claim priority over an earlier mortgage created by deposit of title-deeds (a).

The mortgage by deposit of deeds is a complete act and not an executory agreement, and therefore S. 48 of the Registration Act, which gives priority to registered instruments as against oral agreements not followed by delivery of possession of the property concerned, does not apply (b); and the question of notice, actual or constructive, of the previous equitable mortgage does not arise.

Title-deeds include copies of the deeds when the originals are not forthcoming (c).

Held on the facts that the title-deeds were deposited with the mortgagee with the intention of creating a mortgage charge in her favour over the property in suit.

Held also that the equitable mortgagee, when she accepted a later mortgage-deed, intended to keep the first mortgage alive for all purposes beneficial to herself. Mrs. Stewart v. Bank of Upper India, Ltd., Simla, 31 P.R. 1916=34 Ind. Cas. 937.

He executed three mortgage-deeds dated respectively March 27, 1864, April 3, 1864 and February 6, 1873. In the first he mortgaged 9½ biswas of a village called Paniyala along with other property, and in the second he mortgaged five more biswas of the same village. The third mortgage was for Rs. 15,000 and out of the consideration he declared Rs. 3,500 to be a further charge on the villages mortgaged in the deed of March 27, 1864. In the list of properties mentioned, Hala Nagla was entered instead of Paniyala. The plaintiffs acquired the rights of the mortgagors in Paniyala, and the defendants, representatives of the mortgagees, purchased portions of the mortgaged property: Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem Paniyala on payment of the proportionate liability for the mortgages existing thereon, and that evidence was admissible for the purpose of showing that Paniyala was liable for the proportionate part of the further charge of Rs. 3,500, the entry in the mortgage-deed of 1873 of Hala Nagla being a case of misdescription and mutual mistake. *Mahabir Prasad v. (2) Redemption by one co-owner—Charge—Transfer of Property Act, S. 95—Sale by redeeming co-owner of such property—Suit for redemption by another co-owner—Limitation—Limitation Act (1877), Sch. II, Arts. 144, 148, 134.

A had four sons K, Y, N and F. The plaintiff is the son of Y. On August 13, 1860, A made a usufructuary mortgage of some family property in favour of D and then died. F made a mortgage of the property to the father of B in order to raise money to pay off the mortgage in favour of D. The mortgage of 1860 was thus paid off. F's mortgagee remained in possession as such for nearly twenty years until May 26, 1898, when F sold the property to B and the vendee remained in possession since then till 1912, the date of the suit. The plaintiff brought this suit to redeem the mortgage of 1860. In the mortgage of 1877, F stated that the property was his maurusi (ancestral) village and that he owned the share. It was assumed that F was separate but that the property belonging to the family had not been divided:

Held that when, in 1877, F redeemed the mortgage of 1860, he acquired a charge on the plaintiff's share and inasmuch as he asserted a title in himself adversely to the true owners and dealt with the property by way of sale, the suit was barred by Art. 144, Sch. II of the Limitation Act, 1877, and neither Art. 148, nor Art. 134 applied to it. Jai Kishen Joshi v. Budhan and Joshi, 14 A.L.J. 41 = 38 A. 138 = 34 Ind. Cas. 244.

(4) Mortgagor and mortgagee—Money-decree—Execution—Sale of the equity of redemption—Purchase by mortgagee—No objection by mortgagor for sale—Loss of right to redeem—Transfer of Property Act, S. 99.

When the mortgagee purchased the equity of redemption of the mortgagor in execution of a money-decree obtained by the former against the latter in a suit not arising out of the mortgage and the mortgagor did not object to the confirmation of the sale:

Held, the mortgagor lost the right of redemption, notwithstanding that the sale of the equity of redemption was in contravention of S. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act. Arjuna Reddy v. Venkatachela Asari, 19 M.L.T. 121=32 Ind. Cas. 611=5 L.W. 242=32 M.L. J. 525.

A brought a declaratory suit to the effect that a certain land had not been redeemed. The defendant alleged payment to C (a Hindu widow) who was recorded in Revenue papers as mortgagee of 2/3 share, but not in actual possession. He made some payments to D, and E which ought to have been made to C, had he thought C had any right as one of the mortgagees. He also in certain previous suits did not implead C as a party which he should have done had he thought C had any right.

Held, that payment in good faith to C was not proved.

Held, also, that a receipt giving no details and not supported by reliable evidence as to the actual amount paid was of very little value, even though there was evidence to the effect that a substantial sum had actually been paid. Muhammad Khan v. Lala Kishore Chand, 33 P.L.R. 1916.

(6) Suit for redemption—First suit for redemption withdrawn—Second suit for redemption of mortgage of another date—Mortgage found invalid—Principle of saving defendant from multiplicity of suits—Defendant's admission of a mortgage—Decree for redemption.

When both parties appeared on the date fixed for the trial of the suit and at their request the suit was struck off as settled, the suit must be held to have been withdrawn by the plaintiff and cannot be held to have been dismissed for default of the appearance of both parties. Such abandonment is done at the risk of the plaintiff's losing all right to litigate the subject-matter of the claim or claims so abandoned or withdrawn from the adjudication of the Court, unless he got the permission of the Court to re-litigate the same.

Where, plaintiffs brought a first suit to redeem a mortgage of 1893 which was withdrawn and then brought another suit to redeem a later mortgage of 1897 which was found to be an invalid transaction, the plaintiff cannot be allowed to treat the latter suit as a suit for the redemption of the earlier mortgage as it would be barred by O. XXIII, r. 1, cl. 3 of the Civ. Pro. Code.

The plaintiff's cause of action, into whatever prolean forms it may be moulded by the ingenuity of pleaders, is to be regarded as the same, if it rests on facts which are integrally connected with those upon which a right and infringement of the right have already been once asserted as a ground for the Court's interference.

The decision in 28 M. 406 must be deemed to have been overruled by the Full Bench decision in 37 M. 70 (a).

Where, in a suit for redemption, the plaintiff fails to prove the mortgage set up by him, the Court may allow the plaintiff to redeem on the basis of a different mortgage under which the defendant claims to hold. Damodaran Numbudripad v. Theyyanakkann, (1916) M. W.N. 171=32 Ind. Cas. 624.

Pro. Code, 1908, O. XXXIV, r. 14—Change in the law—Applicability of S. 99, Transfer of Property Act, to the Punjab.*

S mortgaged his house with possession to M, but S, remained in possession of the house as M's tenant on the strength of a deed of rent executed by S in favour of M. M sued S for arrears of rent and obtained a money decree in execution of which M purchased in Court auction, with the permission of the Court, the equity of redemption of the house. The auction sale was confirmed despite S's objections. S brought a regular suit to set aside the auction sale which was also dismissed. S then brought the present suit against M for redemption of the mortgage on the ground that M's purchase of the equity of redemption could not affect his right to redeem.

Held that, according to the principle embodied in r. 14, O. XXXIV, Civ. Pro. Code, the auction sale of the equity of redemption in favour of the present defendant was a perfectly good one, and since it was duly confirmed by a competent Court, it had the effect of extinguishing plaintiff's proprietary rights in the mortgaged house and his right of redemption was therefore lost.

In view of the change of law effected by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, the Courts of the Punjab, to which the Transfer of Property Act has never been extended, cannot recognize and act upon the technical rule embodied in S. 99, Transfer of Property Act.

R. 14, O. XXXIV, Civ. Pro. Code (1908), which has repealed S. 99, Transfer of Property Act, is restricted to claims arising only under the mortgage, and it is now competent to the mortgagee to have the equity of redemption sold in satisfaction of any debt which he might have against the mortgagor unconnected with the mortgage. *Behr Baksh v. A mortgagor who was a member of a village proprietary body died leaving no direct heir of his own. The plaintiff, who were of the same tribe and got as the mortgagor, sued, as members of the village proprietary body, to redeem lands belonging to the mortgagor. The village was, however, found to be homogeneous and did not consist of a number of proprietors of different tribes, religions and castes. The mortgagees though distantly related to the mortgagor were not proprietors in the village.

Held, that the mortgagees had no right to succeed and that the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem. Budhi Singh v. Mohan Singh, 40 P. W.R. 1916=32 Ind. Cas. 768.

(11) Suit by prior mortgagee and purchase by him in execution—Right of puisne mortgagee to redeem whether can be exercised after confirmation of sale—Suit for possession—Defendant whether can plead right to redeem when that right is barred—Omission of puisne mortgagee's name in execution proceedings—Irregularity—Effect.

A prior mortgagee got a decree upon his mortgage bond in 1897 and purchased the property in execution and obtained delivery in 1900. In 1902, a puisne mortgagee obtained a mortgage decree on the same property, executed the decree, bought the property in auction and obtained registration of his name in the Collectorate. The prior mortgagee now sued for declaration of title and confirmation of possession or in the alternative for recovery of possession.

The Court of first instance decreed the suit, but permitted the puisne mortgagee (defendant) to redeem. The lower appellate Court also decreed the suit, but held that the defendant was not entitled to redeem, as he failed to do so before the order absolute in the plaintiff's mortgage suit.

Held, on second appeal, that the right of redemption continued till the confirmation of sale (a). But as his right to redeem was barred, he ought not to be allowed to exercise that right as a defendant in the present suit for recovery of possession.

The puisne mortgagee also contended that the sale was not binding as his name was omitted in the execution proceedings in connection with the decree on which plaintiff based his title.

Held that such omission was merely an irregularity, and the sale, even though the mortgagee creditor was himself the purchaser, could not be considered a nullity (b). Syed Muhammad Rafi v. Syed Muhammad Askarf, 1 Pat. L.J. 261.

(13) Redemption, suit for—Burden of proof—Court's duty in such cases.

In a suit for redemption, the plaintiff, when he is put to strict proof and is out of possession, must stand or fall by the strength of his evidence and cannot depend upon the weakness of his adversary's case. In such cases, it is absolutely wrong to deal with the case of the defendant first and prove it to be worthless and then turn to that of the plaintiff. The Court should see whether the plaintiff has discharged the burden lying upon him; his case cannot be held to be true because the defendant has failed to prove his defence. La Aung v. (14) Onus probandi—One mortgagor redeeming the entire mortgage—Acknowledgment—Limitation Act (1908), S. 19, Sch. I, Art. 148.

In a suit by the representatives of some co-mortgagors for the redemption of their shares in certain property against the representatives of a co-mortgagor, the plaintiffs alleged that the mortgage had been made by one Sukhjit in favour of one Muhammad Husain in the year 1913, Sambit. The plaintiffs also relied on certain acknowledgments made by the defendant's predecessor-in-title. One of these was a dakhalnama executed by Ramlal in 1890 which contained a description of the property and was signed by Ramlal. The defendant contended that there was no mortgage, that he was absolute owner, that the acknowledgments had not been proved and that the suit was time-barred. It was held by the Court of appeal that the date of the mortgage had not been proved, but the acknowledgments were in respect of some mortgage and that the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem:—

Held, that the rule of limitation governing a suit of this kind was that laid down in Ashfuq Ahmed v. Wasir Ali (a), that Art. 148 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act applied, that is, the limitation extended for a period of 60 years from the date of execution of the mortgage or from the date when the mortgage money became due, and the burden was upon the plaintiffs of proving the mortgage that they had set up, and that it was for them to prove that the acknowledgment relied upon by them as contained in the dakhalnama had been made at a date within the period of limitation.

Held also that the acknowledgment contained in the dakhalnama amounted to nothing more than a description of the property purchased and was not an acknowledgment of a liability within the meaning of S. 19 of the

(15) Failure of mortgagee in possession to keep accounts—Effect—Failure to deposit redemption money within fixed time—No bar to hearing of second appeal.

It is the duty of a mortgagee in possession to keep accounts of all expenditure, and, if he does not, all the presumptions will be made in favour of the mortgagor, but failure to keep accounts does not ipso facto defeat a claim for compensation which is proved in other ways.

Where in a redemption suit, possession was decreed by the lower appellate Court to the mortgagor's vendee on payment of a specified sum, the fact that such sum was not deposited within the time fixed in the lower appellate Court's decree does not necessarily bar the hearing of a second appeal in the Chief Court (a).

Because the appellant has not deposited the redemption money in Court within the time ordered it cannot be said that there is no decree for redemption subsisting in his favour. Thakur Das v. Rada Kishen, 99 P.R. 1916.

Actual production of money is not necessary to constitute legal tender of the money due on a mortgage, especially when the mortgagee by words or conduct shows his determination not to accept it.

A suit for redemption is an offer to redeem, and if the defendant contests the suit and it is found that his case is not true, he must, under S. 76 (i) of the Transfer of Property Act, account for his gross receipts from the mortgaged property from the date of institution of the suit, and also forfeit all claim to interest from that date under S. 84. Maung Po Tun v. (17) Suit for redemption—Sale set up by defendant—Neither mortgage nor sale proved—Effect—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), S. 55 (6) (b).

In a suit for redemption, in which the defendant denies the mortgage alleged by the plaintiff and sets up a sale to him, the plaintiff cannot recover possession, when, by reason of the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act, the plaintiff cannot prove the mortgage sued on, and the defendant cannot prove the sale relied upon by him.

It is in accordance with the principles of sound commonsense and justice that a man who brings a case and fails to prove it should not get a decree on a different cause of action from that alleged by him.

Certain property was mortgaged to A, and then it was mortgaged to B. A brought a suit on his mortgage without impleading B. He obtained a decree and in execution thereof he purchased the property. B also brought a suit on his mortgage without impleading A. He obtained a decree and the property was purchased by C who went into possession. A obtained formal possession but failed to dispossess C. A suit was brought by A against B and C for an order that the money due under the prior mortgage might be paid to A or, in default, the plaintiff might be put into possession :

Held that the suit was maintainable, and that all the parties being before the Court the equities between them might be worked out and, C was entitled to nothing more than an opportunity of paying off the prior mortgage. Babu Lal v. Jalakia, 14 A.L.J. 1146.

(19) Redemption decree—Deposit of mortgage money by mortgagor—Title to get possession from date of deposit—Suit for profits by mortgagor—Period for which profits could be recovered.

The plaintiff obtained a preliminary decree for redemption against the defendant who was also the lambardar. The decree directed the mortgage money to be deposited in or before September. As a matter of fact the money was paid into Court in August, but actual possession over the share was not delivered to the plaintiff until a date in November which fell after the date when profits for kharif became payable. It was admitted that there was no accounting for kharif profits in the redemption suit :

Held, that a plaintiff in a redemption suit being entitled to possession as soon as he had deposited the money, the plaintiff's title to the profit in the present case arose from the date on which the mortgage money was put into Court. Ram Karan v. Achal Singh, 19 O.C. 161 = 35 Ind. Cas. 799.

Plaintiff purchased plaintiff properties subject to the payment of a mortgage on the property. He brought a suit for redemption of the property purchased by him. The defendant, mortgagee, set up a deed of further charge upon the property and pleaded that that money also should be paid before the plaintiff could redeem the property. The Court found that the deed which evidenced the alleged further charge did not amount to a hypothecation on the property but amounted to a simple money bond. Held that under the circumstances there could be no consolidation. The equity that existed between the original mortgagor and the mortgagee was a matter of personal obligation and did not estop the plaintiff from exercising the right of redemption over the property purchased by him until he satisfied the amount due under the simple money bond. (3) Suit on prior mortgage—Puisne mortgagee not a party—Sale in execution pending suit by puisne mortgagee against prior mortgagee and mortgagor—Right of purchaser—Right of puisne mortgagee to bring to sale the equity of redemption.

A puisne mortgagee is entitled to a sale of the property secured by his mortgage, subject to the rights of the first mortgagee, even after the property had been sold in execution of a decree obtained by the first mortgagee in a suit to which the puisne mortgagee was not a party. If a person purchases the property in execution of the prior mortgagee's decree during the pendency of the suit brought by the puisne mortgagee for the sale of the mortgaged property against the prior mortgagee and the mortgagor, the purchaser would be bound by the result of any proceedings which may be taken in execution of the decree obtained in that suit, to the same extent to which the prior mortgagee, who was a party to it, can be bound. The purchaser is not entitled to stop the sale of the equity of redemption (a). Kundan Lal v. Wajid Husain, 32 Ind. Cas. 359.

(1) Lease to mortgagors—Lessee agreeing to pay rent in cash and deliver certain other things in kind—Rasum zemindari—Rent or cess—Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), Ss. 56, 86.

A usufructuary mortgage was made of certain zemindari property. The mortgagees let the property to the mortgagors who agreed to pay as rent a certain sum of money in cash. In addition to this they agreed to deliver certain articles, such as blusa, and things of the kind which were described in the kabuliat as rasum zemindari. In a suit to recover rent it was objected that the latter articles were not recoverable as they were cesses which had not been recorded by the settlement officer:

Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the blusa, etc., as part of their rent which had been agreed to be paid partially in cash and partially in kind. Rangilal v. Jassa, 14 A.L.J. 393=38 A. 286=35 Ind. Cas. 208 (F.B.).

(5) Property sold under Revenue Sale Act—Mortgage right—Extinction—Personal covenant—Right to sue—Purchaser letting subsequently to mortgagee—Effects, Surplus proceeds—Transfer of Property Act, 1882, S. 90—Mortgagors jointly and severally liable.

Plaintiff had a usufructuary mortgage bond executed in his favour in 1891. The mortgaged property was sold out by the Revenue Authorities for arrears due under Revenue Sale Act in 1905. The auction purchaser got actual possession of the land in 1906 and conveyed it in 1908 to some person as a gift and the donee on that very date let off a major portion to the mortgagee under the deed of 1891. The said mortgagee brought a suit in 1911 on the basis of his mortgage of 1891 for a personal decree against the mortgagors.

Held that the suit was not barred by limitation, the cause of action having accrued to the said mortgagee in 1906 when he was ousted from the property: that under the Revenue Sale Act, 1905, the mortgage security having been extinguished, the subsequent re-letting to the mortgagee of 1891 had not the effect of operation as a graft on the original interest of the mortgagor. In order that the doctrine of graft could apply there must be some life in the old stock, that is, in the old interest (a).

S. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act has no application except in cases where the mortgage-deed has already been sued upon and a decree granted as against the land and the proceeds of the sale of the land prove insufficient to discharge the mortgage-debt. It has always been recognised that a mortgagee has the right to proceed concurrently with all the remedies he is entitled to, to enable him to realize the mortgage-debt. If he has elected to proceed on the personal covenant contained in the mortgage-deed, he is clearly entitled to do so.

Mortgagors are jointly and severally liable, though as between themselves, there may be contribution. Raja Ram Lal v. Hauman Upadhyaya, 35 Ind. Cas. 43.

In a suit by a mortgagee to enforce his mortgage, it is irregular to join as parties persons who set up adverse claims to the mortgaged property.

Where in a mortgage suit a person who claimed a certain share in the mortgaged property as against the mortgagor under a title adverse to his, was made a party defendant, and her claim was allowed in part by the trial Court, but wholly disallowed by the High Court, and she sought to appeal from that decree to His Majesty in Council.

Held—That the subject-matter of the appeal was the property which she was claiming and its value was the value of that property and not the value of the mortgage debt. *Mussammat Radha Kunwar v. (1) Matathipathi—Succession to—Usage—Proof—Dwandwa mutts of South Canara—Nomination—Evidence Act, Ss. 32, 33—Statements of deceased persons regarding facts in issue—Admissibility of—Facts in issue and relevant facts.

There is no universal rule of law relating to succession to a Matathipathi. Each case must be determined by reference to the past custom or usage of the particular institution.

No general rule can be laid down as to the nature or quantum of proof necessary to establish a custom in any particular case except that it must be proved by clear and cogent evidence. In cases where the custom set up is not at variance with law, the Court will not insist upon such strict proof thereof as when the custom set up is in derogation of the general law. Although ordinarily the Courts would require proof of at least more than one instance in which the alleged customary right has been exercised in the manner alleged still there is no hard and fast rule to that effect. Where the occasions for the exercise of the right are, in the nature of things, very rare and far between, the Courts will not insist by calling for proof of numerous instances when the right was exercised as alleged. In proper cases even proof of a single instance may be sufficient to establish a custom (a). Where a right is found to have been exercised in a certain way upon the only occasions when it is known to have arisen during the last 150 years there is strong evidence to support the theory that that particular method of exercising the right is the customary one, especially where there is no evidence of any custom other than the one set up.

The existence of such custom is also rendered probable by the fact that similar mutts in the same neighbourhood also follow the same custom.

In the Udipi Mutts of South Canara the mode of succession is for the Swami of the Mutt to appoint a successor before he dies who becomes the Swami after his death. But if the Swami dies without appointing his successor or there is a vacancy in the headship of the Mutt, such power of appointment is vested in the Swami of the Dwandwa or sister Mutt.

According to the usage of the Madwa Mutts for the valid appointment of a successor, the person to be appointed must be a Sanyasi (i.e., a person who has renounced all worldly ties and has been initiated into the brotherhood by a person competent to make the nomination) and the Sanyasam must have been received by him when he was a bala brahmachari (i.e. a bachelor below the age of 15) at the time of and with a view to such appointment.

A fact in issue is a relevant fact and statements of deceased persons relating to a fact in issue is admissible under S. 32, cl. 4 of the Evidence Act (b).

Depositions of deceased persons are not admissible under S. 33 of the Evidence Act unless the subject-matter of the dispute in the two suits is the same and also the subsequent suit is between the same parties or their representatives in interest (c).

Abdur Rahim, J.—A fact in issue is always a relevant fact and there is no reason for excluding from the operation of S. 32, cl. 4 of the Indian Evidence Act statements relating to facts in issue. If they were to be excluded much valuable evidence hitherto considered admissible would be unavailable as will be apparent from the illustrations to S. 32 and also the definitions of facts in issue and relevant facts.

Phillips, J.—A fact must either be relevant or irrelevant and there is no third class of facts in issue which are neither relevant nor irrelevant. To hold that facts in issue are not relevant facts within the meaning of S. 32 of the Evidence Act would lead to startling results and most important evidence would then be shut out by the Court framing issues as regards all relevant facts. Facts in issue are facts about which there is a question in issue between the parties and though all relevant facts are not necessarily facts in issue, still facts in issue cannot be other than relevant to the determination of the suit and this is clear from the language of S. 6 of the Evidence Act. Raghubhushana Thirtaswami v. Where a settlement decree awarded a Nankar allowance of 10 per cent. on the Hasilat Nikasi of a particular village, held, that the calculation of the property on the rental of which the Nankar was to be calculated indicated the stock out of which it was to be paid and must therefore be deemed to be a charge upon the village.

Held further, that money charged on the rents and profits of land is treated as money charged on immovable property for the purposes of Art. 132, Limitation Act, read with S. 3, cl. (25) of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897). Ram Jiawan v. Judu Nath, 18 O.C. 380 = 33 Ind. Cas. 555.

(2) Nankar payable out of profits of land, nature of—Nankar, whether a charge—Immovable property—Limitation Act, Art. 132.

A right to receive a cash Nankar out of the profits of a particular village is a benefit to arise out of land and is therefore "immovable property" as defined by S. 3 of Act X of 1897 and is at all events a hag of the nature contemplated by the explanation appended to Art. 132, Limitation Act.

Held also, that it must be treated as money charged upon immovable property. Deputy Commissioner, Fyzabad for Ajodhya Estate v. Jagjiwan Bakhsh Singh, 19 O.C. 49 = 33 Ind. Cas. 461.

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881).

(1) Bill of exchange—Acceptance of the bill—On due date, the acceptor claiming set off of amounts owing to him by the bank—Tender of the balance—Release of the drawer by such tender.

On the 31st July 1913, N drew a bill of exchange for Rs. 10,000, on M payable to the plaintiff-bank twelve months after date: the bill was duly accepted by M. The plaintiff-bank went into liquidation on the 23rd November 1913: it was indebted to M in a sum of Rs. 8,000. The bill fell due on the 3rd August 1914 and as it was not paid that day, it was treated as dishonored. Notice of dishonor was given to N on the 4th idem. On the 29th, M tendered to the plaintiff bank the balance of Rs. 10,000 after setting off his claim against the bank. The plaintiff-bank declined to accept the tender and sued N for the money. M, who was brought in as a third party, paid the balance into Court and contended that the plaintiff's claim was satisfied:

Held, (1) that, as between the liquidator of the Bank and M (the acceptor), the liquidator was not entitled to claim from him the full amount of the acceptance and leave him to prove his claim in liquidation and trust to see what dividend he would get; but that the liquidator was bound to allow a set off;

(2) that, as M did not pay on the due date, N's liability was running from 3rd August to 29th August; but when M., the principal debtor, made a good tender of what was due to him on his acceptance, that tender extinguished the liability of N: and

(3) that, assuming that the tender was not made and that the liability of the drawer as a surety still continued, N was still entitled to the benefit of any set off which existed in favour of the principal debtor, M, as against the creditor. Indian Specie Bank, Ltd. v. It is not open to the maker of a promissory note payable on demand to plead against a holder in due course that he paid the money to the payee before the endorsement (a).

S. 60 of the Negotiable Instruments Act which prohibits negotiation by the payee after payment or satisfaction does not effect a holder in due course who under the terms of S. 9 becomes the possessor of the note for consideration before the amount mentioned in it becomes payable and not before the amount is paid.

Where the maker who pays off the amount due under the note fails to secure the return of the same, he cannot be said to have acted in good faith and without negligence and consequently his payment is not in due course and he is not discharged from liability under S. 82 of the Act.

The maker must suffer for the consequences of his carelessness in having left the note with the payee which enabled the latter to endorse it to the plaintiff.

(11) Ss. 32, 37 and 44—Principles governing liability of maker etc.—Execution of note to help friend of maker—Subsequent advance to third party—Consideration for note—Reduction of liability of maker on less amount being advanced.

In dealing with Negotiable Instruments there are two principles to be borne in mind. First, the moment it is admitted that the maker of a note or acceptor of a bill made or accepted it, the onus is upon him to get rid of his liability. It is not for the plaintiff, unless he is charged with fraud and some prima facie case is made against him, to explain the circumstances at all; and secondly, except under peculiar circumstances, the proof of which lies upon the defendant, a man who signs a bill is presumed to be liable for the whole amount appearing on the face of the document.

—(Continued).

Where a promissory note was executed to help a friend of the maker, for raising money on it, it would be considered to have been executed for consideration, if subsequent to the execution of the document money is advanced on it to a third party though it was executed in the absence and without the knowledge of the payee.

Under S. 44 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, the liability of the maker would be reduced proportionately if the amount advanced on it by the payee be found less than is shown in the promissory note. Nazir Ali v. Kher Chand, 36 Ind. Cas. 996.

A separate written agreement to pay interest, made simultaneously with the execution of a promissory note, but not embodied therein, is valid, and the whole of the terms of such agreement, can be enforced as between the original parties to the two documents, before any negotiation of the promissory-note has been made (a).

S. 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, does not purport to deprive those dealing with such instruments of the freedom of contract possessed by other contracting parties. It purports to confer a right to interest, not to take away such a right otherwise existing (b). Rangappa v. Bismilla Khan, 12 N.L.R. 9 = 32 Ind. Cas. 238.

Nuisance.

Nuisance—(Continued).

The principle governing the law as to public and private nuisances and the right of action, thereon is the same both in England and in India. It is this, that, no private action can be maintained for a public injury. For instance such an action does not lie for obstructing a man's passage, in a highway, because ordinarily, he has no more damage than other members of the public. The common rule is that no one shall have an action for what every one suffers. An obstruction of a public thoroughfare is always a public nuisance, and where it is not legalized by law or contract it is (1) indictable and (2) a cause of action for a public suit. Such a suit is now expressly provided for by S. 91 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908. But a private nuisance is always subject to a suit by the person or persons injured by it, and in such a case it is not necessary to show special injury any more than necessarily follows from the nature of the nuisance.

An obstruction of passage on a public highway may be common or particular, and the injury caused by it may be public or private(a).

Where a street is blocked so as to stop the public generally, and, among them, a religious procession, a private action will not lie at the instance of those promoting the procession against the person or persons responsible for the obstruction. The suit would have to be brought by relators representing the public. It would now, in British India, be a suit under S. 91 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908. But if there was no obstruction of the general public, but only of a particular religious procession, which was the concern of no one except those promoting and those opposing it, that would be a case of private injury, and a suit by the person injured would lie (b).

The right of every class of the community to use the public streets for religious and musical processions, subject to the law against nuisances is a well recognized civil right (c).

When a religious procession, accompanied by music, passes along a public street, the person or sect promoting such procession is exercising a civil right. An unlawful infringement of that right will give a cause of action. If the procession is interfered with, as the result of an obstruction common to all persons using the same street, then the civil remedy lies in a relator suit only, and no private action can be maintained; but if the obstruction is particular to the procession, every one else being allowed to pass unobstructed, then there is obviously a private injury only, and the person or persons entitled to carry out the procession can sue the person or persons obstructing. Conversely the music, or other noise of the procession, may be a cause of general inconvenience to the public occupying the houses on each side of the street, or the guns, fireworks or torches may be a cause of general danger to the public in the neighbourhood. Here again, there is a public nuisance, to be controlled only by an indictment or public suit. But where the music offends no one, except the congregation in a particular mosque, or the noise causes danger only to a particular person who lies seriously ill, then the matter is not a public concern, and a private suit will be sustained (d).

Offending the sentiments of a particular class or sect is not indictable as a public nuisance, though it may be a private nuisance (a).

The Full Bench decision in 18 C.W.N. 971 has impliedly laid down that an occupancy holding or any part of it cannot be sold in execution of a decree for money obtained against the raiyat, when the raiyat objects, even if the landlords give their consent to the sale.

The above rule does not, as expressly laid down by the Full Bench, apply to a sale held in execution of a decree founded on a mortgage or a charge voluntarily created by the raiyat.

H, a Hindu, who had separated from his brothers, acquired considerable property by money lending and died in 1892 leaving a widow K and several daughters and a daughter's son P by a predeceased wife. K, who was not a woman of business, came under the influence of F, a separated brother of H, and F managed her properties and K believed that he was acting as her manager until he died in 1908. Shortly after H's death, F in collusion with P got up a sham arbitration proceeding, which resulted in an award by which the properties left by H were divided up amongst the various members of the family, K receiving only a share. The true nature and effect of the proceedings were concealed from her and she was misled and betrayed by F and P, both of whom had interests adverse to her and were acting in their own interests. In a suit by another member of the family to enforce, in his right under the award, a mortgage effected by F from advances made out of properties left by H, K denied the plaintiff's title altogether and claimed the entire mortgage money in her right as the widow of H. The High Court held that the arbitration was a sham, that it had not been shown that K had any independent advice or understood the effect of the so-called award on her interests, and believing that she never knowingly consented to the division of her husband's estate dismissed the suit.

Held, by the Judicial Committee (without dissenting from the conclusions of the High Court), that, from the death of K's husband, F stood to her in a fiduciary relationship which continued till he died, and she was entitled to receive from him a full disclosure of all the affairs which concerned her.

That F having betrayed the confidence K reposed in him, the question in the case was not whether K knew what she was doing, had done or proposed to do, but how her intention to act was produced, whether all that care and providence was placed round her as against those who advised her, which, from their situation and relation with respect to her, they were bound to exert on her behalf.

That fraud, such as there was in this case, could not be condoned unless there was full knowledge of the facts and of the rights arising out of those facts and the parties were at arm's length(a).

That the Limitation Act was no bar to her defence, and even if she were suing to recover property of which she was deprived by the award, time would not, under the circumstances of the case, begin to run against her until F died.

That the award regarded as an award, or as a document embodying a family arrangement, was a nullity. Sri Krishan Lal v. Musammam Kashmiro, 20 C.W.N. 957=3 L.W. 528= (1916) M.W.N. 433=31 M.L.J. 362=14 A.L.J. 1236=34 Ind. Cas. 37 (P.C.).

Pardanashin' Ladies—(Concluded).

There are certain positions in which the existence of undue influence will be presumed, e.g. in case of transaction with pardanashin ladies; that is to say, it will be for the party who in such circumstances affirms the bona fides of a transaction to substantiate his affirmation (a).

A knowledge of letters and of figures and a capacity of dealing at first hand to some extent with her tenants, will not convert a pardanashin woman into a woman of the world so as to rebut the presumption of undue influence in respect of a transaction with such a woman.

When possession is not delivered, the plaintiff's claim for a declaratory relief is not barred by S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act. Nisar Husain v. Ashraf-un-nissa, 35 Ind. Cas. 395.

(1) Civ. Pro. Code, O. I, rr. 3 and 10—Necessary parties to suit—Intermediate purchaser—If necessary parties.

As to who is a necessary party appears from O. I, rr. 3 and 10. There are two conditions to be satisfied: First, there must be a right to some relief against him in respect of the matter involved in the suit, and second, that his presence should be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit. Hence in a suit to recover from the person in possession of property alleged to have been wrongly alienated by plaintiff's guardian during his minority, neither of the above stated two conditions makes any of the intermediate purchasers a necessary party where the plaintiff claimed no relief against any of them and as the question of the title and right of possession to the land could be decided without their presence. Gehmal v. Partition.

(1) Suit for, by lessee against co-sharers of lessor, if maintainable.

Two properties A and B were jointly owned by X and Y. By mutual arrangement X held possession of A, while Y of B, but no final and definitive partition was effected between the parties. Y, though in possession of B, transferred to Z his one-half share in A:

Held, that Z was entitled to claim partition as against X.

A partition suit can include no property wherein each of the parties to the suit does not claim an interest. Sris Chandra Datta Chaudhuri v. Mahima Chandra Datta Chaudhuri, 23 C.L.J. 331 = 33 Ind. Cas. 17.

(2) Partition suit—Court-fee—Plaintiff in possession of property sought to be divided—Mode of partition.

The suit was instituted for possession by partition of joint land. At a subsequent stage houses were included in the claim. A preliminary decree was passed settling shares of the parties and a Commissioner was appointed. He was directed that the separate prices of immovable property shall be auctioned by the Commissioner among the parties, the share-holders only being allowed bid, the total sum thus raised to be divided among the parties in the proportionate shares settled by Court. The defendant appealed and objected to the mode of partition adopted by the Court and paid Rs. 10 as Court-fee. It was objected by the respondent that the Court-fee was insufficient.

Held, that, under the circumstances, the Court-fee was sufficient under Art. 17, cl. vi, Sch. II of the Court Fees Act, and S. 7 (iv) (b) was not applicable to the case (a).

Held, that the mode of partition was open to objection and the fact that the appellant had bid at the auction did not estop him from filing his appeal. The Chief Court ordered partition to be made in the ordinary way by allotting to each sharer houses approximately of the value of his share, at the same time respecting so far as possible previous actual possession, any small excess or deficiency being made good by money payment. Fatteh Chand v. Bilas Rai, 61 P. L.R. 1916 = 99 P.W.R. 1916 = 96 P.R. 1916 = 140 P.W.R. 1916 = 34 Ind. Cas. 857.

IV of S. 11, Civ. Pro. Code (1908).*

In a previous partition suit instituted by Y against the present plaintiff's vendor T and the present defendants, an issue was raised as to the share of T being subject to the mokurari interest of the other defendants but was expunged by the order of the Court. But when the partition was actually carried into effect, the present defendants were allotted possession not only of their proprietary share but also the mokurari of the share which they claimed to hold under the daughter of T. In a subsequent partition suit instituted by the vendee of T against the defendants for a declaration that T's share was not subject to any mokurari and for allotting to the plaintiffs a separate takhta out of the takhta which was allotted to the defendants in the previous suit:

Held—that the question was not expressly decided in the previous suit and it was impossible to hold that a decision might and ought to have been obtained in the previous partition suit by T or the present plaintiffs, and that the defendants failed to make out that the plaintiffs were barred by the rule of res judicata. *Syed Latif Hussain v. (4) Partition suit—Omission by plaintiff to put in some properties in the list of joint properties in the plaint—Dismissal of suit—Power of amendment of plaint by the first Court as also by the appellate Court—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), S. 153. O. VI, r. 17.

Partition—(Continued).

Per Jwala Prasad, J.—In a suit for partition of joint family property by a Hindu, all the properties must be included in the action, and the reason for this proposition is to save the parties from multiplicity of proceedings. If by inadvertence, mistake or fraud of any of the parties, some of the joint properties are not partitioned in the original suit, there will be no bar, after the partition, to have the properties, excluded at the first partition, divided when the mistake or fraud is discovered (a).

O. VI, r. 17, enables the Court to allow either party to alter or amend his pleadings at any stage on such terms as may be just. S. 153 Civ. Pro. Code, empowers the Court to make itself all necessary amendments for the purpose of determining the real questions or issues raised in the action. This power is vested both in the original as well as in the appellate Court (b).

Per Atkinson, J.—To avoid multiplicity of suits, the law has endowed all Courts in all countries with just and most ample powers of amendment. The widest power of amendment is given not only to the primary Court but to the High Court, which enables the Court to try all matters properly in dispute between the parties Mukunda Lal Chakravarti v. (5) Partition suit—Preliminary decree, appeal against—Final decree passed pending the appeal against preliminary decree—No appeal filed against final decree—Whether appeal against preliminary decree can proceed.

Where in a partition suit, a preliminary decree was passed on 29th May 1913, and an appeal was filed against it on 3rd July 1913, but a final decree was passed on 27th September 1913 despite the objection of the appellant that the final decree should not be passed until the appeal had been disposed of, and no appeal was filed against the final decree, and the hearing of the appeal against the preliminary decree was objected to on the ground that the appeal could not proceed inasmuch as a final decree had been passed in the case and no appeal had been preferred against that decree.

Held, on a review of authorities, that the preliminary objection should be overruled. The appeal could be heard although a final decree had been passed in the case and no appeal had been filed against that decree (a).

18 C.L.J. 321; 27 Ind. Cas. 35; 33 Ind. Cas. 137; 33 Ind. Cas. 146, were distinguishable, because in those cases the final decree had been passed before the appeal against the preliminary decree was filed.

Per Sharfuddin, J.—A preliminary decree in a partition suit has existence independent of the final decree and the final decree really is dependent upon and subordinate to the preliminary decree, and instead of extinguishing a preliminary decree gives effect to it.

(6) Suit for, if maintainable by a lessee of mining rights for a term against lessor's co-owners—Partition of underground mines and minerals, if possible—S. 2, Partition Act (IV of 1893).

According to the English authorities, it is clear that a lessee for a term of years may maintain a claim for partition. There is no reason for holding that a different rule prevails in India.

The authority of 20 C. 379 has been much shaken by the decision of the Full Bench in 24 C. 575 at p. 581=1 C.W.N. 406 (a).

There may be no special difficulty in effecting a partition of the underground mines and minerals, but in case any such difficulty arises, the power to order a sale under S. 2 of the Partition Act of 1893 may be exercised. Lalit Kishore Mitra v. In pursuance of that deed a permanent lease was executed in favour of the plaintiff. The latter remained in possession with other co-owners for about 7 years, when he brought a suit for partition. (4) Property bought with money belonging to firm, nature of—Partnership at will, how dissolved—Intention—Suit for dissolution of partnership and rendition of accounts—Limitation Act (1908), Sch. I, Art. 106.

In the case of a partnership at will, the intention to dissolve may be inferred from circumstances showing that a partner has in fact abandoned his interest in the concern (a).

A suit for the dissolution of partnership not entered into for a fixed term and for rendition of accounts was filed in July 1913. It appeared, however, that the business of the firm began to fail in Sambat 1963 (1906 A.D.) and was closed in Sambat 1966, the only work done subsequently consisted of realising assets, paying debts due to the creditors and recovering rents from tenants in occupancy of the immovable property belonging to the partnership.

Held, that, as the partnership came to an end long before three years prior to the date of institution of the suit for dissolution of partnership, the suit did not lie, and that the prayer for the rendition of the accounts of a dissolved partnership could not be granted in view of the lapse of the period prescribed by Art. 106 of the Limitation Act.

Lands or houses bought in the name of one partner and paid for by the firm or from the profits of the partnership business are prima facie partnership property, unless it be proved

(5) Promissory note for the partnership debt—Liability of partners not parties to the note—Consideration simultaneous with the passing of the note—If action on debt would lie.

There is really distinction between the case where the advance of money and execution of a promissory note are simultaneous and that in which the advance is antecedent to the execution of the note. In either case, failing suit on the note, an action on the debt would lie, though it may be open to the parties to show that it was intended that the debt should become merged in the negotiable instrument.

A partner is always liable for the partnership debt unless there is a restriction express or implied on the liability to be incurred by one partner on a bill or promissory note which may be executed by another partner for partnership purposes. Shanmuganatha Chettiar v. In a partnership suit, the sub-partners under a partner cannot be made parties under O. I, r. 3 of the Civ. Pro. Code. An assignee of a share of the profits of a partner is no partner in that partnership; has no demand against it; has no account in it and must be satisfied with a share of the profits given to his assignor. The sub-partners must ordinarily accept the account taken between the partners, but have not the right and are not subject to any duty to take part in the proceedings in which it is taken. The sub-partners are not required to concern themselves with the account to be taken at the dissolution of the partnership. Chidambaram Chetty v. (8) Winding up — Power of one partner, to mortgage firm's assets—Acknowledgment.

When a money-lending firm is being wound up, one partner has no authority to mortgage the firm's assets because he no longer has authority to borrow money, except perhaps in the case of necessity; and he cannot give an acknowledgment for a subsisting debt so as to bind the firm. Both the power to mortgage the firm's assets and the power to give an acknowledgment for an antecedent debt on behalf of the firm, must rest on the power to borrow on behalf of the firm. Any mortgage made by one partner under such circumstances would be binding on him alone (a). Malayandi Chetty v. Narayanan Chetty, 8 B.L.R. 363=9 Bur. L.T. 239=36 Ind. Cas. 225.

Patwari.

Rights and duties—How far can the acts of the patwari be binding on the master—Transfer of holding.

The patwari is a poorly paid underling employed only to collect rents due to his master and to grant receipts for the same. His implied authority would extend to all subordinate acts which are necessary or incidental to his express authority. He has no authority to manage any part of the property. It is not within the scope of the authority of a rent collector to consent on behalf of his master to the transfer of an occupancy holding. That is an important act to be performed only by a person having some at least of the powers of a manager.

It is not correct to say that it lies on the landlord to prove that the patwari had not authority to consent to the transfer of the holding. Landlords would be in a very difficult position if it were held that patwaris and other underlings should be presumed till the contrary is shown to have the power to sign away their masters' rights. *A. Pauper Appeal.

(1) Payment of Court-fees before conclusion of enquiry into pauperism—Appeal if within time—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), S. 5—Co-owner's suit for share of profits—"Tax, rate or assessment," meaning of—Lower Burma Town and Village Lands Act (IV of 1898), Ss. 24, 25, 26—Burma Land and Revenue Act (II of 1876).

When an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, presented beyond the proper time, is admitted under S. 5 of the Limitation Act, and enquiry as to pauperism is directed, but full Court fees as on the ordinary memorandum of appeal are paid before the enquiry is concluded, the appeal must be deemed to have been presented on the day on which application for leave to appeal as pauper was presented (a).

Although a suit for damages for use and occupation of land by one co-owner against another will not lie, such suit being founded upon an agreement between the parties, a co-owner is entitled to a share of the reasonable profits of the land, till he is put in possession on partition, and he should not be deprived of his rights merely because he put his claim in wrong and inappropriate words.

Under English Law, ground rent would not come within any of the terms "taxes, rates and assessments," but under Ss. 24, 25 and 26 of the Lower Burma Town and Village Lands Act, ground rent due to Government is in a different position from ground or other rent due to an ordinary landlord. These sections virtually make ground rent payable to Government a tax or assessment. Swan Tee v. Ma Ngwe, 9 Bur. L.T. 69=32 Ind. Cas. 630.

Where a Civil Court issued a warrant directed to the basht of the Court directing him to seize certain goods that were in accused's workshop, where the warrant specified no day upon which or before which it was to be executed and where the Nazir of the Court who sought to enter the defendant's house for the purpose of executing such warrant was resisted by the accused.

Held that the accused committed no offence. The Nazir was not the person who was clothed with lawful authority under the warrant to execute it. If he took upon himself the voluntary execution of it, the execution so made by him was not in pursuance of the warrant and therefore not lawful (a).

The warrant was bad also because it was absolutely blank in point of time, uncertain and would operate as a continuing authority indefinitely. Mohini Mohan Banerji v. King-Emperor, 1 Pat. L.J. 550=36 Ind. Cas. 871.

(1) Presumption backward—Permanent settlement, long possession after.

The presumption is no doubt one of fact: it is open to the Court to attach such weight as it likes or to hold, having regard to the other facts and circumstances of a particular case, that it is of no assistance to a party. Ram Kristo Chakraborty v. Narendra Kishore Roy, 35 Ind. Cas. 885.

(1) Vakalatnama, acceptance of, by pleader—Endorsement of acceptance in writing, if necessary—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), O. III, r. 4—High Court General Rules and Circular Orders, Ch. XI, r. 45 (e), Vol. I, p. 301, interpretation of—Endorsement if must be made in all cases before vakalatnama is filed.

An acceptance or act by a pleader named in a vakalatnama would, if allowed by Court expressly or by implication, be valid and operative even without an endorsement in writing on the vakalatnama by the pleader, but r. 45 (e), Ch. XI, p. 301, Vol. I, of the General Rules and Circular Orders of the High Court requiring acceptance of a vakalatnama by endorsement in writing ought to be complied with.

Per D. Chatterjee, J.—The Rule is a salutary rule proscribed for safe-guarding the interests of litigants and should be followed if the Moffusil in the manner indicated by the construction placed thereon by the High Court. Courts in the Moffusil must be specially careful in enforcing this rule in cases of compromise and withdrawal of cases and withdrawal of money or documents.

Pleader—(Continued).

Beachcroft, J.—Courts should insist on the Rule being observed by pleaders practising before them and the pleader who does not conform to it ought not to be heard.

Per Beachcroft, J. (on the interpretation of the Rule).—Quere—Whether, after the first acceptance, a mere endorsement of acceptance is sufficient in the case of pleaders subsequently appearing.

Per D. Chatterjee, J.—Such endorsement made in the presence of the Court or the sheristadar or the Bench Officer and dated (provided all the pleaders so accepting a vakalatnama are named in it) should be sufficient. Mohesh Chandra Addy v. Panchu Mudali, 20 C.W.N. 287=23 C.L.J. 297=32 Ind. Cas. 395=43 C. 884.

(2) Unprofessional conduct—Rules as to receiving instructions and accepting vakalatnamas, compliance with—Judge's duty to enforce compliance and take disciplinary measures on breach—One pleader appearing for another—Practice—Court to be informed.

Where a pleader, who was charged with having filed a petition for revival of a suit without authority, alleged in defence that, he had been instructed to appear by a clerk of the Muktear of the party, and that it had been (erroneously) represented to him that the vakalatnama filed in the original suit contained his name:

Held, that the pleader had acted in contravention of S. 13, cl (a) of the Legal Practitioners Act in the matter of receiving instructions.

That, even if the vakalatnama did contain the pleader's name, mere verbal acceptance of it would not be in compliance with cl. (e), r. 45, Ch. XI of the High Court's General Rules and Circular Orders.

Where a pleader appears for another pleader who is unable at the moment to attend Court, he ought to let the Court know that he is so appearing.

Per Richardson, J.—The rule in regard to the compliance of vakalatnamas should be strictly and scrupulously observed in the Subordinate Courts. In connection with the enforcement of the rules, it is always open to a Judge to refuse to hear a pleader or to refuse to allow a pleader to act who has not accepted a vakalatnama in the prescribed manner. It is also the duty of the Judge to take such action as may be appropriate, in regard to infractions of the rule which escape notice at the time and are brought to light subsequently. In the matter of Jogesh Chandra Gupta, 20 C.W.N. 283=17 Cr. (3) Unprofessional conduct—Pleader a party to suit, threatening to sue Court for unwarrantable and illegal act—Court's duty to enquire into complaints against subordinate officers—Anonymous complaint to Judge—S. 14, Legal Practitioners Act.

Two brothers, decree-holders, one of whom was a pleader, fixing on the date fixed for sale that the sale proclamation had not been duly published, applied for issue of a fresh sale proclamation on the ground that the non-publication was due to the negligence of the Court Officers. The Munsif rejected the petition and struck off the case, whereupon they caused a notice to be written and served on the Munsif threatening him with legal proceedings to recover the costs which the notice stated had been suffered owing to the Munsif's illegal and unwarrantable conduct. The District Judge to whom the matter was reported called on the pleader to apologise to the Munsif, but he refused, and the District Judge thereupon referred the matter to the High Court under S. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act, holding that the pleader was guilty of grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty.

Held, that in the circumstances, no action should be taken against the pleader under S. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act.

Per D. Chatterjee, J.—What was done in this case was done by an individual in the capacity of a suitor in respect of his supposed rights as a suitor, and of an imaginary injury done to him as a suitor and it had no connection whatever with his professional character or anything done by him professionally.

Per Beachcroft, J.—That, on the facts stated, the Munsif's order dismissing the execution case was wholly indefensible, and human nature being what it is, the action of the pleader was not to be taken too seriously, though he would have been well advised to offer the Munsif an apology.

power-of-attorney binding on client—Refusal of the client to get his work done by the person so appointed—His incompetency to get refund of fee—Pleader when not bound to refund fee—Practice—Extent of the liability of one of a deceased pleader's several representatives—Contract Act, S. 43—Revision under S. 25 of Act IX of 1887.

1. Where the printed power of attorney expressly authorizes a pleader to engage another legal practitioner either along with or instead of himself, the client is not entitled to claim refund of the fee if he refuses to get his work done by the legal practitioner so appointed by his pleader in his place, and his plea that he did not read the power of attorney at the time of signing it is altogether untenable as every person is supposed to have read the document which he signs.

2. The understanding between a pleader and his client is that the former shall do his best for the latter and if this is done no refund of fee is claimable.

3. A refund is no doubt claimable when the pleader through neglect does not appear. But when a pleader is prevented by sudden illness, or death or other unavoidable cause from appearing, refund of fee cannot legally be claimed.

4. Where refund can be legally allowed, one of the several representatives of a deceased pleader cannot be compelled to refund the whole. His liability extends to the extent of, and in proportion to, the share of the estate which he has actually got. S. 43 of the Contract Act does not apply here, because this is not a case of one of several joint promisors, but of one of several representatives of a single promisor. *Devil Parshad v. Held (ordering the pleader's suspension for three months), that to tamper with the Court's records is at all times a serious matter and the pleader had acted without due care and caution and without that sense of responsibility which should govern the conduct of all officers of the Court in matters of such importance. In the matter of a pleader, 20 C.W.N. 1069=36 Ind. - (5) Pleader's acts how far binding on clients—Pleader's authority to compromise—Vakalatnamah containing such authority whether sufficient—Form IV, Sind Courts Civil Circulars—O. III, r. 1, Civ. Pro. Code.

A pleader who is duly appointed to act for the party has authority to do all acts incidental to that general authority. He may make applications on behalf of his clients, he may make admissions binding against his clients and he may make an application referring the matter in dispute to arbitration. A presumption of such power is essential to the due conduct of the litigation. But no such presumption is necessary in the case of an authority to compromise; and the case of 8 S.L.R. 91 shows that a general power to compromise given in a vakalatnama is not only irregular as not warranted by Form IV, page 160, Sind Courts Civil Circulars, but is also inadequate to support a particular compromise in the course of the suit. Proof of specific authority for that compromise is necessary.

Such a specific authority may however be inferred from the party's silence amounting to an acquiescence or tacit ratification of the pleader's authority. Mussammat Sardarkhan v. Muradali, 9 S.L.R. 218=34 Ind. Cas. 928.

cardinal points in issue—Nature of the principle—Question one of circumstances rather than of law—Application of the principle in an abstract way leading to error of decision on the merits—Trial Judge's appreciation of witnesses examined in his presence, value of.

When a sum of money due by A to B was entered in B's account-book as having been paid on 5th November 1907 in cash, but B's case was that it was liquidated by a promissory note which however bore date the 7th November 1907; and whilst A alleged that the payment was in fact made on 5th November in cash and the note of 7th November was a forgery. B and his witnesses throughout the trial insisted that the date of the transaction was the 7th and the note was signed then, but the evidence and circumstances of the case showed that there was no payment in cash and that the promissory note was genuine, but had been executed not on the 7th but on the 5th—the entry in the account book to the effect that the payment was in cash being satisfactorily explained by the practice of entering payments be promissory notes as payments "in cash."

Held—that the variance of the case established from the case pleaded in the plaint (as to the date of the note), was not fatal to B's suit to enforce the promissory note, in which the cardinal points to be decided were whether the debt had been paid in cash and whether the note was a forgery.

That the High Court in relying for the dismissal of the suit on, amongst other grounds, that of variance between pleading and proof; had applied that principle in an abstract and unsatisfactory way which had misled them in estimating the merits of the case.

That the question, in ultimate analysis, was one of circumstances and not of law.

That the evidence adduced in support of the transaction having been effected on the 7th November was not necessarily perjured or fabricated when it appeared that the statements of witnesses and entries in account-books might be due to bona fide mistake. Haji Umar Abdul Rahman v. (3) Pleadings and proof, variance between, when fatal—Objection, form of.

The determination in a cause should be founded upon a case either to be found in the pleadings or involved in or consistent with the case thereby made (a).

The rule that the allegations and the proof must correspond is intended to serve a double purpose, namely, first, to apprise the defendant, distinctly and specifically, of the case he is called upon to answer, so that he may properly make his defence and may not be taken by surprise; and, secondly, to preserve the accurate record of the cause of action as a protection against a second proceeding founded upon the same allegations. Hence every variance between pleading and proof is not fatal (b).

The objection that the plaintiff should not be allowed to succeed on a case different from what he had set out in his plaint, should be one of substance and not one of form (c). Hira Lal Chatterjee v. Gribala Debi, 23 C.L.J. 429=34 Ind. Cas. 444.

The plaintiff claimed possession of the land as an ordinary tenant thereof against the defendant as the trespasser. The defendant who admitted the tenure of the plaintiff set up a perpetual sub-tenure under a contract with the plaintiff. The lower Court found that the defendant was neither a trespasser nor a perpetual sub-lessee but a licensee and gave the relief which it thought the plaintiff was entitled to on the basis of its finding.

Held that the suit was not liable to be dismissed as based on a false averment and that the lower Court was entitled to apply the law to the facts actually proved by evidence (a).

The cultivation of pan plants (i.e., betel) is 'agriculture' within the meaning of that term in the C.P. Tenancy Act (1898). Therefore land let or sublet for the cultivation of betel is let or sublet for an agricultural purpose within the meaning of that Act (b). Loola v. Pyare, 12 N.L.R. 57=33 Ind. Cas. 497.

In a suit upon joint liability created by a decree which has been discharged by plaintiff, the only question that can be raised in the defence is as to the extent of the liability.

The fact that the plaintiff has exaggerated a claim for contribution into one for recovery of the whole decree amount is no ground for dismissing the suit. Sambasiva Iyer v. Subramania Iyer, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 214=4 L.W. 260.

Where, therefore, the plaintiff's suit for possession of certain property consisting of a takia, a mosque and a well, on the ground that he was the sole owner thereof was dismissed and on appeal to the Chief Court he sought to recover possession as mutwalli of the mosque:

Held, that he could not urge that contention at the final stage of the suit, simply because there was a vague reference in the plaint to his being mutwalli of the mosque. Sharaf Din v. Mohkam, 86 P.W.R. 1916=33 Ind. Cas. 748.

In second appeal a plaintiff cannot be permitted to resile from the position he had taken up in the plaint.

The construction placed on one document cannot be of any material help in construing another.

Where subsequent advances are charged on the property covered by a previous mortgage, a covenant that the mortgagor shall not be permitted to redeem the latter without paying the former is valid and enforceable.

If the intention of the parties as gathered from the documents as a whole was to create a charge, the mere fact that the mortgaged property was not described, because the money advanced was tacked on to a previous mortgage would not detract from the validity of that charge (a). Chapcharja Baksha v. (3) Decree of ejectment—Decree not executed for three years—Possession over property obtained—Subsequent suit for possession if maintainable—Merger, when applicable.

The doctrine of merger does not apply to decrees for ejectment. If a party obtains a decree for a debt or for damages for tort, the original cause of action merges in the decree but a decree in ejectment differs very much from other decrees.

Plaintiff obtained a decree for possession of certain property which was not executed for three years. It was alleged that possession over the property had been obtained otherwise than in execution and that the plaintiff had been subsequently dispossessed. The Court of first instance found that plaintiff had been in possession within twelve years of the date of the suit. The lower appellate Court without recording a finding on that point held that the suit was barred by Ss. 11 and 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Held, restoring the decree of the Court of first instance, that recovery of possession by the plaintiff subsequent to the date of the decree afforded a fresh cause of action and the suit was maintainable.

- (4) Plaintiff when may succeed on the strength of his possession—Possession taken behind the back of defendant and not acquiesced in—Effect—Admission by pleader dispensing with proof—Effect—S. 58, Evidence Act.

In order to succeed on the strength of his possession, plaintiff must show that he has juridical possession as against the defendant whom he wishes to evict. The same possession which is juridical as against one person may not be juridical as against another. A trespasser may have juridical possession as against a third person, though he has no juridical possession against the person whom he dispossessed.

Plaintiff obtained a sale-deed and a lease of certain plots situated within the limits of a Municipality from three persons on 20-10-1910. On 14-12-1910, the Municipality served the plaintiff with a notice to quit. Thereupon plaintiff brought this suit for declaration of his right of ownership and possession. It was found as a fact that neither plaintiff nor his vendors and lessors had possession prior to 20-10-1910. Held that, as plaintiff took possession behind the back of the Municipality who sought to evict him as soon as they discovered it, his possession, though not forcible, was furtive and precarious, and cannot be made the basis of a suit (a).

An admission made by a pleader for a party for the purpose of dispensing with further proof of the disputed facts is binding on the party and estops him, unless circumstances are shown which would justify the Court in requiring proof under the proviso to S. 58, Evidence Act. Rao Bahadur Seth Vishandas v. But the principle does not apply to cases in which the evidence is equally unworthy of credit on both sides, except in respect of land of a special character such as waste, jungle or lands under water. Fakira Lal Sahu v. Any possession would be legal possession as against a wrong-doer. Where a person has up to the date of the trespass by the wrong-doer a bona fide claim to constructive possession through the at one time rightful owner, such person would be entitled to oust the trespasser and wrong-doer without proving the validity of his claim (a). Asha Bibi v. Power of Attorney.

(1) Scope of agent's authority—Liability of principal.

A general power to mortgage implies a power to borrow money on the principal's account, and where equitable mortgages are recognized as valid, to create an equitable mortgage by deposit of title deeds, but not to sign promissory notes on behalf of the principal.

The principal is not liable on a promissory note executed by an agent in professed exercise of a power to mortgage. M A R. R. M. R. M. Chetty v. Badler Rahman Chowdry, 9 Bur. L.T. 166=36 Ind. Cas. 19.

(2) General or special—Construction—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), S. 123, Bombay r. 3, O. III, r. 2.

The power of attorney in question provided as follows: "I have constituted and appointed the above named person my true and lawful attorney in this matter to recover all moneys due to me in respect of the principal and interest of the aforesaid mortgage bond by suing on my behalf in a Civil Court or by coming to an amicable settlement...and to do all such acts in this one matter as I, if present, would have done or could have done or would have been permitted to do or would have been called upon to do."

Held, that the power was a special power of attorney, inasmuch as an agent's authorization extended, not to any class of business or em-

Practice and Procedure.

(1) Incompetency of non-appealing co-defendant to support appeal—Rules 4 and 33 of O. XLI of Act V of 1908—Parties to be confined to their own objections—One defendant cannot avail of the plea raised by another.

Held (per) Shah Din and Le Rossignol, JJ.—

"In an appeal by one or more of the several defendants in which the non-appealing defendants are impleaded as co-respondents none of these defendants has any right either under r. 4 or r. 33 of O. XLI of the Civ. Pro. Code to be heard in support of the appeal."

The parties must be confined in appeal strictly to the objections taken by them in their own pleadings.

- (2) Procedure—Person admitting debt to a judgment-debtor but refusing to pay—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1898), O. XXI, r. 46—R. 46 (a) of Chief Court Rules—Indian Succession Act (X of 1865), Ss. 179 and 190.

The procedure to be followed when a debtor who admits he owes money to a judgment-debtor does not pay it into Court is laid down in r. 46 (a) added to the Code by the Chief Court of Lower Burma. All that can be done is to warn him that if he fails to pay the amount due by him into Court, he may be subjected to a suit. An order directing payment into Court cannot be made in such a case under O. XXI, r. 46.

Under Ss. 179 and 190 of the Indian Succession Act an executor or administrator of a deceased person is the legal representative of a deceased person, and no right to any part of the property of an intestate person can be established in a Court of justice unless letters of administration have been granted.

When a party is in default either through failure of the Court officials to serve notice or from some neglect to pay the necessary process-fees, the question whether he should be denied a hearing or should be allowed an adjournment, is a question which must be judicially determined upon proper materials, i.e., upon evidence and for reasons to be given by the Judge who decides to deny him a hearing, so that such reasons may be reviewed if necessary by a higher tribunal. *Sarju Parshad v. RAFIQUE, J.

- (10) Right of plaintiff to recover according to pleadings and proof.

The plaintiff in a suit will succeed only according to his allegations in the plaint and the evidence let in by him (a).

The plaintiff and the defendants had executed a promissory note. In execution of a decree obtained on the pro-note the plaintiff was made to pay the whole amount of the decree. He now brought the present suit claiming a decree against the defendants for the full amount he had paid. The plaintiff alleged in his plaint that he was only a surety for the defendants. The Court, however, found that the money was borrowed by him for the purpose of a partnership business. On behalf of the plaintiff it was urged that a decree might be given in his favour as in a suit for contribution. Held that, as it was no part of the plaintiff's case, either in his plaint or in his evidence that he had signed the note for money borrowed for partnership purposes of the parties, the appropriate decree in a suit for contribution could not be made in the plaintiff's suit as framed by him and on the evidence produced by him.

Pre-emption.(1) Resumed muafi—Co-sharer.

The wajib-ul-ars of a village contained the following clause as to pre-emption:—"The custom as to the right of pre-emption is this:—When a co-sharer wants to transfer his property he at first transfers it to his near relation, and afterwards to his distant relative from among the co-sharers of the village. If these persons refuse to take it, then other sharers in the village who are not relatives are entitled to take the property."

The plaintiffs were owners of resumed muafi. By the constitution of the village in question, there was no right common to the owners of the mahal and the resumed muafi, the owners of the one neither having any interest in the rents, profits or produce of the other nor sharing in the responsibility for the revenue of the other. In a suit for pre-emption upon sale to the defendants who were strangers held, that the plaintiffs not being members of the coparcenary of the village were not entitled to pre-empt. Mahadeo Prasad v. Jagardeo Gir, 14 A.L.J. 313=38 A. 260=33 Ind. Cas. 23.

(2) Right given in case of transfer of any kind—Document creating a charge—Whether right accrues in such case.

The wajib-ul-ars of a village recorded a right of pre-emption in the case of a transfer of any kind in a certain order, and then provided that, should a co-sharer fail to redeem, the co-sharers would take the property by depositing the mortgage money; or should the co-sharer of the arasi take any additional sum from the creditor to whom the property was mortgaged by making a hypothecation (makful) of the property, the right of pre-emption would arise then also. A document was executed whereby it was agreed by the executors that they would annually pay interest on the sum borrowed, and in default of payment being made for two years the creditors would realise their due from the property mortgaged (makhua):

Held, that, having regard to the terms of the document, the right of pre-emption would arise only in the case of a mortgage with possession, and not in respect of a charge which the document in question purported to create. Khurshed Ali v. Abdul Majid, 14 A.L.J. 441=38 A. 361=35 Ind. Cas. 210.

A person, whose relation to the vendor was that of a son-in-law, purchased property situate partially in the mahal of the plaintiff, the parties being Hindus. Held that the vendee was not a Karabatdar-i-Karibi of the vendor so as to be able to defeat a suit for pre-emption. Mahabir Prasad v. Mahadeo Prasad, 14 A.L.J. 447=33 Ind. Cas. 496.

possession—Mistake in the intention or purpose of the parties—Art. 10 of Act IX of 1908.

1. For purposes of limitation for pre-emption, the original date of sale is to be taken into consideration and not the one on which the parties have, by mutual consent, rectified the wrong description given, in the sale-deed of the property sold.

A distinction must be made between mistake in the intention or purpose of the parties and a mistake in rendering their intention into words.

So where, at the time of mutation, the parties to the sale agreed that the thekhasra Nos. different from those entered in the deed of sale were intended to be sold and mutation was accordingly effected, the starting point of limitation is the date of the sale-deed and not of the mutation.

2. The land occupied by tenants does not admit of physical possession within the meaning of Art. 10 of Act IX of 1908, and consequently the limitation for its pre-emption begins to run from the date on which the instrument of sale has been registered. *Ganga Ram v. On the last day fixed for the deposit of money by a decree of pre-emption, the decree-holder applied for extension of time to make the deposit and he deposited the amount within the extended time granted to him (ex parte) by the Court.

Held, that the Court had jurisdiction to extend the time.

(6) Rival pre-emptors—Joint decree in their favour—Direction that one of them should pay the price into Court on or before a particular day—Receipt filed but not certified before such date—Conditions of decree—Non-compliance—Effect.

A and B secured a joint decree for pre-emption, the rights of A being preferred to those of B. It was laid down in the decree that, on or before the 15th March, 1915, a sum of money fixed as the price should be paid by him into Court and in default his claim to stand dismissed, and that, if he does commit default, then B's claim is to come in and he would have a period within which he must pay in the money and take possession.

On the 5th March, A put in a receipt for the whole sum and asked that payment should be certified, and notices were issued to the judgment-debtors to appear on the 25th March and declare whether they had received the money or not. On the 31st March several of the payments were confirmed and the remaining ones were confirmed on the 12th April. In the meantime, on the 16th March B had applied for execution.

Held that A did not comply with the terms of the decree and that his decree became a piece of waste paper on the 16th March. Abdul Fattah v. Fattah Ali, 73 P.R. 1916=137 P.L.R. 1916=121 P.W.R. 1916=35 Ind. Cas. 365.

Held that the lower Courts were fully justified in holding that the deed was one really of sale though disguised as a gift. Chiragh Din v. Allah Din, 70 P.R. 1916=118 P.W.R. 1916=129 P.L.R. 1916=35 Ind. Cas. 303.

A mortgage of certain property was made in 1873. Under the mortgage deed the mortgagor was liable to pay the Government revenue, and in default the mortgagee was entitled to recover the sum from the mortgagor and his other property. The mortgagor failed to pay the revenue which accordingly was paid by the mortgagee. Subsequently the property was sold to the mortgagee for the amount of the mortgage plus the amount of the revenue deposited by the mortgagee. In a suit to pre-empt this sale, held that the pre-emptor was bound to pay the amount of the mortgage as well as the amount deposited by the mortgagee for the revenue as condition precedent to his getting possession of the property. Bhoj Raj v. S. 11—Valuation—Appeal—Jurisdiction.*

Sanderson, C.J. and Mukerjee, J.—The right of the plaintiff to get pre-emption must exist not only at the time of the sale, but also at the time of the institution of the suit, and finally up to and at the date of the decree of the trial Court.

A judgment passed by the High Court on second appeal was reviewed on a ground not taken at any previous stage of the proceeding, when the ground raised a pure question of law which did not depend for its determination upon the investigation of new facts and when the alleged error was apparent on the face of the record (a).

Per Mukerjee, J.—The decree in a suit should ordinarily conform to the rights of the parties as they stood at the date of its institution. But there are cases when it is incumbent upon a Court of justice to take notice of events which have happened since the institution of the suit and to mould its decree according to the circumstances as they stand at the time the decree is made. This principle will be applied where it is shown that the original relief claimed has, by reason of subsequent change of circumstances, become inappropriate or that it is necessary to base the decision of the Court on the altered circumstances in order to shorten litigation or to do complete justice between the parties.

Per Sharfuddin and Ros, JJ.—For the performance of the talab-i-muasibat what is necessary is an expression by the pre-emptor in clear and explicit terms that he demands to make the purchase and it is not necessary that he should, at the time of the performance of the ceremony, make any mention of the price.

Where in performing the talab, the claimant, owing to mistaken information, understated the price, though, the ceremonies required by law were fully performed.

Held—that the talab was validly performed.

Plaintiff, suing for pre-emption, valued his suit at Rs. 4,500, the price for which, according to his information, the property had been sold to the defendant. The suit was dismissed by the Subordinate Judge but decreed on appeal by the District Judge who however found that the real value of the property was over Rs. 6,000. On second appeal it was urged that having regard to the value of property as found by the District Judge, appeal lay to the High Court and not to the District Judge, but the point was not taken in the memorandum of appeal.

Held, per Sharfuddin and Ros, JJ.—That this objection should be overruled, in view of S. 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, and that the decision in 38 C. 637 was distinguishable from the present case as in that case the suit was intentionally and grossly undervalued (b). Nurl Mian v. Ambica Singh, 20 C.W.N. 1099=24 C.L.J. 140=44 C. 47=34 Ind. Cas. 869.

(10) Pre-emption suit by Hindu—Mahomedan Law of sale, whether applicable—Sale complete, when—Ceremonies necessary before pre-emption, compliance with—S. 87, Act XII of 1887.

Per Mullick, J.—There being no special custom pleaded, a case where pre-emption is claimed by a Hindu must be tried on the principles of justice, equity and good conscience under S. 37, Act XII of 1887.

As a sale is not complete till legal ownership passes, no matter whether there has been payment and delivery, the pre-emptor's title in the case of a property worth more than Rs. 100 does not accrue till after registration. It would be against equity, justice and good conscience to apply in such a case the Mahomedan Law of sale which is no longer in force and to attach to mere contract for sale an incident which the Mahomedan lawyers intended to attach only to an actual sale.

The performance of the two formalities talabi mawasibat and talabi ishtishad can be combined, but it is essential that the talabi ishtishad should refer expressly to the talabi mawasibat as having been duly made (a).

Roe, J.—The test to apply in these cases is, was the sale, in the eyes of the contracting parties and the pre-emptor, complete. If it was, it was not necessary for the pre-emptor to wait till registration before performing the ceremony of mawasibat. Kheyali Prosad v. Mullik Nazarul Alum, 20 C.W.N. 1048 = 1 Pat. In a pre-emption decree the last day for payment into Court was 24th July, 1914, on that date the pre-emptor came to the Court and applied for permission to make payment in compliance with the decree passed in his favour. The money though tendered was not deposited on that day through a mistake of the Court or its officers, the 26th and 26th July were holidays; the money was paid on the 27th July, 1914. The vendee objected that the payment was not made by the pre-emptor within time, and such a payment was not sufficient compliance with the decree, hence it could be executed.

Held, that the tender within the specified time should be deemed as a due compliance with the terms of the decree, as the pre-emptor

Held further, that a defence, which may be available to a person in possession, may not be available to a person seeking to oust him, and no man can be allowed a decree for pre-emption in preference to another who has a superior right, on the basis of a title acquired after the right to sue accrued. *Ratan v. - (15) Decree for foreclosure, pre-emption in respect of—Decree for pre-emption obtained by one co-sharer without impleading others equally entitled, effect of—Transfer of property made by decree-holder during pendency of appeal—Oudh Laws Act.

On foreclosure of a certain property one of several persons equally entitled to pre-empt the property obtained a decree for pre-emption in a suit to which others who were also equally entitled to pre-empt were not made parties. Subsequently one of these others brought a suit for pre-emption against the person who had obtained the previous decree for pre-emption without impleading the person who had obtained the original decree for foreclosure. His claim for pre-emption was decreed, but the unsuccessful party filed an appeal against it and during the pendency of the appeal the decree-holder transferred the property acquired by pre-emption to a third person who was joined as a respondent.

Held, that the first decree for pre-emption furnished a cause of action to persons equally entitled along with the decree-holder, inasmuch as the latter obtained the property by pre-emption to the exclusion of others who had an equal right to pre-empt the same.

Held further, that the omission to implead the person who had obtained the decree for foreclosure, in the subsequent suit for pre-emption; was not a fatal defect.

Held also, that after a decree for pre-emption has been passed and payment made in pursuance of it the right to pre-emption fructifies into a title to the property forming the subject of the claim, though that title may be subject to the result of an appeal which may be filed in the case by an unsuccessful party.

The decision in 17 O.C. 242 cannot be taken to lay down that the person who has obtained a title by virtue of a decree for pre-emption can, by his own subsequent act, prejudice the position of one to whom he may have wholly or in part made a transfer based upon that title. *Ram Sahay v. If it was proved that the vendor went to his other co-sharers and informed them of his desire to sell, but they declined to purchase on the ground of want of means or similar ground, the vendor would be at liberty to sell to a stranger.

village is as consistent with the existence of the custom as with its non-existence and is incapable of rebutting the presumption raised by S. 7 of the Oudh Laws Act in favour of its existence.

In a suit for pre-emption, the fact that no claim for pre-emption was made, with respect to some previous sales in the village to which the plaintiff was a party, and two suits for pre-emption brought by the plaintiff were withdrawn in consideration of some benefits received by him, are not sufficient to justify a plea of estoppel by representation or conduct :

A suit for pre-emption ought to include the entire property in respect of which a right of pre-emption is claimable. A suit in respect of only a portion of the property is not maintainable though the plaintiff offers to pay the entire consideration money specified in the sale-deed and to make a present of the remaining portion to the vendee defendant in addition. Ata Hussain Khan v. Agha Hadi, 33 Ind. Cas. 775.

A purchaser may use a title acquired by him subsequent to the cause of action as a defence against a suit for pre-emption instituted after he acquires the title.

Plaintiff, a co-sharer in a village sued for pre-emption in respect of sales executed by the owner of the property.

The plaintiff alleged that he being a co-sharer with the vendor had a right to acquire the property superior to that of the purchaser who, it was said, was a stranger. The purchaser pleaded that the land in dispute was in the particular sub-division or patti in which he was a co-sharer, by virtue of a gift made in his favour. It appeared that the deed of gift set up by the defendant was executed in his favour subsequent to the date of the sales in question. It was contended on behalf of the plaintiff that as the partition of the village was imperfect on account of the existence of a common land in the Shamilat patti in which all the co-sharers had their own shares, he was a co-sharer in the particular sub-division in which the land was situate. It was found by the lower Court that the fact of the existence of the common land did not make the plaintiff a co-sharer in that particular sub-division. Held that by the deed of gift the defendant had the interest vested in him at the time the suits were brought. The fact that the deed of gift was subsequent to the cause of action and that it was intended to defeat the plaintiff's claim for pre-emption did not affect the defendant's claim to set up his right, as he was entitled to defeat the plaintiff's claim for pre-emption by any legitimate means he could, and there was nothing contrary to law in accepting a gift of property. Durga Singh v. Gaya Singh, 36 Ind. Cas. 55.

If a decision on a preliminary issue merely entitles the plaintiff to go on with the suit it is not a preliminary decree as defined in S. 2, cl. (3) of the Code of Civil Procedure. Unless the decision amounts to a preliminary decree of the nature contemplated in O. XX, rr. 12 to 18 it is not a preliminary decree as it does not decide any of the matters in controversy in the suit.

Preliminary Decree—(Concluded).

Under S. 21 of the Code no objection as to place of suing can be allowed in appeal or revision unless such objection was taken in the Court of first instance at the earliest possible opportunity, and unless there has been a consequent failure of justice.

The nature of a suit is determined by the relief asked for in the plaint. A vendor suing for specific performance is not suing for land, or for the determination of any right to or interest in immoveable property. There is a difference between a vendor suing for specific performance and purchaser so suing. A. G. Madari v. R. Misser, 9 Bur. L.T. 119=36 Ind. Cas. 431.

(1) Suits for partition by younger sons compromised, presumption from.

One of the tests in cases where the custom of primogeniture is claimed, is whether the right of the eldest son was challenged in the Court and whether the litigation invariably ended in a compromise under which the younger sons obtained a share of the estate very much in excess of the maintenance to which, had the custom existed, they would have been entitled. If the younger sons did so succeed in defeating the eldest son, it would be an indication that there was no custom (a).

The facts that the right of the younger sons was disputed in the Courts, and they invariably failed to establish that they were entitled to a share by partition, and they then compromised their claim by obtaining a mere grant by way of maintenance, that would be some good evidence of the custom of primogeniture by which the eldest son would be entitled to the whole inheritance (b).

• Evidence showing that the right claimed by custom was more or less contested and the contest abandoned by some one who, if the custom had not existed, would have been entitled to succeed would be sufficient evidence to establish custom. Chowdhury Balvadr Samant Singh v. Bimbadhar Roy, 1 Pat. L.J. 509.

Where an agent of a firm carrying on a general money lending business, who had express authority "to borrow money from any bank or banks, firm or firms, persons or persons, either with or without pledge of securities for moneys advanced to various persons," guaranteed a loan made to a constituent of the firm by a third party:

Held, in a suit by the latter against the firm, that the firm was bound by the act of the agent.

That the authority of the agent to enter into the transaction was to be found in the document itself by necessary implication from the nature of the business, with the general management of which he was entrusted (a).

That the authority to borrow implied an authority to pledge the credit of the firm for the purpose of obtaining or securing advances from others to constituents.

Held, further, that, if authority is established, the mere fact that the principal did not receive any benefit does not rid him of his liability. *The Bank of Bengal v. Principal and Agent—(Continued).

A salary chit is a business document, and it only means that the agency shall not cease before the expiry of the period mentioned therein, but that it shall last for three years certain after which date it may or may not be continued; and it does not follow that there is a fresh agency created after the said three years.

The fact that the agent remained in service much longer than the three years' period and that his principal then permitted him to go on leave and subsequently to resume his duties as agent support the conclusion that there was only one agency which did not terminate on the expiry of three years but continued till the death of the agent. *Ramanathan Chetty v. The question when an agency is terminated is not a pure question of law but is a question of fact to be determined upon evidence.

It cannot be said that an agency terminates ipso facto on the expiry of the term fixed in the salary chit, since the chit can only mean that the parties expected the agency to close at the end of the three years mentioned therein (a).

In deciding the said question the practice among Nattukottai Chetties in the matter, and the various terms of the engagement between the parties obtaining in similar business transactions are all relevant considerations. *Nagappa Chettiar v. The question when an agency terminates is a question of fact in each case, and the circumstance that certain items of credit or debit were handed over at the foreign place of business by the retiring agent to the successor does necessarily put an end to the agency of the predecessor (a).

If a cause of action is sought to be added by way of amendment, and if a fresh suit on that cause of action would be barred at the date of the amendment, then the Courts would, ordinarily, but not always, not allow such an amendment, so as to prejudice the defendant by depriving him of the plea of limitation which he would be otherwise entitled to.

Held that, since the acknowledgment in question had existed at the time of the institution of the suit, and since no new cause of action was sought to be added, but the amendment was sought only for showing that the original cause of action as laid was not barred by limitation, the amendment prayed for should have been granted. *Muthia Chettiar v. (1) Application for revocation—When to be made—Reversioner, if can apply—Acquiescence—Delay—Compromise—Family settlement—Will, thirty years old, proof of.

Although there may not be a fixed time within which an application for revocation of a probate may be made and although there may not be acquiescence, a person may be debarred by long delay in making such an application.

A reversioner can apply during the lifetime of the widow for a revocation of the will.

The rule that a will more than thirty years old may be read in evidence without proof of its execution, is inapplicable to proof of a will in the probate Court.

There is a distinction between a case where the acquiescence alleged occurs while the act acquiesced in is in progress, and another, where the acquiescence takes place after the act has been completed. In the former case, the acquiescence is quiescence under such circumstances as that assent may be reasonably inferred from it. In the latter case, when the act is completed without any knowledge or without any assent on the part of the person whose right is infringed, the matter is to be determined on very different legal considerations. A right of action has then vested in him, and mere delay to take legal proceedings to redress the injury cannot, by itself, constitute a bar to such proceedings, unless the delay on his part, after he acquired full knowledge, had affected or altered the position of his opponent (a).

A compromise amounting to a bona fide settlement of disputes binds the reversioners quite as much as a decree on a contest. This rule is subject to the qualification that the compromise was made bona fide for the benefit of the estate and not for the personal advantage of the limited owner (b).

A family settlement presupposes that there are bona fide claims on either side and an honest settlement after full disclosure of facts on either side.

Where one party secretly and fraudulently obtained probate of a will and the other party wanted to have it revoked, the former agreed to pay a larger annuity, and obtained an admission of the genuineness of the will which might be used against the reversioners;

Held, that, under the circumstances, the principle of family settlement did not apply. Shyam Lal v. Ramewari, 23 C.L.J. 82=33 Ind. Cas. 273.

probate, if lies—Probate Court's decision on matter within its jurisdiction if reversible by another Court—Strict fulfilment of statutory conditions, when declaratory decree prayed for, necessary—Res judicata—Decisions of Probate Court on matters other than genuineness of will if conclusive—Rule of res judicata, not a technical rule.

On B's death leaving two widows, but no male issue, R applied for probate or what he alleged was B's will. The widows did not oppose the application but the present plaintiffs amongst others lodged caveats. The matter was thereupon heard as a suit with R as plaintiff and the caveators (including the present plaintiffs) as defendants, and that Court held that the present plaintiffs had no right to oppose the application and that the will propounded was genuine. The plaintiffs then brought this suit against R and others for a declaration that they were the nearest reversioners according to Hindu Law of B and as such entitled to apply to the Probate Court to get the probate to R revoked.

Held, that the declaration could not be made under S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, as, having regard to the decision that the will was genuine, the plaintiffs were not entitled to "a legal character or to a right as to property."

That the will having been affirmed in a Court exercising appropriate jurisdiction, the propriety of that decision could not in the circumstances of the case be impugned by a Court exercising any other jurisdiction.

The Court's power to make a declaration without more is derived from S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, and regard must be had to its precise terms.

The application of the rule of res judicata by the Courts in India should be influenced by no technical considerations of form, but by matter of substance within the limits allowed by law. Sheoparan Singh v. Ramandan Prashad Narayan Singh, 20 C.W.N. 738=14 A.L.J. 466=23 C.L.J. 621=18 Bom L.R. 397=43 C. 694=31 M.L.J. 77=20 M.L.T. 1=(1916); M. W.N. 419=3 L.W. 544=33 Ind. Cas. 914 (P.C.).

There can be no dismissal of a probate case in accordance with the terms of a petition of compromise between the propounder and objector. The main issue in such a case is whether or not the Will has been proved and the only effect of a compromise is to reduce a contentious proceeding into one which is not contentious, but this does not absolve the Court from the task of either granting probate, or refusing it. If a compromise has been made and the objector withdraws from the contest, the Court will grant probate in common form, but the Court cannot dismiss the case altogether and embody the terms of the compromise as if the decree was one capable of execution by him.

S. 83 of the Probate and Administration Act read with O. XXIII, r. 3, Civ. Pro. Code, merely means that in a probate case the Civ. Pro. Code so far as possible determines the procedure of the Court. These sections nowhere say that it is competent to the Court to allow the parties to divide the testator's property without proving the Will. *Mussammat Janakbati Thakurain v. Ss. 42, 44—Public road—Right of the public to use public roads.

The Government of Bombay issued a Resolution whereby it was directed that permission should not in future be given to hold Vyasantol processions in the Belgaum District. A suit having been brought to challenge the validity of the Resolution :—

Held, that the Resolution was ultra vires of Government, as it fell neither under S. 44 nor under S. 42 of the District Police Act, 1890.

S. 44 deals not with the prohibition of religious ceremonies, but with the maintaining of public order at religious ceremonies which are not prohibited.

S. 42 enables the Magistrate to issue lawful orders only whenever and for such time as it shall appear necessary and the orders are to operate in such town or village or the vicinity thereof as may be directed; in other words, the powers of prohibition conferred upon the Magistrate are by the statute expressly limited both in time and in place, the limitation of place being to a particular town or village or the vicinity thereof.

All members of the public and every sect have a right to use the streets in a lawful manner, and it lies on those who would restrain them in its exercise to show some law or custom having the force of law depriving them of the privilege. *Dundappa Mallappa Sigandhi v. Proprietary Rights—(Concluded).

The question whether or not certain buildings are appurtenances to the holding of a particular tenant, in the sense that the tenant cannot be ejected therefrom so long as his tenancy subsists must be regarded as a mixed question of fact and of law.

By a deed of sale the defendants purported to transfer to the plaintiff the whole of their proprietary rights in a village and in the same deed of sale they expressly specified the dora and buildings, appertaining thereto as included in the property transferred to the plaintiff. The plaintiff, after considerable difficulty, seemed to have obtained possession over the buildings purported to be conveyed to him. Plaintiff's attempt to obtain possession over certain out buildings were resisted by the defendants. Thereupon the plaintiff brought a suit for possession, wherein the defendants pleaded inter alia that these outbuildings were made by them for the storage of agricultural implements and for the shelter of their cattle and that they were, therefore, appurtenances to the tenant holding which the defendants still possessed in the village. Held that the transfer, in respect of these buildings and of the land on which they stood, was not limited in any way by the operation of the statute which created the ex-proprietary holding and that the defendants had no right to occupy these outbuildings and to claim to treat them as appurtenances to their holdings. *Umrao Singh v. The plaintiffs were made parties to this suit which was decreed and in execution of the decree the putni was put up for sale, and the plaintiffs whose purchase at the previous sale had been by that time finally confirmed deposited the decretal amount and saved the putni from sale.

Held, that, in the absence of anything to denote the contrary, a sale of a tenure held in execution of a decree for its own arrears of rent passes it free from liability for previous arrears, Railway.

(1) Railway Company—Risk-note—Wilful neglect—Sale of goods—Liability.

Certain perishable goods were consigned to the plaintiffs to be carried by the B.B. and O.I. Railway to a station on the G.I.P. Railway. The bags containing the goods were duly carried to a station where they were put into an empty waggon belonging to the G.I.P. Railway. The bags should have been taken out or the waggon detached from the train at Wardha junction, but instead of this they were carried on to Nagpur, and there they remained unnoticed by the authorities. On discovery they were despatched from Nagpur, and reached their destination where they were found in a stinking condition. They were sold by public auction and fetched Rs. 30. No previous notice of the sale was given by the Railway authorities to the plaintiffs or their agents or the person in possession of the railway receipt. The goods were carried under what was called a risk-note Form H. Under this note the consignors undertook to hold the Railway administration "free from all responsibility...except for the loss of the complete consignment due either to the wilful neglect of the Railway Administration or..."

Held that neither the non-transhipment of the goods nor their sale without notice was equivalent to wilful neglect on the part of the Railway Administration. Jhunnai Lal v. The Bombay-Baroda and Central India Railway Company, 14 A.L.J. 996.

Railway—(Concluded).

- (2) Goods — Carriage of — Liability under Risk note Form B — Wilful neglect, meaning—Neglect on the part of railway—Plaintiff bound to prove.

When goods have been carried under a special contract, limiting the responsibility of the railway, embodied in a risk note Form B, the plaintiff has to allege, and prove, not merely that the railway or its servants have committed a breach of the ordinary contract of bailment, but that they have been guilty of wilful neglect, and that he has suffered loss as a consequence of such neglect.

A person is said to be guilty of wilful neglect when he intentionally, and of set purpose, does something which ought either to be done in a different manner, or not at all, or omits to do something which ought to be done. Loss is said to be due to wilful neglect when such neglect is either the sole effective cause of the loss, or is so connected with it as to be materially contributing thereto. The Firm of Doulomal Kushaldas v. Secretary of State, 9 S.L.R. 177 = 32 Ind. Cas. 551.

- (3) Contract—Principal and agent—Railway Company and Station Master—Agent entering into a special contract beyond the scope of his ordinary authority—Principal not bound.

The plaintiff in good faith relying upon information supplied to him by the Station Master of a certain Railway Station as to the rate of freight to be charged on certain goods consigned to the goods for carriage by the Railway. The rate quoted was a special concession rate which did not apply to the plaintiff's consignment. At destination the under-charge was discovered and delivery was refused except on payment of the proper freight. The plaintiff refused to pay and sued the Railway Company for damages for non-delivery.

Held, that the contract made with the plaintiff was by a person who had no authority on behalf of the defendant Company to enter into a special contract, namely, a contract to carry goods on concession rates which did not apply to the case, and that the Railway Company was not liable for the breach. Govind Ram v. The plaintiffs delivered certain bags of the potatoes to the B. B. and C. I. Railway and there delivered to the consignors or to their order. should have been taken out of the waggon and transhipped at another station. But this was not done and the bags were carried on to some other station where they remained unnoticed for some time. Thereafter they were sent to their destination. On examination they were found by the Railway authorities to be in a stinking condition. So they were sold by public auction. No previous notice was given to the plaintiffs or their agents or to any person in possession of the Railway receipt by the Railway authorities. In a suit by the plaintiffs, held that the Railway authorities were not guilty of wilful neglect within the meaning of the risk note. It would be a misuse of language to describe the action of the Railway Company in selling the goods without notice as wilful neglect. Jhunn Lal v. B. B. & C.I. Railway, 35 Ind. Cas. 265.

- (1) Ss. 3 (6), 77, 140—Railway administered by Government—Suit by consignee for price of goods consigned and mislaid by railway—Notice to Traffic Manager and to Collector for Secretary of State, if sufficient—Limitation—Limitation Act (1908), Sch. I, Arts. 30, 31, 115.

In the case of a railway administered by Government, notice under S. 77 of the Railways Act is (in view of the definition of the words "Railway Administration" in S. 3 (6) of the Act) effective, if served on Government, and S. 140 does not mean that the "Manager" is the only person on whom notice can be served, but that if notice is served on the manager, it must be served on him in the manner provided in S. 140 (a).

Per D. Chatterjee, J.—Semle—In the absence of evidence showing that the "Agent" of a railway administered by Government is the Manager, or that the "Traffic Manager" is not the Manager, and regard being had to the rule printed and published in the Fare and Time Table of the Railway that "references regarding delay in transit to or loss of goods, parcels, luggage or other articles or claims for compensation and refunds should be addressed to the Traffic Manager," notice to the Traffic Manager may be considered sufficient under S. 140 of the Act.

In a suit by consignors of goods which were not alleged to have been lost, but were found to have gone astray after they were delivered to the Railway, for recovery of their price with compensation, the defendant did not plead or prove any loss and on the other hand alleged that the goods had not been delivered at all, nor was there evidence when the goods were to be delivered.

Held, per curiam, that neither Art 30 nor Art. 31 applied, and (per D. Chatterjee, J.), that the suit was governed by Art. 115, Limitation Act (b). Radha Sham Basak v. The Secretary of State, 20 C.W.N. 790 = 23 C.L.J. 547 = 44 C. 16 = 34 Ind. Cas. 130.

The provision of S. 72, cl. (2), requiring risk notes to be signed by or on behalf of the person sending, or delivering goods to a Railway administration, should be exactly carried out.

Where the person who delivered the goods signed not his own name but the name of the owner of goods, there was not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of S. 72, cl. (2).

In the absence of evidence to prove that the Claims Superintendent was authorised by the agent to receive notices on his behalf, held that a notice of claim served on the former was not served in compliance with the provisions of S. 140 of the Railways Act.

The law requires that the notice should be on the agent, and whether a particular officer is authorised by the Agent to receive such notice on his behalf is a question of fact that must be decided on evidence (a).

C, a registered khatedar of unalienated lands subject to the provisions of the Land Revenue Code, executed a rajinama relinquishing the khata in favour of D, and, on the same day, D executed a kabulayat to the Mamlatdar undertaking to pay the land revenue and applied to have his name entered in the Government records as the registered khatedar of those lands. Some years later C sold the very lands to the plaintiff, who sued to recover possession from D, alleging that there having been gift of the lands by C to D it could not operate in absence of a registered document under S. 123 of the Transfer of Property Act:

Held, that the rajinama by C was an extinguishment of his interest in the lands and the effect of the kabulayat was that D came in by agreement with Government as an occupant in his own right; that, therefore, C had no interest in the lands capable of transfer at the date of the sale; and that the plaintiff got nothing by his sale-deed. Motibhai Jijibhai v. Receiver.

(1) Guardian of defendant's adopted boy—Not sufficient ground for removal—Onus of proof in an application to remove a person from an appointment.

The mere fact that a receiver appointed by the Court is the guardian of the adopted boy of the defendants is not sufficient ground for his removal from the appointment.

Receiver—(Continued).

(2) Receiver, removal of—Order, refusing removal—Appeal, if lies—Joint receivers—Retirement of one, effect of.

No appeal lies against an order refusing to remove a receiver who has already been appointed.

Where two persons were appointed joint receivers to an estate, the retirement of one of them would not make the order appointing the receivers come to an end, and the estate would not be without a receiver and without the protection for which a receiver is, in fact, appointed. *The Eastern Mortgage and Agency Company, Ltd. v. (4) Appointment of—Principle—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), O. XL, r. 1—'Just and convenient'—Discretion.

The words 'just and convenient' in O. XL, r. 1, Civ. Pro. Code, mean that the Court should appoint a receiver for the protection of property or the prevention of injury, according to legal principle, and not that the Court can make such appointment because it thinks convenient to do so. They confer no arbitrary and non-regulated discretion on the Court (a).

It is no ground for the appointment of a receiver that allowances payable to beneficiaries under the deed of wak/nama were not paid from the time the defendant took possession of the properties as mutwali, in the absence of any allegation of waste or mismanagement. If it is found that the estate is in danger, because no longer properly managed, or that difficulties have arisen in connection with litigation about the properties comprised in the estate, or that there is good ground to apprehend that the defendant may misapply trust funds, the Court may properly appoint a receiver. *Hobibullah v. (5) Guardian of an incapacitated defendant, if can be appointed Receiver—Disqualification, ground for—Appellate Court, interference by, with appointments of receiver made by lower Court.

There is no inflexible rule that a person who is guardian of an incapacitated defendant in a suit is disqualified to be a Receiver and the Court has to consider the whole circumstances of the particular case in making such appointments.

The Limitation Act does not apply to references to a Judge on an order by a Deputy Registrar of the Chief Court of Lower Burma, such reference not being an appeal, nor one of the applications set out in the third division of the schedule to the Limitation Act.

Money in the hands of an executor, administrator or heir as such cannot be attached in execution of a decree against such executor, administrator or heir personally, and it makes no difference that the executor is also a legatee and the money in his hands as executor is due to him personally as legatee. It would be opposed to the principle of O. II, r. 5, to allow the attachment but the right, title and interest of the legatee can be attached, and the executor can be restrained from receiving in his personal capacity any portion of the money in his hands as executor. *Hill v. - (2) S. 2 (6)—Immoveable property—"Standing timber"—"Standing trees"—Trees of grove—Finding as to question of fact not disputed.

The word "timber" is used in the English Law to denote trees the wood of which can be used in the building and repairing of houses according to the custom of the locality in which the trees are situated. The term "standing timber" is used in the same sense and when a party purchases the same he must be impliedly considered to purchase the same for industrial uses. It also implies an intention sooner or later to sever the trees from the soil. Otherwise the terms "standing timber" and "standing trees" would be convertible.

Where a mortgagee took a usufructuary mortgage of a tenant's right in a grove consisting merely of fruit bearing trees, as a usufructuary mortgagee he has no right to sever the trees from the ground since he would ordinarily depend for the security of his money on the value of the trees as standing trees and would obtain his interest from their produce. In the absence of evidence to show that the grove holder or the mortgagee contemplated the prospect of severance of trees and use of their wood for industrial purposes, the trees of the grove could not be considered as standing timber. So a mortgage of the above kind held to be a transfer of immoveable property within the meaning of the Registration Act (a).

A Court cannot question a finding of an admitted fact. Ramman Lal v. Ram Gopal, 35 Ind. Cas. 713.

Where there is a transaction regarding trees in connection with which an instrument of transfer has been executed, the character of the transaction has to be looked at in order to determine whether or not the trees referred to are standing timber and therefore, moveable property or whether they are deemed to be immoveable property. If there is no intention that the trees should be severed and used as timber, the transaction would be treated as one relating to immoveable property. Therefore, a mortgage of a tree without any intention that the tree should be severed from the land and used as timber, can be validly registered under S. 28 of the Registration Act in the office of the Sub-Registrar within whose jurisdiction the tree is situated. Muhammad Ahmad Shah v. Where the defendants undertook to get a loan of three lakhs of rupees for the plaintiffs on commission and the plaintiffs leased to the defendants a considerable piece of property out of their kamatam lands at a favourable rental of Rs. 500 when it was found that it could yield a rental of Rs. 1,200, and at the same date the plaintiffs were given by the defendants a document (Exhibit 8) in which the following clause appeared: "If the said loan (of three lakhs) could not be given to you for any reason, I shall have the said pattah and muchilika (that is the lease of even date) cancelled and execute a deed of release in your favour," and the loan was never arranged and the plaintiffs brought the present suit for cancellation of the lease and for the execution of the deed of surrender to them, and the defendants objected that Exhibit 8 was inadmissible as not being registered and varying the terms of the registered lease deed, under S. 17, Registration Act, and S. 92 of the Evidence Act. Held that the document was admissible in evidence as embodying a collateral and distinct agreement. It was exempt under the terms of sub-S. 5, cl. 2 of S. 17 of the Registration Act, and hence did not require registration. It is also outside the operation of S. 92 of the Evidence Act whether it be regarded as itself the contract or as evidence of an oral agreement to the same effect.

- (6) S. 17—Lease of coal mine—Half share in lease and certain moveable property, etc., assigned by unregistered document for Rs. 12,500—Admissibility in evidence in regard to moveable property—Admissibility for collateral purposes.

Defendant No. 2 obtained from Government a lease of a coal mine for a period of 15 years. Finding himself in financial difficulties, he made certain representations to the plaintiff concerning the quality of the coal, facilities for working the mine, and the value of certain moveable property, including plant, etc., etc. The plaintiff, while reserving to himself the right to repudiate the bargain in the event of some of the representations proving incorrect, agreed to become joint lessee with the defendant No. 2. They then executed a lease by which defendant No. 2 assigned to the plaintiff a half share in the lease obtained from Government in lieu of an advance of Rs. 12,500 which the plaintiff advanced, and also conveyed to him the moveable property, including plant, etc., for the same consideration. It was further agreed that, if the representations of the defendant No. 2 proved incorrect, the assignee could terminate the arrangement and would be entitled to recover the sum of Rs. 12,500 with interest, and that, if repayment was not made, he could both sell the moveable property and continue as joint lessee until the advance was recovered, and even dispose of his share in the lease of the mine in order to recoup himself.

This lease was not registered. Subsequently, in execution of decree against defendant No. 2, defendant No. 1 attached a part of the moveable property conveyed to the plaintiff. Plaintiff thereupon instituted the present suit for a declaration that the property in question is not liable to attachment or sale.

Held, under the circumstances, that the whole transaction must be regarded as one and indivisible, and there was no separate or distinct transaction concerning the moveable property in the unregistered agreement, (a) and it was not admissible in evidence even as regards the moveable property.

Where a document, which as a whole requires registration, contains separable parts which do not require registration, those parts may be admitted in evidence to prove transactions which ex hypothesi do not affect immoveable property of the value of Rs. 100 or upwards. But the question whether any particular document is so separable is one which depends on the terms of the document.

There is a clear difference between the use of a document for a collateral purpose and its use to establish directly title in a part of the property conveyed (b). G. Bevan Petman v. Ganesh Das, 49 P.R. 1916=149 P.L.R. 1916=144 P.W.R. 1916=34 Ind. Cas. 542.

(15) S. 17 (1) (b) (c)—Construction of deed—Agreement to sell or sale-deed—Agreement to sell not compulsorily registrable—Receipt of earnest money—Proof—Evidence Act, S. 91.

A document which begins by saying "I have absolutely sold the land," but the real meaning of which is expressed in the subsequent words—"I will take the remaining money at the time of the completion of the sale-deed. I shall get the sale-deed completed after going to the spot," is really only a promise to sell by means of a regular deed, plus an acknowledgment of receipt of an earnest money. Such a document does not come under S. 17 (1) (b), Registration Act, and consequently is not compulsorily registrable (a).

A receipt for the Rs. 600 earnest money included in the above mentioned document would require registration under S. 17 (1) (c), of the Registration Act. The fact that such receipt would require registration and was not registered would not affect the agreement to sell as the two parts of the document are separable, and oral evidence of the payment of the earnest money would be admissible under S. 91 of the Evidence Act (b). Sharaf Ali Khan v. (18) Ss. 17, 49—Unregistered deed of sale—Admission of sale by vendor—Inadmissibility of sale deed in evidence—Mutation proceedings admissible to prove alienation irrespective of the sale-deed.

In the present case T, one of the four brothers sold his whole holding under an unregistered deed of sale to B, one of his brothers, but the Revenue authorities found that the sale was in reality to all three brothers of T, and accordingly effected mutation of T's holding in favour of his three brothers in equal shares. B took possession of nearly whole of this land. R, got decree for his $\frac{1}{3}$ share on the strength of the mutation and the deed of sale was not admitted in evidence.

Held, that an unregistered deed of sale of immovable property of the value of Rs. 100 or more is not admissible in evidence to affect the interest of a third person in that property who is no party to the deed even if the vendor himself admits the factum of the sale. Ram Singh v. Held, that the deed had the effect of causing immovable properties, theretofore held by the co-parceners as joint-tenants, to be held by them, thenceforward, as tenants-in-common, and was therefore compulsorily registrable under S. 17, Registration Act, and in the absence of registration the deed could not affect immovable property comprised therein or be received as evidence of any transaction affecting it.

Held further, that the deed was not admissible to prove a partition of moveables even, as the deed formed one indivisible transaction and it was not the intention of the parties that the moveables should be partitioned apart from the immoveables. Pothl Nalkin v. Naganna Naiker, 19 M.L.T. 50 = 3 L.W. 115 = 30 M.L.J. 62 = (1916) M.W.N. 79 = 32 Ind. Cas. 486.

The petition recited that the villages had been given as Stridhanam to D, on 8th October 1895, and concluded as follows: "The said D shall hold and enjoy them (the villages) with the right of alienation thereof by way of gift, mortgage, sale, etc."

Held by the Full Bench that the petition containing the above recitals was not a document declaring the rights of the parties within the meaning of S. 17, Registration Act, and did not require registration, and that consequently it was not rendered inadmissible by S. 49, Registration Act, for proving the nature of the subsequent possession of D (a).

Per Santharan Nair and Coutts-Trotter, JJ.—A Hindu, who was childless, by his last will and testament, devised a greater portion of his properties in favour of the sons of his eldest brother and made a bequest of certain immovable properties to his wife. The Will recited that the bequest to the wife was "on account of her maintenance and other absolute use" and that she was "at liberty to enjoy the same with powers of alienation by sale, etc."

Held that the estate conferred was one of absolute interest and not merely a life interest for maintenance.

Per Coutts-Trotter, J.—According to Indian Law unexecuted or draft wills may, in some cases, be properly given effect to as valid testamentary dispositions.

A transfer of registry in the Collector's register is some evidence of a transfer of ownership.

Having regard to the fact that, whenever the legislature desired to exclude documents creating particular rights, it has specifically mentioned them as will be apparent from the several clauses to sub S. (2), the policy indicated by S. 17 of the Registration Act is that all documents other than those excepted in sub-S. (2), creating rights in immoveable property, as distinguished from documents merely entitling parties to obtain a document creating such rights, should be registered.

For an agreement to lease immoveable property to be compulsorily registrable, it is not necessary that the right should have been created by a single instrument. The term 'documents' appearing in the phrase 'the following documents' in S. 17 of the Registration Act is wide enough to cover more than one letter creating a lease.

Where an agreement to lease is evidenced by more than one letter, the whole correspondence or at any rate the letters containing the offer and the acceptance must be registered. Messrs. Morgan and Son v. Fernandez, 3 L.W. 370=19 M.L.T. 377=(1916) M.W.N. 373=30 M.L.J. 519=33 Ind. Cas. 439.

A separated Hindu died leaving him surviving a widow and a daughter. He had effected two usufructuary mortgages over his property. After his death his widow was recorded in respect of his property. She also created another mortgage. Upon her death disputes arose between her daughter and one of the reversioners in regard to the entry of names before the Revenue Court. A settlement was there come to according to which the daughter gave up all claims to the property in favour of the contesting reversioner and the latter agreed to pay off the encumbrances existing on the property and executed two simple bonds in favour of a third party nominally, but in reality in favour of the daughter. A petition was presented to the Revenue Officer intimating to him the fact of the compromise arrived at between the parties and praying for the entry of the reversioner's name in accordance therewith. Mutation was made in terms thereof. The reversioner, however, did not discharge the debts. Thereupon the daughter brought a suit for possession. Neither the compromise nor the petition to the Revenue Court having been registered, it was objected that the documents were not admissible:

Held, that the plaintiff's suit should be decreed.

Held by Richards, C.J., that a document which purports or operates to create or extinguish some right to or interest in immoveable property of the value of Rs. 100 or upwards, even if it is a document connected with a family settlement, is compulsorily registrable. *Jagrans v. (23) Ss. 17 and 49—Document requiring registration not registered—Admissibility for collateral purpose—Letter setting out terms of equitable mortgage and authorizing the receiving of title deeds from another—Necessity for registration.

A letter setting out the terms of a contract of equitable mortgage and authorizing the addressee to receive the title deeds from a third party is a document which creates a charge and thus affects immoveable property and is compulsorily registrable (a).

An unregistered document which is compulsorily registrable is not admissible even for a collateral purpose (e.g.) to prove a covenant for the payment of compound interest. Swami Chetty v. Ethirajulu Naidu, 3 L.W. 585=(1916) 2 M.W.N. 84=34 Ind. Cas. 553.

(1)—Suit for a decree directing registration—Maintainability Jurisdiction.*

The respondent presented a document to a Sub-Registrar for compulsory registration on the last day of the period fixed by law for presentation, and the Sub-Registrar being too busy to find time to receive the document and issue summons to the executant, advised the respondent to present the document next day with an application to the Registrar under S. 25, cl. (2) of the Registration Act for excusing the delay in not having presented it earlier. The Registrar, on the application being forwarded to him, did not excuse the delay and the Sub-Registrar passed a final order refusing to register the document. Thereupon an appeal was preferred to the Registrar which was dismissed.

Held per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—The order of the Sub-Registrar was an order "refusing to admit a document to registration" within the meaning of S. 72, cl. (1) of the Registration Act and there was an appeal to the Registrar against that order and the dismissal of such an appeal furnished a ground for a suit under S. 77.

Held also that, even otherwise, the appeal might be regarded as an original application to the Registrar to excuse the delay, and the dismissal of the appeal was in effect refusing "to direct the Sub-Registrar to register the document" within the meaning of S. 76, cl. (b) and such a refusal furnished a cause of action for a suit under S. 77.

Per Bakewell, J.—The order of the Sub-Registrar was not an order "refusing to admit a document to registration" within the meaning of S. 72, cl. (1) and no suit lay under S. 77.

Even if the action of the Sub-Registrar be taken as equivalent to an acceptance of a document for registration and a refusal to admit it to registration under S. 34, and the application for enlargement be regarded as made under that section and not S. 25, the Registrar having, in refusing further time, exercised discretion expressly given by statute, the Court had no jurisdiction to interfere. Gangadara Mudali v. * Where the right of Government to assess certain lands claimed as lakheraj with land revenue appeared to have accrued either in 1793 or 1842, the case being governed by sub-S. 2 of S. 2 of (Bengal) Regulation II of 1805 until it was repealed, so far as regards Assam, by S. 28 of Assam Regulation I of 1886.

Held—that, at the end of 60 years, calculated from either of the above dates, Government's right to assess the land with land revenue was time-barred.

Per D. Chatterjee, J.—The proposition that the right to assess revenue is a Sovereign right and cannot be lost can have no application when there is a period of limitation provided by statute such as is contained in Reg. II of 1805.

Per Beachcroft, J.—Government can divest itself of the right to assess revenue and can make such regulations for the guidance of its officers as will have the same practical result as a renunciation of the right to assess revenue.

Proviso 4 to S. 28 of the Assam Regulation I of 1886 would seem intended to reproduce the rule of 60 years' limitation provided by S. 2 of Regulation II of 1805. Its effect is to save the land from assessment if the owner can prove 60 years' possession without payment of revenue, unless Government can prove that at some time within the 60 years, there was a cessation of the assessee's right to so hold it, and this is not affected by proviso 2 to the same section.

Per D. Chatterjee, J.—The proviso excepts a particular class of lands from the operation of the enacting part of the section and no question of giving retrospective operation to the enactment arose in the case (a).

Cl. 2 of the proviso would authorize the assessment of lands excepted from the Permanent Settlement if they were not saved by any of the other excepting clauses of the proviso, and cl. 4 saved the lands in suit from assessment. Ananda Kumar Bhattachari v. On a sale held under S. 70 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation on account of an arrear, a person, who has acquired a good title by adverse possession against the original proprietor at the time of sale, is a defaulter and cannot assert a good title as against the purchaser, an unrecorded proprietor of the estate.

I, Art. 144.*

A person who had no interest in an estate was in adverse possession of lands really included in the estate which was sold under S. 70 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation; he claimed those lands as situated within a neighbouring estate owned by him; his adverse possession had not at the time of sale continued for the statutory period so as to ripen into ownership:

Held, that he was not a defaulting proprietor at the date of the sale and, as he was a stranger to the proceedings for delivery of possession, the symbolical delivery could not avail against him.

Court to examine propriety of values fixed—Rule ultra vires.

The Resident at Aden has been authorized by Cl. 13 of the Aden Settlement Regulation, 1900, to make rules, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, to provide for certain specified matters which included "the assessment and collection of any toll, cess, tax or other impost imposed under the Regulation." The rules so made provided inter alia for the preparation of an assessment list containing 'the annual letting value or other valuation on which the property is assessed,' for complaints to the Executive Committee where any property was for the first time being entered in the list or in which the entered rateable value had been increased, and for appeals against any rateable value to the Judge of the Resident's Court. Rule 12 provided that after appeals, if any, were decided and the results noted in the assessment list, 'all rateable values so entered in the list shall be final.' The lower Courts held that the rule made the decision of the Judge of the Resident's Court in a rating appeal final, in the sense that the person aggrieved could not institute a civil suit to call the valuation into question.

Held, that the r. 12, as read by the lower Courts, amounted to 'the creation of a jurisdiction which the legislature withheld;' and was therefore ultra vires. Abdullah Lalji v. The Executive Committee, Aden, 18 Bom. L. R. 296=40 B. 446=34 Ind. Cas. 141.

After the East India Company had obtained assignments from the Nawab of the Carnatic of the revenues of certain estates, they granted separate sunnads to the holders of the Estates. The assignment contained a provision restraining the company from raising the Peishchush of the Poligars. In pursuance of the assignment, a sunnad was granted to the zamindar of Venkatasagiri fixing permanently the Peishcush payable by him. This amount was arrived at by adding to the established Peishcush the equivalent for the military service but exclusive of the revenue for salt, sayer and abkari, and "exclusive of all lands and rasmums heretofore appropriated to the cost of the Police establishment." The sunnad recited that it contained an abstract of the rights and obligations of the zamindar. The inam lands in question in the suit forming part of the zamindari were not excluded as they were Police lands. Government now attempted to levy a fresh assessment in respect of them. Government had already filed a suit in 1818 in the Provincial Court of Nellore for establishing this right and had failed. The present suit was by the zamindar against the Government for a declaration that Government is not entitled to resume or assess such inams and for an injunction restraining them from holding any investigation and dealing with them under the inam rules.

Held, on a construction of the sunnad and considering the circumstances under which it was granted, that the Government is not entitled to resume or assess the inams in question which were included in the grant to the zamindar, and the zamindar was entitled to hold them so long as he fulfilled the special obligations imposed upon him by sunnad.

Reg. XXV of 1802 which purports to have been passed on 13th July 1802 must be taken to have come into operation that very date.

When Government had acquiesced in plaintiff's rights for over 80 years, the Court would be very slow in coming to the conclusion that Government never intended to grant those rights.

Reg. XXV of 1802 does not debar Government from exercising its sovereign rights to make a grant of Lakshiraj lands, Ss. 12 and 13 are applicable only when inams have been specially reserved under S. 4 (a).

Where a suit had been decided on two grounds, both of them will operate as res judicata (b).

The decision of a competent Court on such a question as the right of Government to resume inams in zamindaris, even if erroneous, is binding upon them and will operate as res judicata (c). The Secretary of State v. - (1) Nature and constitution of mutts—Position of junior Pandarasannadhi—Power of senior to remove him—Grounds for removal—Compromise decree recognising plaintiff as junior Pandarasannadhi—Validity and effect—Immorality of holders of religious offices—Whether entails forfeiture of their offices—S. 367, Civ. Pro. Code (1882)—Suit by legal representative to establish his position—Duty of plaintiff.

Per Wallis, C.J.—The nomination and ordination of a junior Pandarasannadhi is the customary manner of providing for the line of succession in mutts, but the senior Pandarasannadhi has no power of arbitrary dismissal, though he may dismiss the junior for good cause.

The position of the junior Pandarasannadhi during the lifetime of the elder would appear to be that of a co-adjutor with the right of succession, a right of which he cannot be deprived except for grave cause. When an office is held at pleasure, the incumbent may be removed even on charges of misconduct without any opportunity of being heard, because he is removable at pleasure without any misconduct at all, but in all other cases "the objection for want of notice can never be got over."

In this case, the Matadhipathi of the Dharmapuram Adhinam ordained a junior Pandarasannadhi and later on purported to remove the latter without giving him any notice or any opportunity to answer the charges against him. Held, the dismissal was void and inoperative.

On such removal the junior filed a suit questioning the dismissal, and a compromise was entered into recognizing the plaintiff as junior. Held, the consent decree was binding on the parties until it was set aside, just as much as if it had been passed after contest.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—(1) The head of the Mutt is entitled to appoint a junior Pandarasannadhi. (2) this junior has a recognized status, (3) he is entitled to succeed to the headship, if he survives the appointer, (4) for good cause shown he can be removed, (5) the tenure of his position is not dependent upon the good will of the appointer, and (6) it is not open to the head of the Mutt to dismiss him arbitrarily.

These Mutts are not voluntary brotherhoods and the heads of these Mutts have not got plenary powers to expel a member including the junior Pandarasannadhi.

If the head of the Mutt or the junior is proved to be living an immoral life, he is liable to be removed. There can be no condonation of such an offence as in the case of breach of trust by trustees. When a clear case is made out that a religious ascetic who ought to set an example of sexual purity is leading an immoral life, the Courts will find no difficulty in dismissing him from office. But it does not follow that suspected immorality entails forfeiture.

The Matadhipathi in this case sued for a declaration that the defendant who was appointed a junior was not the lawful Pandarasannadhi, and died pending the suit. A person nominated by him as successor before his death applied to continue the suit as his legal representative, but he was directed to bring a fresh suit to establish that he was the legal representative of the deceased Pandarasannadhi. Held, that the plaintiff as legal representative must show that he has stepped into the shoes of the deceased with all the attributes which he claimed, and it was open to the defendant to prove that the deceased had no rights to transmit.

The import of the words in O XXII, r. 3 (1), Civ. Pro. Code, "Where a sole plaintiff dies and the right to sue survives" shows that the applicant should be in a position to lay claim to the right which was agitated in the suit. Conversely the defendant can show that the person who seeks to continue the litigation had not acquired the right claimed, because that right was vested in himself.

Although the force of a consent decree is derived from the consensus ad idem of the parties, it having received additional validity by being accepted by the Court, it cannot be set aside by the consent of the parties as any other contract could have been, but can only be vacated by the Court by a proper proceeding in that behalf. Thiruvambala Desikar Gnanasambanda Pandaram v. Chinna Pandaram alias Manikkavasaka Desikar, 30 M.L.J. 274 = 4 L.W. 306 = (1916) 2 M.W.N. 43 = 40 M. 177 = 34 Ind. Cas. 57.

- (2) Religious trust—Mahant, whether can alienate trust property without authority—Legal necessity—Dispute inter partes adjudicated upon in earlier suit—Pecuniary value of subsequent suit beyond jurisdiction of Court trying previous suit—Finding, whether res judicata—Judgment, admissibility of—S. 11, Civ. Pro. Code (1908).

A trust was created by the Nai community for the maintenance of a Samadh and a Shiwala, and other houses and shops were subsequently built in one enclosure so that the entire enclosure constituted one tenement. The Mahant alienated certain shops. The plaintiffs, as representatives of the Nai community, sued for a declaration that the alienation, being without authority and without consideration and valid necessity, was void. It was found that succession to the entire property was from guru to Chela.

Held, (1) that the trust was a religious trust, and that the property alienated being a part and parcel of the institution, the plaintiffs, as representatives of the author of the trust, were entitled to restrain the trustee from making an improper disposal thereof;

(2) that the building of a house not being such a necessary purpose as would justify an alienation of trust property, the alienation was not binding on the plaintiffs.

Held also that, where the pecuniary value of a suit is beyond the jurisdiction of a Court which adjudicated upon the dispute between the same parties sometime before, any finding then arrived at cannot be treated as res judicata in the subsequent suit, though the judgment of that Court is admissible in evidence. Har Parphad v Shadu, 31 P.W.R. 1916=32 Ind. Cas. 504.

The lands in question in this suit, which belonged to a temple, originally belonged to one taluq and subject to the Devasthanam Committee of that taluq. There was a re-distribution of taluqs in 1894 for revenue purposes, and in that re-distribution the lands fell within the limits of another taluq in another district. This re-distribution was only for revenue purposes.

Held, that the Devasthanam Committee having jurisdiction over the temple and power to appoint a Darmakartha of such temple is the Committee of the taluq to which it originally belonged. K. Rangappa v Karnam Bimappa, 31 M.L.J. 360=39 M. 949=36 Ind. Cas. 284.

- (4) Hindu law—Religious order—Sudra—Yati—Sanyasi—Byragee Mahant—Inheritance—Customary finding re-appeal (Second appeal)—Evidence.

A Sudra cannot become a yati or sanyasi according to the Smritis.

If a person once renounces the world and adopts a religious order like that of a byragee mahant he would not by reverting to worldly affairs in his new life cease to be a byragee mahant and if a well defined usage or custom governs the succession in the new order, there is nothing in Hindu Law to prevent the said usage or custom binding him and his property (a).

The finding of the lower appellate Court as to the existence of a custom or usage by which a chela succeeds to a byragee mahant cannot be questioned in second appeal on the ground that the evidence to establish the same is not sufficient. Lochan Bholmali v. (3) S. 7—Suit by two out of three members of a committee—Bad for non-joinder of parties—Succession to office of darago—Custom.

Where two out of three of the members constituting a committee appointed under S. 7 of the Religious Endowments Act, 1863, bring a suit for the removal of the person or persons acting as the trustee or trustees of the endowment. Held such a suit was not maintainable. Such an action would be bad for defective joinder of parties.

Such a committee is a corporation; the members do not claim any individual right. What they assert is a joint right exercisable by them all in a corporate capacity. And as long as they jointly constitute a corporate body each and every member of the corporation must be joined as plaintiffs to entitle them to succeed.

A committee appointed under S. 7 of the Religious Endowments Act is a corporation having a legal entity and is analogous in all respects to every other corporation (a).

If one member of the corporation is dead, then the survivors can act until the new member may be appointed.

Unless there was legal evidence to establish a custom that the office was transmissible to the eldest male descendant of the last surviving daraga, the ordinary law would apply and the office would be transmissible to the succeeding heirs of the last surviving daraga. Syed Muhammad Hasan v. Remand.

(1) Remand order by appellate Court without retaining case on file—Whole case if open before Court to which case remanded—Limitation of scope of appeal remanded by High Court.

In strict law a remand made by an appellate Court without retaining the appeal in its own file necessarily re-opens the whole case and the Court of Appeal to which the case is remanded is bound to hear the appeal upon the judgment of the Court of first instance and on nothing else.

But the High Court, in the exercise of its powers of supervision under the Charter, rightly assumes in certain cases authority to limit the scope of certain appeals remanded to the lower Court without keeping them on its own file. But whenever this is done, it is absolutely essential that the High Court should lay down clearly without any possibility of mistake that it did intend to limit the scope of the appeal to certain specified questions. Kartik Chandra Das v. (3) Sale for arrears for rent—Application to set aside sale—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), S. 174—Effect of non payment of the 5 per cent. provided for by the section—“Officer of the Court”—Review—Appeal.

There is no duty cast upon the officer of the Court to give any information to the defendant, for any purpose which he might require under S. 174 for the purpose of making a deposit under that section. The law throws the obligation upon the defendant, himself, to ascertain for himself by whatever means he likes, the amount he has to pay into Court. But it casts no responsibility, no duty whatsoever, upon the officer of the Court to furnish information or give information. If an officer of the Court does yield to any application that may be made to him by a judgment-debtor, then he gives that information, not by virtue of his acting as an officer of the Court, but solely by virtue of his friendship, or regard, or as agent of the individual to whom he gives the information (a).

What constitutes an act of the Court must depend upon the circumstances of each case. Mere casual act by an officer of the Court cannot be treated as the Court's act. For an act to be clothed with that character, must be an act of a prescribed officer acting in accordance with the prescribed rules of the Court.

The deposit of money, to be a valid deposit and to give the Court jurisdiction, to accept and set aside the sale must be heard within 30 days from the sale and not later. There may however be cases where possibly a mistake might have been or may be made, where an individual judgment-debtor may be misled by an officer of the Court, as such. In such a case the Court always has power in the exercise of its jurisdiction to redress a wrong.

Where an order setting aside a sale under S. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act was without jurisdiction, the High Court had jurisdiction to set aside the order of the first Court refusing to review the order to set aside the sale. Sarjoo Prasad Misra v. Nannoo Rai, 1 Pat. L.J. 459 = 35 Ind. Cas. 779.

(4) Suit for rent—Rent claimed at higher rate than amount entered in Road Cess Return—Road Cess Act (IX of 1880), S. 20—Effect of entry in Record of Rights.

The mere alteration in area due either to re-measurement or to encroachment will not take the case out of S. 20 of the Road Cess Act.

Neither the entry in the Record of Rights, which only raises a presumption, nor the jama wasilakki, which only shows the defendant's rent in any particular year, can override the statutory prohibition contained in S. 20 of the Road Cess Act.

Res Judicata.

(1) Ostensible owner, transfer by, when binds real owner—Transfer of Property Act, S. 41.

In a suit by A to recover from B property the title to which was disputed between A and B, M, in whose favour B had on 14th March 1893 executed a usufructuary mortgage—in lieu whereof on 21st January 1895 another mortgage was executed in his favour by B,—was made a defendant, apparently on the ground of his being a transferee under the mortgage of 14th March, 1893. The suit was decreed.

In a suit by M to enforce his mortgage of 21st January, 1895, which the representative in title of A contested, the High Court held that the decision in the previous suit was res judicata and also that S. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act did not apply to give M a title, although B had got his name entered in the Revenue papers as owner, because, the application for the entry having been opposed by A, B could not be said to have been entered as ostensible owner with A's consent, and also because, if M had made enquiries before he advanced money to B, he could have discovered the fact of B's opposition and facts showing B's title.

The Judicial Committee on appeal found the judgment of the High Court to be so satisfactory and sufficient that they felt themselves justified in advising the dismissal of the appeal without following the practice of making an elaborate report. Nagheswar Prasad Pande v. Raja Pateshri Partab Narayan Singh, 20 C.W.N. 265 = 3 L.W. 454 = (1916) M.W.N. 142 (P.C.) = 34 Ind. Cas. 673.

(2) Prior suit—Dismissal on the ground of limitation—Question as to validity of sale by receiver raised in later suit—No bar of res judicata—Limitation Act, 1908—Non-applicability to defences—S. 28, Limitation Act—Party in possession—His rights not affected by the section.

In execution of a decree obtained against B, M and their sons, U was appointed receiver with authority to sell certain properties and to clear off the decree-debt. U sold a house belonging to B, M and their brother G, to N. N obtained possession of the house except two kothris. N brought against G and others the present suit for the recovery of the two kothris. G had already sued for the cancellation of the sale effected by U, but his suit was dismissed as time-barred. In the present suit G again pleaded that the sale was not binding on him.

Held, that the matter in dispute cannot be regarded as res judicata, for nothing was decided in the former suit, which was dismissed on the score of limitation.

The Limitation Act only provides periods of limitation within which suits must be brought. It does not provide periods of limitation for defences.

S. 28 of the Limitation Act is also no bar, as that section merely provides that, at the determination of the period allowed by law to any person for instituting a suit for possession of any property, his right to such property shall be extinguished. Gokal Chand v. Nidar Mal, 1 P.R. 1916—32 Ind. Cas. 485.

(3) Res judicata within time for appeal—Subsequent suit—Appeal pending—No appeal in subsequent suit.

A landlord filed suits in 1910 against the tenant to enforce acceptance of pattas for Faslis 1818 and 1919. They were dismissed by the Sub-Collector on the 19th December 1910 on the ground of want of jurisdiction but were remanded for disposal by the District Court on the 28th November, 1911. The Sub-Collector on remand passed a decree in both suits on the 26th March, 1912. Appeals were filed to the District Court on the 17th June, 1912. The landlord filed a suit in 1911 against the tenant to enforce acceptance of patta for Fasli 1320. The Sub-Collector on the 23rd May 1912, passed a decree in favour of the landlord on the ground that the decision in the earlier suits passed on the 26th March, 1912, rendered the contentions raised in the suit res judicata. No appeal was filed by the defendant against the decree in the suit of 1911. Appeals against the suits of 1910 came on for disposal before the District Judge on the 7th December, 1912, and he dismissed them on the ground that the decision of the Sub-Collector in the suit of 1911 against which no appeal was filed, rendered the question raised in the appeal res judicata.

Held, on second appeal: (1) that the Sub-Collector was wrong in holding that the decision passed by him in the suits of 1910 had the force of res judicata during the interval between the date of his decree and time allowed by law for filing the appeal:

(2) that the erroneous decision in the suit of 1911 which was not on the merits but on a mistaken view of the law by the Sub-Collector would not render the question raised in the appeals against the decrees in the suits of 1910 res judicata; and (3) that the District Judge was not debarred from deciding the appeals on the merits because no appeal was filed against the decree in the connected suit.

An appeal is only a continuation of the original proceedings and the decree passed by the appellate Court is the decree in the suit. On the filing of an appeal, the judgment ceases to be res judicata and becomes sub judice.

The functions of an appellate Court are not the same in England and America as in India and consequently great care has to be exercised before the decisions based on practice and procedure of a highly technical character are followed in considering questions arising under the Civ. Pro. Code.

Explanation IV to S. 13 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1892 which enacted that a decision liable to appeal may be final within the meaning of the section until the appeal is made, has been omitted in the present Code of 1908, and the omission which was in all probability made in view of the decision of 11 A. 148 removes any doubts or difficulties in dealing with the question; and it is not necessary to speculate on the class of cases to which this explanation can be applied, if a judgment liable to appeal is only held to be provisional and not operative as res judicata. Chengalavala Gurrazu v. Venkateswar Row, (1916) M.W.N. 223=19 M.L.T. 268=30 M.L.J. 379=33 Ind. Cas. 9.

(4) Claims when ought to be joined by plaintiff.

The plaintiff cannot be allowed to litigate his title over again unless his claims are mutually destructive or there is any embarrassment in joining the rights. Where the plaintiff did not set up the title which he could have brought forward as an alternative basis of his claim on the last occasion, he cannot be allowed to litigate it in a second suit.

(5) Ex parte order in execution, if constitutes—Test—Execution petition, dismissal for default of, if affects prior order in execution which has become res judicata.

An ex parte order in execution may operate as res judicata in subsequent stages of the same proceedings. The test to be applied is whether a person allowed the order to be passed against him at one stage of the proceedings when he had an opportunity to contest the validity of that order and if he has done so, he will not be permitted in subsequent proceedings in that suit to contest the validity of that order and re-open questions which he ought to have met in the former proceeding (a).

The dismissal for default of an execution application has not the effect of vacating a prior order in execution which has become res judicata between the parties (b). Periakaruppan Chetty v. Chidambaram Thambiran, 3 L. W. 339=(1916) 2 M.W.N. 64=33 Ind. Cas. 443.

(6) Application to execute decree as assignee granted—No objection thereto—Notice issued to judgment-debtor—Objection raised subsequently, barred.

(9) Finding of fact—Matter directly in issue—Implied decision.

The plaintiff sued for the property of his uncle's son S. The defendant pleaded that he was adopted son of the plaintiffs' uncle and S was imbecile and the factum and validity of adoption were res judicata. The pleas were allowed.

In a previous suit the plaintiff alleged that S was an imbecile and denied the factum and validity of the adoption and claimed the whole of the property of another uncle of his. The first Court had found that S was imbecile and adoption was not proved. On appeal the adoption was held proved and opinion was expressed that there was no need to go into the question of imbecility of S.

Held, that the plaintiff's present suit was barred by res judicata, for in the previous suit the Court by deciding the validity of the adoption had impliedly found that S was an imbecile. Onkar Lal v. Radha Nath, 95 P.L.R. 1916=36 Ind. Cas. 267.

(10) Plea of res judicata whether, may be waived—Judgments inter partes—Later adjudication supersedes earlier one.

The plea of res judicata is one which does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court, but is a plea in bar of a trial of a suit or an issue as the case may be, which a party is at liberty to waive.

On principle it is impossible to make a distinction between a case where the plea is omitted to be taken by accident or mistake and where it is omitted to be taken by design (a).

On principle, in cases of judgments inter partes, the later adjudication should be taken as superseding the earlier. Moturi Seshayya v. Sri Rajah Venkatadri Appa Row, 31 M.L. J. 219=(1916) 2 M.W.N. 219=36 Ind. Cas. 283.

(11) Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), S. 11—Decision embodied in decree.

The plaintiff sued, in 1910, to eject the defendant from certain lands, praying that the mulgeni lease executed by a predecessor-in-title of his to defendant was invalid and not binding on him, and that the plaintiff was entitled to evict the defendant as a yearly tenant. The Court decided the first point in the plaintiff's favour; but held that for want of notice the plaintiff was not entitled at that stage to evict the defendant. After due notice given the plaintiff again sued the defendant in ejectment. The defendant pleaded once more the mulgeni lease in his favour. The lower Courts held that the defence was barred by res judicata and decreed the claim. On second appeal:—Held, that the law of res judicata was applicable, inasmuch as in the earlier suit the first part of the plaintiff's prayer found a place in the decretal order and was as much decreed as the other part of the prayer which in the second part of that decretal order was rejected. Mota Hollappa v. (12) Finding by the lower Courts—Decision by the High Court on a different point—Strict construction adopted—Adverse possession—Disturbance of possession under decree of Court—Decree reversed in Second Appeal—Continuity of possession broken—Evidence Act, S. 114.

The plaintiff, a trustee of a temple, sued to eject the 1st defendant. The defence was that he was a permanent mulgeni tenant and could not be ejected. The plaintiff had sued the 1st defendant and others for possession before, when this defendant set up the same defence and the two lower Courts held that the defendant was only a chalgani tenant and decreed possession, but the High Court reversed the decrees on the ground of insufficiency of notice. Hence the present suit. The plaintiff contended that the plea of the defendant was barred by res judicata. The District Judge upheld the contention.

Held, that the defendant's plea was not res judicata, the plea of res judicata being one in restraint of the right of a litigant to have his case fully tried and determined.

The judgment which is pleaded in bar of this right must be strictly construed (a).

Illustration (e) to S. 114 of the Evidence Act is not exhaustive and the general language of the section applies to all acts and proceedings which might be presumed to have been done in the usual course of business.

When defendant began to assert an adverse title from 1894, plaintiff brought a suit in 1903 in ejectment and got possession under the decree of the Court below which was reversed in Second Appeal and the defendant got into possession again. It was held that in consequence of this disturbance of possession, the continuous possession which the defendant was bound to have proved was broken in a second suit by the plaintiff to eject the defendant.

28 M. 338 is no authority for the position that the period during which possession was taken under a hostile title would enure for title benefit of the original holder. Laxmipathaya v. Ramachendra. (13) Question of Law.

(Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—In his order of reference), the decision on a question of law in one proceeding is, not res judicata in any later proceeding except to this extent, namely, that the right which was the object matter of the former proceeding and was established in favour of one party cannot be questioned in the subsequent proceeding (b). *Aiyasamier v. During the minority of defendant No. 1 a piece of land belonging to him was sold by his mother to Bhoje who conveyed it to Bavohi. It was then mortgaged by Bavohi to plaintiff in 1891. Defendant No. 1 having attained majority brought a suit in 1898 against his mother, Bhoje and Bavohi to set aside the sale. To this suit plaintiff was not a party. The suit was decided in defendant No. 1's favour; and in execution, he recovered possession of the land in 1901. About that time, the plaintiff obtained a decree on his mortgage against Bavohi; and he purchased the land at a Court sale held in execution of his decree. The plaintiff having sued to recover possession of the property, was met by the plea of res judicata, inasmuch as he was bound by the decree against his mortgagor Bavohi in 1898.

Held, negating the plea, that the plaintiff, as a mere mortgagee, was not bound by the earlier decision, because his title arose prior to the suit in which the decree against his mortgagor was obtained, and the mortgagor Bavohi possessing only the equity of redemption had not in him any such estate as would enable him sufficiently to represent the mortgagee in the suit instituted after the mortgage (a).

To make the principle of res judicata applicable, there must be between the parties in the earlier and the later suit some privity. Ramchandra v. Malkapa, 18 Bom. L.R. 767=40 B. 679=36 Ind. Cas. 413.

In 1888, the plaintiff's brother, a saranjamdar, sued the predecessors-in-title of the defendants for the recovery of possession of the suit land on the ground that the defendant had ceased to perform service and had been holding the lands wrongfully without payment of assessment. The Court held in favour of the defendants that they did not hold the lands on condition of rendering the service. The plaintiff, who became the saranjamdar on his brother's death sued, in 1912, to recover possession of the land on the ground that the defendants had no longer been rendering any service; and, in the alternative, he sued to recover assessment of the lands. The lower Courts held that the suit was barred by res judicata and limitation. On appeal:

Held, (1) that the decision of 1888 operated as res judicata, for the plaintiff took the estate, as it was on the death of the previous holder, by virtue of his inheritance from the previous holder subject to the provisions of the formal resumption and re-grant by Government free

In 1896, K (father of defendants Nos. 1 and 2) mortgaged to R (predecessor-in-title of defendant No. 3) an unrecognised share of a bhag, on condition that after possession by the mortgagee for eleven years the mortgage amount was to be paid to him whenever he should demand it either out of property or by the mortgagor or his heirs personally. R went into possession of the land ; but his rights under the mortgage claim were sold and purchased by the plaintiff at a Court-sale. The plaintiff filed a suit in 1910 against the defendants to obtain possession of the property : the suit failed on the ground that the mortgage was invalid. In 1911, he filed the present suit to recover Rs. 788-7-0 from the estate of the deceased mortgagor or, in the alternative, to recover a smaller sum from the holder of a decree against the representative of the deceased mortgagee. The claim having been resisted on the grounds that it was barred by limitation and res judicata inasmuch as the plaintiff might and ought to have made the present claim in the suit of 1910 :

Held (1) that the claim was not barred by res judicata for (a) the claim for possession was not really a claim on the mortgage but a claim by virtue of the purchase by the plaintiffs of the mortgagee's rights ; and (b) at the time of the suit of 1910 his right according to the terms of the mortgage-deed had not matured, no demand having been made since the expiry of the eleven years mentioned in the deed ;

(2) that the claim was barred by reason of Art. 62 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, for the mortgage-deed being void the consideration failed ab initio and the mortgagee's right was to claim repayment of the money advanced to the mortgagor within three years of the date of the mortgage-deed as money had and received. Bai Diwali v. Plaintiff sues the defendants for the rent of a holding at the rate of Rs. 30 per mensem. The defendants plead that the holding was rent free. In a previous suit between the parties under S. 23, Act X of 1959 in which the plaintiff claimed rent at the rate of Rs. 49-3-0, the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpur found that the rent was at the rate of Rs. 30 but dismissed the suit on the ground that the rate claimed was higher.

Held that the rate of rent was a question directly and substantially in issue in the former suit and that it operated as res judicata in the present suit and was binding on the defendants (a). Restitution.

(1) Dependent judgment or order—Restitution, when to be had—Limitation—Interest—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), S. 144.

It is a general rule, that, upon the reversal of a judgment, order or decree, all connected or dependent judgments or orders fall with it, specially judgments subsequently entered and dependent thereupon; but this rule does not operate by implication to set aside a distinct and independent judgment or proceeding though it forms a part of the same litigation.

Whether a judgment or order is a dependent judgment or order, that is, is merely ancillary and accessory to another judgment so as to have its fate and fall to the ground along with it, is to be determined from the nature and scope of the proceedings.

In cases not comprehended strictly within the letter of S. 144 of the Civ. Pro. Code (which makes grant of restitution obligatory in certain circumstances) restitution is not a matter of right but depends upon the sound discretion of the Court and will be ordered only when the justice of the case calls for it; but the test of what is just, must be determined with reference to the imperative requirements of the law applicable to the subject-matter.

An obligation is imposed upon the Court to dismiss an application for execution of a decree, if the application is barred by limitation. Hence the Court cannot withhold relief by way of restitution, when a sum has been paid out on the strength of an erroneous decision upon a point of limitation.

The Court will not permit an injustice to be done by reason of an erroneous order made by it and will, when that erroneous order has been reversed, restore the parties to the position which they would otherwise have occupied.

When a person receives money under a decree which is afterwards reversed on appeal, the statute of limitation commences to run in his favour only from the reversal (a).

When a decree-holder withdraws money under a decree which is afterwards reversed on appeal, he is bound to restore the amount with interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum from the date of withdrawal to the date of repayment into Court (b). *Ashutosh Goswami v. (3) Limitation Act (1908), S. 12—High Court judgment—Application for review—Limitation if runs from before the signing of decrees—High Court Rules, Appellate Side, Chap. XI, r. 4—Deputy Registrar certifying application not in order—Application if must be presented within seven days of return of application with such certificate—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), S. 153—Question of title raised but not decided by Munsif exercising final jurisdiction—Appeal to District Judge if lies—District Judge deciding question of title in appeal—Second appeal if lies.

In computing the period of limitation, for an application for review of a judgment of the High Court, the party applying for review is entitled to have excluded, under S. 12 of the Limitation Act, the time requisite for taking a copy of the decree, and the period of limitation cannot in such a case commence to run until, at all events, the day the decree was signed by the Judges.

Rule 4 of Chap. XI of the Appellate Side Rules was intended to apply to the case where the Deputy Registrar gives a certificate that the review application was in order, and not to cases where the certificate is to the effect that the proceedings were not in order.

The application for review was properly presented to the Courts presided over by the Chief Justice, as there was no time, after the application was put in order, to present it to the Bench which had disposed of the appeal in the first instance, one of them having retired from the Court some days before and the other having gone away on furlough two days after that date.

In a suit to recover arrears of rent (the amount in claim being less than Rs. 50) the defendant objected that the plaintiff was his benamidar. The Munsif, who had final jurisdiction under S. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act declined to go into the question of title, but dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to prove realisation of rent from the defendant in previous years. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge and also preferred an application for revision under the proviso to S. 153. The District Judge overruled the defendant's objection in the appeal that no appeal lay under S. 153, and found for the plaintiff on the merits.

Review—(Continued).

Held.—That no appeal lay to the District Judge from the decision of the Munsif as no question of conflicting title was decided by it; and the decision of the District Judge to the contrary was erroneous in law.

That a second appeal lay against this decision (a).

Held, per Sanderson, C.J.—That an appeal lay from the decision of the District Judge, which decided a question of conflicting title under S. 153, Bengal Tenancy Act (b).

Per Mookerjee, J.—Where jurisdiction is usurped by a Court in passing an order against which an appeal would lie if it had been passed with jurisdiction, an appeal against the order cannot be defeated on the ground that the order was made without jurisdiction (c).

The Court directed the District Judge to deal with the application for revision under the proviso to S. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Gangadhar Karmakar v. Sekhar Basini Dasgupta, 20 C.W.N. 967 = 24 C.L.J. 235 = 35 Ind. Cas. 348.

(4) Non-appealing party, if can apply—Appeal to lower appellate Court—Second appeal by some of the parties—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLVII, r. 2—“Where the ground of such appeal and the review are based on the same grounds”—Decree of the appellate Court, effect of—Appeal by some of the parties, effect of.

The plaintiffs instituted a suit for recovery of possession of land against five defendants, who claimed to hold it under one title. The suit was decreed. An appeal preferred by all the defendants was dismissed. Three of the defendants (i.e., the defendants other than the first two) then preferred a second appeal and made respondents the plaintiffs and also the defendants who had not joined them in the appeal. The appeal was summarily dismissed under O. XLII, r. 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure:

Held, that an application for review on the ground of discovery of new and important evidence by the first two defendants, who did not prefer a second appeal, was entertainable by the lower appellate Court.

A defendant, who has not himself appealed, may apply for a review of judgment, notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal by a co-defendant, except in two contingencies, namely, first, where the ground for review is identical with the ground for appeal, and secondly when, as respondent in the appeal, he can present to the appellate Court the case on which he seeks review. Where the grounds on which the appeal was preferred were different from the ground on which the review is sought, namely, the discovery of new and important matter or evidence, the case does not fall within the exception.

Review—(Continued).

The expression "where the ground of such appeal is common to the applicant and the appellant" in O. XLVII, r. 1 (3) of the Code of Civil Procedure, refers to a case where the appeal and the review are based on the same grounds, and does not contemplate a comparison between the actual appeal by the defendant and a possible hypothetical appeal by the applicant for review.

If the decree of the lower Court is reversed by the appellate Court, it is absolutely dead and gone; if, on the other hand, it is affirmed by the appellate Court, it is equally dead and gone, though in a different way, namely, by being merged in the decree of the superior Court which takes its place for all intents and purposes; both the decrees cannot exist simultaneously. The fact that an appeal has been dismissed under O. XII, r. 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure, makes no difference in principle (a).

The effect of an appeal by some alone of the parties affected by a decree, is to leave untouched the decree as between the parties thereto. Chandra Kant Bhattacharyya v. Lakshman Chandra Chakrabarti, 24 O.L.J. 517 = 21 O.W.N. 430 = 36 Ind. Cas. 460.

Revision.

(1) Interlocutory order—No revision lies where the final decree to be passed by the lower Court would be appealable.

Held, that ordinarily no revision lies to the Chief Court from an interlocutory order, where the final decree to be passed by the Court of first instance would be appealable. Nawab Khan v. Mussammat Mehr Bano, 76 P.L.R. 1916=36 Ind. Cas. 57.

(3) Interference in—Practice as to—Civ. Pro. Code, S. 115—Practice.

The High Court will not ordinarily interfere in revision with orders which can be questioned in an appeal from the final decree or set aside by a regular suit. But this is only a rule for the exercise of the Court's discretion, and there is nothing to prevent the High Court from interfering with an order from which no appeal lies, if the ends of justice require it; and in cases where a party can obtain complete and effective relief by the expeditious and cheap method of revision, the High Court may well grant that relief.

S. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure says the High Court may make "such order as it thinks fit." The word "fit" is singularly wide and it would be a mistake to treat this section as fettering the Court's discretion to refuse to pass an order in revision which would in its opinion operate inequitably, or even one which it is not satisfied to be necessary in the interests of justice (a). *Mulambath Kunhammad v. Whether the order of a District Munsif under S. 73 of the Madras Village Courts Act, is subject to revision under S. 115 of the Civ. Pro. Code or S. 15 of the Charter Act, the High Court has a discretion to interfere or not according to the circumstances of the case.

Right of Suit.

(1) Right to officiate at funeral, suit for declaration as to—Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877), S. 42, "legal character"—Code of Civil Procedure (V of 1908), S. 9, "right of office."

This was a suit by a priest alleging that he has by custom a right to officiate at all funeral ceremonies performed upon the banks of the

Ganges between certain definite points, that the principal defendant in the case, in contravention of this custom, entered the house within the birt of the plaintiff, and received from his household a certain sum of money, that by old established custom based upon a Will made 300 years ago, any priest entering upon the birt of another is bound to refund any sums realised from disciples living in that birt. The relief sought for in the plaint was (1) a declaration of the plaintiff's Mahapatni birt jujmanka, (2) that the boundaries thereof be declared, (3) that it be declared that the house in which defendant officiated comes within those boundaries, (4) that the amount received by him be recovered from the defendant, and (5) that a permanent injunction be issued restraining defendant from trespassing upon the plaintiff's birt.

Held (1) that the right to go into the house of a disciple when called for by him, or to enter upon it as of right though not called for, does not create any legal character, and that no suit for a declaration of such a right is maintainable;

(2) that the plaintiff's claim did not come within the words "legal character" in S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, or "the right to an office" in S. 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure;

(3) the freedom of the subject entitles all Hindus to call in at any time their own particular priest, or any priest whom they may themselves prefer, to perform any office; and so long as that inherent freedom exists, there can vest in no one any legal character or any right to the office of performing ceremonies in private houses. Therefore no suit for a declaration of any such right will lie.

(4) Plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for any money unless he can prove that there was a contract between himself and the defendant, whereby that defendant has bound himself to pay to the plaintiff all sums received from ceremonies performed within the plaintiff's birt.

Mere proof of a custom that among the Brahmin priests of Patna there was an implied contract not to interfere with the rights of each other, did not amount to proof of a contract by the defendant to pay to the plaintiff sums of money received for officiating at ceremonies within the plaintiff's birt.

No suit will lie for recovery of a voluntary offering, if that suit is based upon custom (a). Hira Panday v. Bachu Panday, 1 Pat. L.J. 381 = 35 Ind. Cas. 345.

bound by contract to give the plaintiff a certain share of his earnings (a).

Where there is a definite contract by which a Gayawal undertakes that if he performs any ceremonies without calling in his Acharjya to assist, he will pay to Acharjya in one set of circumstances three-fourths and in another the whole of his (Gayawal's) earnings from the performances of those ceremonies, such a contract is not void. A clause in a mortgage deed provided on the face of it that the mortgagee could not sue unless (1) the entire demand for two instalments for two consecutive years and interest for the principal on two consecutive years remained unpaid and (2) nothing was paid for two consecutive years on account of principal or interest. Held that it was not the intention of the parties that the two sub-clauses should be treated independently of each other and therefore the right to sue did not accrue to the mortgagee unless nothing was paid on account of principal or interest for two years. *Babu Narendra Bahadur v. Riparian Rights.

Rights of Riparian owner—Infringement—Damages—Proof—Revenue proceedings—Res judicata—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), S. 11.

The right of a Riparian owner to use the water flowing past his land is a natural right and it must be in respect of a natural stream and not an artificial waterway.

To exercise such a right, it is not necessary that the water should empty itself into a river or a lake. So long as water runs in a defined channel which is not artificial, and from a known source and it goes past a man's land, that man has the right to treat it as a stream from its source so far as the lower end of his land (a).

A person who owns land which is not on the bank of a river or stream cannot possibly have the rights of a riparian owner, for even a riparian owner properly so called, because he occupies land on the bank of a stream, cannot use the water from the stream for the purposes of a piece of land which is not on the bank (b).

In order to support an action by one riparian owner to restrain another person diverting the water beyond his riparian tenement it is not necessary that the plaintiff should prove that he has suffered any damage. Nor the fact that the plaintiff's land is simply irrigated independently of the stream constitutes a defence to the plaintiff's suit (c).

Sale.

(1) Payment of consideration, whether necessary to pass title—Registration of sale-deed, effect of—Intention of parties—Suit for redemption—Mortgagee, possession of.

Ordinarily upon the due execution and registration of a sale-deed, the title in the property sold passes from the vendor, unless it is proved that both the parties intended that the payment of price should be a condition precedent to the transfer of ownership (a).

Where, therefore, a sale-deed was properly executed and registered and the vendor recited in the deed and admitted before the Sub-Registrar that he had received the entire consideration but no part of the price was ever paid to him.

Held, that, despite the non-payment of consideration, the terms of the deed coupled with the acknowledgment before the Sub-Registrar showed that the vendor intended to divest and did indeed divest himself of the ownership which immediately vested in the vendee (b).

In order to prove to have acquired title by adverse possession, a mortgagee cannot rely on 12 years' rule, unless he proves a subsequent

In a suit for specific performance of the contract, held that, having regard to S. 27, Specific Relief Act, the onus of proving that he was a bona fide purchaser without notice lay on the defendant and that his subsequently registered sale-deed had no priority over the contract for sale in favour of the plaintiff. *Naubat Rai v. (3) Money left with vendee to pay off mortgagee—Money not paid—Suit against vendee—Trust.

One L mortgaged certain zamindari and mortgagee rights to J. D. She then sold the entire mortgaged property to R, leaving with him money to pay off the mortgage of J. D. J. D. sued for sale on foot of his mortgage and got a decree. The zamindari was sold, but the mortgage rights could not be sold. In consequence, a balance was left due to J. D., who made an application for a decree under S. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act. This was granted against the mortgagor. J. D. now sued R on the ground that a trust had been created in his favour in respect of the money left with R to be paid to him. Held, that no trust was created in his favour. He was no party to the sale in favour of R and his rights to proceed against the mortgaged property were in no way affected by it. Jamuna Das v. Ram Autar Pande, 14 A.L.J. 151=38 A. 209=33 Ind. (4) Vendor and purchaser—Contract to sell land—Contract Act, S. 55—Time of the essence of the contract—Time for completion fixed by the contract, effect of—Specific performance—Undue delay—Intention—Forfeiture of deposit and power to resell, if contract not completed within a fixed time.

Where, in a suit for specific performance of a contract to sell land, the issue is whether time is of the essence of the contract, the law applicable to the point is contained in the Contract Act, S. 55, which does not lay down any principle which differs from those which obtain under the law of England as regards contracts to sell land. Under English law equity, which governs the rights of parties in cases of specific performance of contracts to sell real estate, looks not at the letter, but at the substance of the agreement, in order to ascertain whether the parties, notwithstanding that they named a specific time within which completion was to take place, really and in substance intended more than that it should take place within a reasonable time. That section adopts and embodies in reference to sales of land that doctrine which is laid down in (1802) 2 Sch. and Lef. 692, (1853) 3 D.M. and G. 284, (1867) 3 Ch. App. Cases 61 and (1915) A.C. 386.

The Court will apply the doctrine, if it can do justice between the parties, and if there is nothing in the express stipulation between the parties, the nature of the property or the surrounding circumstances which would make it inequitable to interfere with or modify the legal right.

The application of the doctrine may be excluded by any plainly expressed stipulation, if its language plainly excludes the notion that the fixed time limits were of merely secondary importance in the bargain, and that to disregard them would be to disregard nothing that lay at its foundation.

The doctrine however will not be applied where there has been undue delay on the part of one party to the contract, and the other has given him reasonable notice that he must complete within a definite time.

The Court will infer an intention that time should be of the essence from what has passed between the parties prior to the signing of the contract, the construction of which, however, cannot be affected by what takes place after it has once been entered into.

A stipulation in a contract of sale of land that, should the purchaser not pay the balance of the purchase money within the period therein fixed, he was to have no right to the deposit paid on account and any claim of his was to be void, and the vendor was, after the fixed date, to be at liberty to resell, was held not to make time of the essence of the contract. Jamshed Khodaram Irani v. Burjorji Dhunjibhai, 30 M.L.J. 186=19 M.L.T. 184=3 L.W. 239=23 C.L.J. 358=20 C.W.N. 744=18 Bom. L.R. 163=(1916) M.W.N. 229=14 A.L.J. 225=40 B. 289=32 Ind. Cas. 246 (P.C.).

of that sale can be adduced under S. 91 of the Evidence Act (a).

When a transaction which is avoidable is admitted by the person, who is entitled to avoid it, it cannot be questioned by a third party.

Secondary evidence in the nature of admission by vendor as to sale of immovable property in favour of vendee, cannot, in the absence of conditions mentioned in cl. (b) of S. 65 of the Evidence Act, be admitted.

(6) Reg. No. XXXI of 1803, S. 6—Sale deed reserving condition that vendee would pay revenue for land sold as well as for that not sold—Validity of covenant—Liability of vendee upon transfer by vendor of the land reserved.

One Altaf Hussain sold certain land to the predecessor of the defendants and reserved some land for himself. The sale-deed contained a covenant to the effect that the vendee would pay the revenue for his share as well as for the land reserved by the vendor for himself. The vendor subsequently sold the reserved land to the plaintiff. In a suit to recover the revenue which the plaintiff had to pay owing to the defendants' refusal to pay:

Held, that the agreement was void and that the covenant was a personal one and the plaintiff had no right to sue for the breach of such a covenant. Ali Hussain v. Hakim-ul-lah, 14 A. L.J. 266=38 A. 230=33 Ind. Cas. 187.

Where a person, having by the same deed conveyed his occupancy and fixed-rate holdings for a certain consideration, afterwards sued to set aside the sale on the ground that the transaction was illegal covering as it did the sale of his occupancy holding which was prohibited by law, held, that the plaintiff could not succeed in the suit to set aside the sale of the fixed rate holding. The maxim 'in pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis' applied.

The contract for sale is one thing and a deed of transfer is another, and it does not necessarily follow that because the contract is unenforceable, the transfer is void. Bajrangli Lal v. Ghura Rai, 14 A.L.J. 276=38 A. 332=32 Ind. Cas. 913.

(8) Oral sale without possession—Subsequent one by registered deed—Notice of first sale—No priority to second vendee—Registration Act (1908), S. 48.

Plaintiff bought certain land by oral agreement which was recorded in the Patwari's diary. Possession could not be handed over to the plaintiff as the land formed part of a larger area under mortgage. The same land was later on sold to defendant (one of the mortgagees) by registered deed :

Held, that S. 48 of the Registration Act was inapplicable in the circumstances of the case, and further that the second vendee having notice of the earlier sale by oral agreement could not claim priority over the former sale in plaintiff's favour. Abbas Khan v. Malik Shadi Khan, 1 P.W.R. 1916 (N.W.F.P.).

- (9) Deed—Construction—Sale or mortgage—Sale with a condition of re-purchase—Transfer of Property Act, S. 58 (c).

In 1899, the plaintiffs mortgaged ninety-two pieces of lands with the defendants to secure a loan of Rs. 8,000, bearing interest at the rate 8 per cent. per annum. In 1904, the plaintiffs executed a sale-deed to the defendants, whereby they sold twenty of the pieces of lands mortgaged, for a sum of Rs. 13,000, and stipulated that if the consideration money was re-paid to the defendants in lump or in instalments within the period of twenty years, the defendants should reconvey the lands to the plaintiffs. On the same day, the plaintiffs passed to the defendants a permanent lease of the lands sold, at a fixed annual rental of Rs. 412 8-0. In 1911, the plaintiffs alleged that the transaction of 1904 was a mortgage and sued to redeem the same on accounts being taken under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act :

Held, that the transaction in question was not a mortgage but a sale with an option to the plaintiffs to re-purchase. Narayan Ramkrishna Pandit v. Vigneshwar Ganap Hegde, 18 Bom. L.R. 250=40 B. 378=34 Ind. Cas. 414.

- (10) Sale of land—Difficulty in identifying the property sold—Duty of vendor—Rights of vendee.

A vendor of land, when he holds himself out in that capacity, is bound to know and ascertain if, in fact, the subject-matter of what he is selling exists, and he must be in a position to give possession of the physical thing which he has contracted to sell.

The obligation is upon the seller to give possession to the purchaser, and not upon the purchaser to go and get possession for himself, especially when any difficulty arises in identifying the particular land sold. Darpan Koer v. Kedar Nath, 1 Pat. L.J. 140=35 Ind. Cas. 539.

- (11) Sale-deed—Construction of—Mortgage by conditional sale—Sale with agreement to reconvey—Distinction between—Intention of parties—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), S. 58 (c).

The question in this case was whether a sale-deed and an agreement executed on the same day constituted a mortgage by conditional sale. The sale-deed was not only an absolute conveyance of the property but contained recitals which showed an intention to extinguish a prior mortgage between the same parties, and to discharge the vendor's obligations to other parties and a statement that the sale price was the "proper current market value" of the land.

There was also an agreement for reconveyance of even date which provided that "if you or your Oollittar or your heirs should pay the aforesaid amount at the beginning of the cultivation season of any year within four years from this day, I shall reconvey the lands to you by means of a sale-deed in accordance with that executed in my favour."

Held that these provisions were inconsistent with an intention that the transfer was for the purpose of securing the payment of money advanced by way of loan (Transfer of Property Act, 1882, S. 58 (a).)

Held also that the circumstances of the case did not indicate an intention that there should be the relationship of debtor and creditor between the parties, or that the property should be security for a debt.

Held further that the fact that there appeared to have been no margin between the sale price and the actual market value of the property went to show that the vendee at all events did not regard the transaction merely as securing to him the repayment of an advance.

Sales with agreements to resell cannot be said to be presumably mortgages by conditional sale. Maruthal Goundan v. Dasappa Goundan, 31 M.L.J. 375=5 L.W. 141=36 Ind. Cas. 393.

Where there has been a registered deed of sale, which is not tainted by any fraud or the like, the deed passes the title and interest conveyed, although the purchase money has not been paid (a).

If a third party alleges that the deed is fraudulent and collusive, the burden would be on that party to prove the same.

The right of suit under O. XXI, r. 63, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908 (=S. 283, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882), is not controlled by the provisions of S. 42, Specific Relief Act, 1877, and a claimant would have the right to sue for a mere declaratory decree (b). K.Y.K.M. Chetty Firm v. S.N.V.R. - (13) Registration of sale deed—No delivery of possession—Effect—Whether property transferred to vendee—Intention of parties—Non-payment of consideration—Delivery of deed—Effect—Suit for possession by vendee—False plea of payment of consideration—Court's power to pass conditional decree.

The mere registration of a document, especially if it be not accompanied by delivery, does not necessarily indicate the transfer of property to the vendee. It may be the intention of the parties that the ownership should not pass until the consideration is paid. If however that is the contention of the vendor, the burden of proving it would lie upon him. Ordinarily speaking, if a document be executed and registered in favour of any person and that person also gets the document, the mere fact of non-payment of the consideration would not affect the passing of the property (a).

Where, in a suit for possession by a vendee of immovable property, it was found that the vendee pleaded in a former suit that a certain portion of consideration was paid and again in the present suit the vendee instead of bringing the amount into Court and asking for relief upon that basis, again maintained falsely that the portion formed no part of the consideration.

Held that the Court can pass a decree for possession conditional on the vendee paying into Court within one month the portion of the consideration that was not paid together with the costs of the contesting defendants (b). Jogendra Narain Roy Chowdhury v Manmatha Nath Chatterjee, 34 Ind. - (14) Stipulation for re-purchase—No date fixed for re-payment—Transaction amounting to mortgage—Intention of parties.

A mere stipulation for re-purchase will not convert a sale into a mortgage and if nothing more is made to appear than that a sale has been made with a contemporaneous agreement by the purchaser to let the vendor have the property back on a refund of the price, the transaction must take effect as a sale.

Every mortgage imports a debt and in order to hold that a transaction of this character amounts to more than a mortgage, there must be something to show an intention to treat the property as security for the payment of a debt. Kishen Dayal Pande v. Chandra Deo Pande, 36 Ind. Cas. 991.

(1) Sale for arrears of Government Revenue—Plea of adverse possession—Limitation—Incumbrance—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 121, 142, 144.

Where a plaintiff sued for khas possession of certain lands purchased by him at a sale for arrears of revenue and also for the recovery of mesne profits in respect of those lands and the defendant's contention was that they had been in adverse possession of those lands for a long time, that their occupation was in the nature of an incumbrance and that the plaintiff were not entitled to avoid the same, it was held that the interest which the defendants acquired by adverse possession was an incumbrance within the meaning of Art. 121 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908) and that the suit was barred by limitation. *Prasanna Kumar Dutt v. Subrogation—Prior and subsequent mortgage. One K owned certain Zamindari property. He died leaving a widow and a daughter him surviving. In his lifetime K got the name of his daughter entered in respect of his property, and the daughter came into possession thereof after K's death. The daughter died leaving a daughter, R. R's legal guardian sold a portion of K's property in order to pay off certain debts of K. K's widow then brought a suit for possession of the estate against R and her guardian. In order to be able to prosecute the suit she borrowed money by making two mortgages in favour of K.S. and M. She succeeded in the suit subject to the condition of her paying a certain sum of money to R's guardian. In order to raise this money the widow made a mortgage in favour of J, and covenanted in the deed that this mortgage would be a prior encumbrance on the property. R.S. sued to enforce his mortgage and U sued to enforce his, claiming in each case priority over the mortgages of K.S. and M.:

Held that U had no priority either on the ground of salvage lien inasmuch as he had no interest in the property when he advanced the money or on the ground of subrogation because there was no relation of debtor and creditor under the decree between R's guardian and K's widow. *Umrul Lal v. (1) Application for sanction dismissed by Presidency Small Cause Court—Revisional powers of High Court—S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code—S. 115, Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—Application for leave to sue—Whether a stage in a judicial proceeding.

An application was made to the High Court under S. 115, Civ. Pro. Code (1908), to set aside an order made by a Judge of the Presidency Small Cause Court, Calcutta, refusing sanction to prosecute the plaintiffs for having made false claims.

Held that under S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, the High Court is the superior Court of the Presidency Small Cause Court, and has power to deal with the order made by that Court.

Held also that an application for leave to sue was a stage in a judicial proceeding, where such leave was necessary to give the Court jurisdiction. Budhu Lal v. Chattu Gope, 43 C. 597=17 Cr. L.J. 504=36 Ind. Cas. 472.

The omission by a Munsif to specify the false statements in regard to which he directs the prosecution of a certain person for perjury and also to mention the forged portion of a document for which he directs him to be prosecuted for forgery amounts to material irregularity within the meaning of S. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and his direction to the Magistrate that such person may be convicted of any other offences that may be proved against him is without jurisdiction. In such cases the High Court has power to interfere under S. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

In a case where steps under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, are to be taken, it is highly desirable that they should be taken as soon as possible and not delayed for several months after the trial of the suit. Kashi Shykal v. King-Emperor, 14 A.L.J. 814=38 A. 695=36 Ind. Cas. 836.

(3) Civil Court taking action under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code—Interference of High Court in revision under S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code—Legality—High Court's interference under S. 115, Civ. Pro. Code, when justifiable—Sanction to prosecute—Whether notice necessary.

A High Court could not interfere, under S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code, in revision, with the proceedings of a Civil Court taken under S. 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, on the ground that S. 439 must be read with S. 435 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and the power of revision is expressly confined to the records of inferior Criminal Courts (a).

Where the order of the lower Court was passed under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, it can only be interfered with by the High Court in the exercise of its civil jurisdiction under the provisions of S. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Sanction to prosecute may be granted without the issue of a notice and is not vitiated by the absence of such notice. But notice should ordinarily be issued, and in a case of non-attendance where a person may be prevented from attending by illness or any other sufficient cause, it appears to be clearly desirable that notice should issue. *Nga San Cheln v. Seshgat vatan—Grant of land for services of a Huddar—Right to resume land when service not required—Right depending on the terms of the grant and character of services—Presumption—Burden of proof.

Where there is a grant of land in respect of service, the question whether the land is resumable merely by reason of the fact that services are no longer required by the grantor depends upon the terms of the grant and the character of services for which the grant was made. But the burden of proving that the case falls within the category of lands resumable falls on the grantor who seeks to resume them (a).

A distinction has to be drawn between a grant made for services rendered and to be rendered and a grant made as a remuneration for or in lieu of wages or service. In the case of this latter grant and not in the case of the former grant, the lands would be resumable on the discontinuance of service. Baalingappa Yirbhadrappa Huddar v. (2) Fraud—Incorrect allegations in plaint—Suit against minor—Proper person to be appointed guardian ad litem—Gross negligence of guardian.

A decree cannot be set aside on the ground of fraud by reason of its having been obtained upon statement contained in the plaint, subsequently found to be incorrect, if the plaintiff did not know in fact that they were incorrect.

Where a guardian duly appointed by a competent Court for the person and property of a minor is in existence when a suit is instituted against the minor, that guardian is the proper person to be made the guardian ad litem in the suit. But where the fact of that appointment is not known to the plaintiff, the appointment of an officer of Court as the guardian ad litem is not improper. A decree obtained against the minor in such a case is not liable to be set aside on the ground of gross negligence of the guardian where in spite of his best endeavours, he had not been able to obtain any instructions from the minor and had left the matter in the hands of the Court which decreed the suit in plaintiff's favour. Girja Dayal v. Setting aside Sale.

(1) Court auction—Sale—Irregularity in the conduct of—Bona fide purchaser not protected—Major judgment-debtor—Treated as minor—Vitiated sale—Notice—Execution.

Although a bona fide purchaser at a Court-auction is protected where the decree was passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction notwithstanding the fact that the decree was vitiated by illegality or was afterwards set aside, he receives no such protection where the irregularity is in the conduct of the sale itself.

Where therefore an auction sale was held without notice to a major judgment-debtor wrongly treating him as a minor:

Held, it was such a grave and material irregularity as vitiated the sale and that the judgment-debtor was entitled to maintain a suit to set aside the sale on the sole ground of want of notice, unless the defendant pleaded facts which raised valid defences to the claim of the plaintiff which is, prima facie, a sustainable claim.

Held also, that it was for the auction-purchaser to set up any appropriate defences when the plaintiff had made the only necessary allegation in his plaint, viz., that no notice through Court as required by law was issued to and served on him (a). *Tanguturi Jagannadham v. S. 173 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act provides a summary procedure to set aside a sale under the Act, which the Rent Courts are allowed to take, if they see fit, where no other question arises but the question of benami. But where in addition to this there are grounds of irregularity and fraud falling under S. 47, and O. XXI, r. 90, Civ. Pro. Code, the Court not only has the power, but it has the positive duty, not to adopt the summary procedure laid down in S. 173 but to try the case under the ordinary provisions of the Civ. Pro. Code, and the decision passed is open to first and second appeals. Where it is clear that the Court had no idea of confining its decision to S. 173, the mere fact that one of the grounds of irregularity and fraud urged against the sale was that the property was purchased by the judgment-debtor benami, would not bring the case within S. 173. Sreenath Haldar v. Bepin Behari Mal, 33 Ind. Cas. 574.

Where a decree passed by the Settlement Court on the admission of the superior proprietor declared the predecessor-in-interest of the defendant to be entitled to under-proprietary rights subject to the payment of an annual rent without any power of mortgage or sale, held, that the condition in the decree restraining alienation was inconsistent with the grant of under-proprietary rights and ought to be regarded as void and ineffectual. *Sarju Din Pandey v. (2) Execution of settlement decree awarding under-proprietary rights in entire village—Execution of lease by under-proprietor in favour of superior proprietor—Superior proprietor purchasing share in under-proprietary rights—Adverse possession—Joint possession—Heirs of some dead appellants not on record—Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, O. XXI, r. 43.

Held that the Extra Assistant Commissioner had no authority to go behind and supersede or alter a settlement decree awarding under-proprietary rights in an entire village.

The effect of an under-proprietor executing a lease in favour of a superior proprietor does not detract the under-proprietor from his status as under-proprietor unless it is shown that the lease was acted upon or that the lessee obtained possession under it.

An under-proprietor, who is only entitled to a share in the entire village, might, it is conceivable, take some land belonging jointly to him and the other under-proprietors, undertaking to pay rent for the same in order that he might get the benefit derivable from personal cultivation; but such tenancy is, not necessarily inconsistent with his interest in the under-proprietary holding.

If there is joint possession and if there is no formal division of the land of a village into different mahals by metes and bounds, possession by some of the co-sharers of different portions of the joint land is sufficient to prevent limitation from running against them in regard to the remainder.

Settlement Decree—(Concluded).

Some of the appellants died and their heirs were not brought on record. The judgment proceeded on a ground common to all of them. Under the circumstances the appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree of lower Court. Jang Bahadur v. Muhammad Abul Hasan Khan, 35 Ind. Cas. 743.

Shamilat.

(1) Rights of Khewatdars—Wajib-ul-arz—Entries in—Alluvion and diluvion—Adverse possession not recognised.

The defendants held lands as owners in the village since 1853. At the time of settlement of 1866, there was no shamilat land in the village. The wajib-ul-arz provided that land belonging to proprietors which became submerged and remained under water for more than 12 years was upon re-appearance to be treated as the shamilat of the whole village. The land in dispute emerged some time between 1856 and 1880 and was accordingly recorded as shamilat in revenue papers and at partition in 1904-5 was treated as such and defendants were allotted shares. The plaintiffs contended that the defendants had no rights in the land, which belonged to them and had been in their possession all along.

Held that the plaintiff's claim was not valid, since by common consent the proprietors had decided that the right of ownership in the submerged land belonging to a proprietor should become extinct after lapse of 12 years and that on re-appearance the land should be considered as the property of all the proprietors in the village.

That the possession of the plaintiff could not be considered adverse to the defendants, according to the entry in the wajib-ul-arz. Ahmad v. Jam Khan, 92 P.L.R. 1916 = 86 Ind. Cas. 300.

(2) Sale of Khewat land—Whether sale conveying shamilat as well—Loss of sale-deed—Onus of proof—Vendee to prove that shamilat was also sold—Intention to include shamilat—Question of fact—Second appeal—Mere cultivation by Taraddadhar of shamilat—No objection—No estoppel.

The sale of khewat land to the defendant does not ipso facto convey any rights to him in the shamilat land, because the shamilat is not a mere accessory to the land held by any proprietor.

Shamilat—(Concluded).

Where neither the sale-deed nor a copy thereof has been produced, the onus is upon the defendant to prove that the share in shamilat land had been sold to him (a).

The question whether the intention of the parties to the sale was that a proportionate share of shamilat should pass along with the khewat land is only a question of fact and furnishes no ground for second appeal (b).

No estoppel can arise against the plaintiffs from the mere fact that the defendant who was taraddadhar of half the well has been cultivating a part of the shamilat land without objection. Saleh v. Mussammat Bakhtawar, 36 Ind. Cas. 601 = 3 P.R. 1917.

The plaintiffs chartered a steamer belonging to the defendants for a voyage from Akyab to Bombay. Under the terms of the charter-party the charterers' stevedores at the port of loading were to be employed at current market rates but not exceeding the owners' contract rates. The charter-party also provided that the owners were liable "to pay for damage to cargo occasioned by bad stowage, by improper or insufficient dunnage;" that the steamer was to be responsible for any proved shortage; and that all the sweepings were to be delivered to the charterers at the port of discharge. The bills of lading, which were issued to the plaintiffs on shipping their goods, contained a special condition that the ship was not responsible for loss or damage caused by insufficient packing or for usual and reasonable wear and tear of packages. When the ship completed its voyage at Bombay, it was found that 710 bags of the plaintiffs were damaged, which damage was caused to a certain extent by improper laying of the dunnage at the port of loading; that there was a shortage of 400 cwt. in plaintiffs' consignment; and that the sweepings amounted to 576 cwt. The plaintiffs having sued to recover the amount of damages and the value of the shortage and the sweepings:

Held, (1) that the ship-owners were ordinarily liable to pay for the damage to cargo occasioned by bad stowage or improper or insufficient dunnage; and their liability was not modified by the clause in the charter-party about stevedores, for the stevedores remained the agents and paid servants of the ship-owners for the purpose of discharging the duty of the ship-owners in loading the cargo (a);

(2) that the defendants were also liable for the shortage notwithstanding the condition in the bills of lading, for as between the charterers and the ship-owners, the prevailing contract was the charter-party;

(3) that the plaintiffs were further entitled to the sweepings, under the specific provision made for them in the charter-party. Bombay and Africa Steam Navigation Co. v. Haji Ajum Goolam Hussain, 18 Bom. L.R. 230=41 B. 119=34 Ind. Cas. 525.

for the value of crops harvested and removed by the lessee, both before and after delivery of possession through Court:

Held, per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—The claim for the crops harvested and removed before delivery of possession, was a claim for an account and therefore removed from the cognizance of Small Cause Courts under Art. 31 of the Second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (a).

The claim for the subsequent cutting and carrying away of the crops is a claim for damages cognisable by a Small Cause Court.

Where a claim is partly cognisable by a Regular Court and partly by a Small Cause Court, the claim for the consolidated amount is cognisable by a Regular Court.

Lis pendens continues in a mortgage suit up to the time of actual sale of the property and hence the lease by the mortgagor after decree but before sale does not bind the auction-purchaser.

The view of the Bombay High Court that the lis pendens depends upon the active prosecution of applications for enforcing the decree not approved.

A person who obtains a lease when a Lis pendens takes considerable risks and any payments made by him to the judgment-debtor do not bind the purchaser.

Per Bakewell, J.—The contentious proceeding terminated with the decree and therefore the lease does not fall within S. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Under S. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, the mortgage-decree finally determines the rights of the parties in the property and provides that, in a certain event, that is, default of payment by mortgagor before a certain specified day, the parties shall have no right but only an interest in the sale-proceeds and operates as a conversion of real property into personality. The property itself remains in custodia legis, no attachment is necessary, and no disposition by either party can affect the order of the Court, that the subject-matter of the suit as it then stood, shall be sold. Any construction whereunder either party retained a power of disposition over the mortgaged property would afford an opportunity of interminable litigation, against which the Court will certainly struggle.

The sale by the Court transferred to the purchaser the rights of the parties as they existed at the date of the decree, and therefore free from the lease subsequently created by the mortgagor. Ramasami Aiyangar v. Govinda Iyer, 20 M.L.T. 512—31 M.L.J. 889—5 L.W. 443.

(1) Small Cause Court—Suit filed—Transfer to Munsif's Court—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), S. 24—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), S. 35.

A suit was filed in a Court invested with Small Cause Court powers. The presiding officer of that Court was transferred and he was succeeded by an officer who had not Small Cause Court powers. The case was thereupon transferred by the District Judge to the Munsif, where it was registered. The case was then referred to arbitration. The officer who had succeeded the previous officer before whom the suit had been originally filed was invested with Small Cause Court powers and the case was again transferred to him. The award was filed in that Court. The District Judge again transferred the case to an Additional Munsif who set aside the award. An appeal from that order was filed in the Court of the District Judge who declined to entertain it on the ground that no appeal lay to him. Upon a revision to the High Court, held that no appeal lay to the District Judge as the suit was a Small Cause Court suit and remained so

(1) Agreement to assign a decree—Whether it will be enforced after decree has become barred—Duty to keep decrees alive—The decree having become barred after agreement for sale and before assignment.

A obtained a mortgage decree against B for sale of Whiteacre and Blackacre. Thereafter Whiteacre was sold under a prior mortgage. C being desirous of purchasing Whiteacre cheap agreed to purchase A's decree for Rs. 19,000, and thereby prevented A's executors from bidding and get Whiteacre cheap. Owing to causes for which C was not responsible, there was great delay in assigning A's decree to him, and eventually it became barred and C thereupon refused to take an assignment or to pay the Rs. 19,000.

In a suit by A's executors wherein they sued for specific performance, held that the contract could not be specifically enforced, the plaintiffs being unable to perform their part of the contract. *Jatindra Nath Bose v. (3) Guardian and minor—Contract—Specific performance—Contract not specifically enforced where not beneficial to minor.

The certificated guardian of a minor applied to the District Judge for permission to sell a house belonging to the minor for the purpose of paying off certain debts of the minor. The District Judge ordered the property to be sold by auction to the highest bidder, and the plaintiff offered the highest bid which was Rs. 1,300. The draft sale-deed was put up before the Court for approval and the District Judge made certain alterations in it. Plaintiff believing the alterations to have been made by the guardian himself refused to purchase. Subsequently he consented to purchase for Rs. 1,300 under the altered conditions, but the transaction was not completed. In the meantime other purchasers appeared and a bid of Rs. 2,000 was offered for

- (4) Plaintiff, what to prove—Contract for sale of land—Subsequent variation of contract—Contingent contract—Letters of administration, grant of—District Judge not consenting to alienation—Damages—Costs—Interference by appellate Court.

Two Hindu ladies executed in favour of the plaintiffs a contract of sale and undertook to execute a conveyance on receipt of the price. The plaintiffs realised that such purchase was likely to involve them in serious trouble, and with a view to fortify their position they induced their vendors to apply for letters of administration in respect of the estates held by them and to obtain the sanction of the District Judge to the intended alienation under S. 90 of the Probate and Administration Act. The ladies accordingly applied for letters of administration at the instance of the plaintiffs, who also supplied the funds requisite for the conduct of the proceedings. The District Judge granted letters of administration, but ultimately declined to sanction the sale to the plaintiffs on the terms arranged. On the other hand, he sanctioned a sale in favour of the defendant who offered a higher price. In a suit for specific performance of the contract and in the alternative for damages:

Held, that the original contract was by implication varied by mutual consent, when, at the instance of the intending purchasers, the vendors agreed to obtain letters of administration, and was transformed into a contingent contract. As the contingency did not happen, the plaintiffs were not entitled to claim performance of the contract (a).

That, as there was no breach of the modified contract by the vendors, the plaintiffs were not entitled to damages.

Costs are in the discretion of the trial Judge and this discretion should not be interfered with by the appellate Court, unless good cause is shown.

Per Mookerjee, J.—The plaintiff must show that, in seeking the performance of a contract, he does not call upon the other party to do an act which he is not lawfully competent to do (b).

If Hindu ladies clothed with the character of administratrixes, make alienation with the sanction of the District Judge under S. 90 of the Probate and Administration Act, the alienation may not be operative precisely in the same way as a sale by order of the Court in administration proceedings, and the burden will heavily be upon those that may impeach the validity of

- (5) Contract to lease—Plea of inadmissibility for want of registration—Validity—Admission of genuineness in pleadings—Negotiations—Oral contract—Written contract—Evidence Act, S. 91—Proof of admitted facts—Evidence Act, S. 58—Public policy.

Where, in a suit, for specific performance of a contract to lease, the defendant in his written statement, while admitting its genuineness, pleads that the contract is legally ineffective for want of registration, a decree cannot be framed in terms of the contract and the suit ought to be dismissed.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.—If a plaintiff relies on a document and mentions its contents, but does not disclose the circumstances under which the document is inadmissible in evidence owing to some defect or other, and the defendant does not raise any objection as to its inadmissibility but on the other hand admits the contents and validity of the document, Courts might possibly act upon the defendant's admission in plaintiff's favour, notwithstanding that, during the course of the trial, the Courts find the document inadmissible owing to some defect or other; but even in such cases, if the provision of law declaring the inadmissibility or ineffectuality of a document was based on reasons of public policy, Courts ought to go behind the admission in the pleadings and refuse to act on the admitted facts in the plaintiff's favour. While S. 58 of the Evidence Act can be invoked where the documentary evidence about the admitted facts is shut out by the provisions made in purely revenue laws, it cannot be invoked to overrule the provisions of non-revenue enactments, nor can it be used to bind a party, who has made an admission of the genuineness of a document, when such admission is accompanied by the plea that the contract and the other facts mentioned in that document could not be relied upon by the opposite party owing to the provision of the Statutory Law relating to the registration, attestation, etc.

Ordinarily when the terms of a contract preceded by proposals, negotiations, conditional acceptances, counter-proposals and so on are reduced finally to the form of a document signed by one or both of the parties, the strong presumption is not that there are two independent contracts (the first an oral contract, the second the written contract), but that the written contract is the only final contract between the parties, and when a contract is once reduced to writing no other evidence can be given of its terms.

Quere.—Where a contract was completed sometime before the creation of evidence of it in writing which is legally inadmissible in evidence on incapable of creating any rights, whether the contract of prior date cannot be proved as an independent contract and whether such writing cannot be used as evidence of the prior contract though not itself creating rights.

Per Phillips, J.—Where there is an admission of liability in the pleadings and consequently there is no necessity to refer to the document itself which is inadmissible in evidence, a decree can be given in accordance with the terms of such a document, but where no liability is admitted and the defendant merely admits execution and pleads that the document is invalid for want of registration, it would be impossible to frame a decree without reference to the document and consequently no decree can be framed. *Kotam Reddi Seetamma v. (6) Suit for—Proof—Non-performance of contract, when excused—Tender of full amount.

The plaintiff who seeks specific performance of a contract has to show, first, that he has performed or been ready and willing to perform the terms of the contract on his part to be then performed; and, secondly, that he is ready and willing to do all matters and things on his part thereafter to be done. A default on his part in either of these respects furnishes a ground upon which the action may be resisted (a).

Non-performance by the plaintiff in a suit for specific performance is excused when that has resulted from the default of the vendor defendant (b).

A contract of sale was made orally on the 1st February, 1911. The price was fixed at Rs. 400; one rupee was paid on the date of the agreement which was to be carried out and completed within 10 days:

Held, that it was obligatory upon the vendee to tender the balance of the purchase-money to the vendor on or before the 11th February, 1911, and that, as he did not do so, there was a default on his part in the performance of an essential term of the contract.

The fact that the tender of the full amount would never have been accepted by the vendor would be no ground for non-performance on the part of the vendee. Manik Chandra Bhowmik v. Abhoy Charan Gope, 24 C.L.J. 90.

of the mortgage-bond crediting 'Rs.' 215 to the mortgagor's account, the mortgagors agreed to deliver to the mortgagees certain heads of cattle. The mortgagees performed their part of the contract and then sued the mortgagors, in the Small Cause Court for delivery of the cattle promised, and in the alternative for damages. The Court having dismissed the suit as being, a suit for specific performance of a contract and thus beyond its competence as a Small Cause Court.

Held—That under S. 12 of the Specific Relief Act no suit for specific performance would lie as, unless there was something 'remarkable about the cattle, it was obvious that adequate compensation for the breach of the contract could be given in money.

Substantial justice was done by the High Court in the exercise of the powers under S. 25, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, by directing that the plaint be amended by striking out the clause demanding specific performance, and the suit dealt with solely as a suit for damages occasioned by a breach of the contract. *Bharat Mahto v. (8) Suit for—Strangers claiming to be in adverse possession of the property—If proper parties—Property sold with full knowledge at an undervaluation—If disentitled vendor to relief—Landlord and tenant—Tenant's possession if adverse by non-payment of rent—Specific Relief Act, S. 22 (1).

In the absence of an agreement to give possession of the lands contracted to be sold, strangers to the contract who claim to be in adverse possession of such lands are not proper parties to a suit to enforce specific performance of the contract of sale (a).

Where properties are sold for a sum considerably less than their value, but there is no evidence of any fact unknown to or fraudulently concealed from the vendor of which the vendee was aware or of the use of undue influence, the vendee is not disentitled to specific relief by reason of the provisions of S. 22 (1) of the Specific Relief Act.

Failure to pay rent is not such an assertion of right as will make the tenant's possession adverse. Narasinga Row Gaday Row Sahib v. Rangasami Thevan, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 191 = 4 L.W. 397=35 Ind. Cas. 871.

contract and the defendants are therefore not justified in putting an end to the contract, and if especially there has been a part performance of the contract alleged by the plaintiff, the Court will allow an amendment of the plaint (if necessary) and give judgment for the plaintiff for specific performance of the contract as proved in the case.

In a suit on a personal contract made by the father (the manager of a joint Hindu family), on the death of the father, the sons will be liable as legal representatives to fulfil that contract in the place of their father, if that contract is according to the Hindu law binding on them. But where the contract to sell entered into by the father is neither for family necessity nor for purposes binding on the son, the Court will exercise a proper discretion by refusing specific performance against the sons. Shunmugam Chetty v Subba Reddi, 31 Ind. (10) Tripartite agreement—Khas possession.

The plaintiffs entered into an agreement with the defendant and his landlords that they would give to the landlords another piece of land with similar rights in exchange for the lands of the defendant and that the defendant was to vacate the land on receipt of Rs. 60 from the plaintiffs as compensation for rendering his huts and receive out of the land so given in exchange an equal piece of land with rights similar to those he previously had for the purpose of his residence. On the defendant not vacating by rendering his huts even after receiving Rs. 60 from the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs sued to recover khas possession impleading the landlords as co-defendants.

Held that the landlords must grant a lease of a convenient plot of land out of the lands they got in exchange, in favour of the defendant with similar rights and of equal quantity with the land the defendant held under them and that on the execution of such a lease, the plaintiffs would get khas possession of the suit land. *Kangali Dhubi v. A suit for partition cannot be dismissed on the ground that it prays for declaration of right only and not for possession. The defect may be remedied by amending the plaint.

(2) S. 9—Tenants, eviction of, by a trespasser—Tenant's attornment in favour of other person than proprietor, effect of—Dispossession of proprietor without dispossession of tenants, effect of.

Where a proprietor has leased his lands to tenants and those tenants have been evicted by a trespasser, held, that the dispossession of the tenants is the dispossession of the landlord and entitles him to relief under S. 9 of the Specific Relief Act.

Held further, that, where tenants in actual possession of the land have not been evicted, although they have, while remaining tenants of the proprietor, attorned in favour of another person and refused to pay rent to the proprietor, there has been no such effective dispossession of the proprietor as could enable him to maintain a suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act.

Held also, that it is possible for a state of things to arise where a proprietor can be dispossessed within the meaning of S. 9 without dispossession of the tenants, although in such a case something more than an attornment to a third party would be necessary, e.g., forcible removal of the rent collectors of the proprietor and introduction of his own collecting agency. *Mihal Singh (Sardar) v. (3) S. 9.—Suit for possession—Physical possession.

Although there is authority for the view that a landlord who has let his land to tenants cannot maintain a suit for possession under S. 9 of the Specific Relief Act as he is not in physical possession there is nothing to prevent the landlord from bringing such a suit if the dispossession took place in the interval between the relinquishment of possession by one tenant and the entry of another tenant.

When the tenant quits the land the landlord's possession revives and continues till the entry of the next tenant (a). San Hia Baw v. Hia Paw, 9 Bur. L.T. 172.

The plaintiff obtained a deed of sale executed by the defendant No. 1 and duly attested in respect of the property in suit. This document was not registered. On a subsequent date the first defendant sold the same property to the second defendant by a document duly registered. The plaintiff thereupon instituted a suit against both defendants, the relief asked for being, firstly, that the defendant No. 1 should be required either to register the existing unregistered sale deed or to execute and register a second sale-deed, and against defendant No. 2, he asked for a declaration that the transaction between the defendant No. 2 and defendant No. 1 was null and void by reason of the previous transaction with the plaintiff and should be so declared null and void and possession of the property delivered to the plaintiff. During the pendency of the suit the defendant No. 1 compromised the case with the plaintiff and executed and registered a fresh document as desired by the plaintiff. The defendant No. 2 continued to contest the suit. The lower Courts held that the suit as framed was not maintainable and concurred in dismissing the plaintiff's suit.

Held that the suit was one for specific performance under S. 27 (a) and (b) of the Specific Relief Act and that the suit should be remanded to the lower Courts for further consideration.

An unregistered deed may be used as evidence of that contract as between the contracting parties, but in a case against third parties under S. 27 (b) of the Specific Relief Act an unregistered deed cannot be used in evidence, for the existence of the previous contract is of vital importance in the case. The contract in this case is a transaction affecting property, and an unregistered sale-deed cannot be used in evidence of a contract which in itself affects property. *Madhur Sah v. Parties in pari delicto, if entitled to declaratory relief—Court's discretion under S. 39.

The rule of law in England with regard to illegal contracts is that a Court of Law will not aid persons in enforcing the performance of an illegal contract or assist them to recover back property which they have given away under such an illegal contract when the persons and parties to the contract are themselves pari delicto in procuring this illegality.

The Courts of Equity in England have always refused to afford equitable relief in enforcing a contract void in law or restoring property which is based on an illegal contract where the illegality is apparent on the face of the document itself.

The principle on which Courts of Law and Equity have refused to restore property given away under an illegal agreement, is equally applicable when the relief prayed for is by way of a declaration, after the party seeking such relief has secured to himself the benefit of the agreement.

S. 39 of the Specific Relief Act in allowing relief to be granted in a proper and fit case, even when a contract out of which the right springs is void, leaves it entirely in the discretion of the Court to exercise the jurisdiction so conferred upon it.

Where L, B's agent, having purchased property, B alleged that it was purchased by L as B's trustee whilst L claimed to have purchased it in his own right, and the dispute culminated in civil actions brought by the parties against each other, and in B instituting criminal proceedings against L under Ss. 408, 477, Penal Code, but at the instance of arbitrators appointed by mutual consent, the disputes were settled and B withdrew the criminal and other proceedings against L and in consideration thereof L inter alia executed a sale-deed of the property purchased by him :

Held, in a suit by L to have the conveyance declared void and the sale set aside and cancelled, that the whole of the contract was illegal, as it was not possible to sever the legal from the illegal part.

That there being no evidence that there was any undue influence, fraud or duress or that the plaintiff took a more innocent part in the illegal compromise than the defendant, the Court would not grant relief under S. 39 of the Specific Relief Act. *Bindeshari Prasad v. no consideration passed, one of the questions to be determined for the purpose of S. 39 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, is whether there was, any intention to effect a transfer. For if there was, their failure to pay in consideration does not necessarily make the sale-deed void or voidable.

It may only give the right to payment of consideration together with a lien in the property until the consideration is paid (a).

Where in a suit for cancellation of a sale-deed it was found that there was an agreement that the sale-deed should come into operation only in the event of the vendor's death, held that the document was really intended to operate as a will and would be revocable by the vendor at any time. *Govindasami Raja v. Plaintiff sued for a declaration of his muburusi mukarrari right to certain lands and of his title acquired thereto by adverse possession for upwards of 12 years. He further prayed for a declaration that certain decrees by the landlord were collusive and consequently the suit land was not liable to be sold in execution thereof.

It was found that there was no express contract of tenancy between the plaintiff, the alleged tenant, and the landlord, but the plaintiff was the purchaser of the right, title and interest of a third person in the suit property, which was a non-transferable occupancy tenancy.

The plaintiff got possession of the land and continued in possession for more than 12 years without paying any rent to the landlord, as the landlord refused to recognise him as tenant. It was argued on behalf of the plaintiff that by reason of his possession for more than 12 years he had acquired a title to a limited interest, which was a tenancy, and that he was entitled to a declaration of his tenancy. Held that the plaintiff having come to Court asserting that he was in possession of the land, and that he had obtained a title to permanent tenancy, which he said he had got from the third person, he could not be permitted to turn round and ask the Court for a declaration that by reason of his adverse possession he got a title to a non-transferable occupancy holding, when it was found that the interest of such third person was not a permanent tenancy but was only a non-transferable occupancy right. Adverse possession of a limited interest, though a good plea to a suit for ejectment, is good only to the extent of that interest; the nature and effect of possession must depend upon the nature and extent of the rights asserted by the overt conduct or express declaration of the person relying on it. In the present case the overt conduct of the plaintiff had all along been that he was entitled to the permanent tenancy and not to a non-transferable occupancy holding (a).

Per Mukerjee, J.—When a plaintiff seeks a declaration of a specific character and fails to establish the facts whereon such declaration can be founded, he is ordinarily not entitled to a different declaration, though the Court has a discretion in such matter and may, if the defendant is not taken by surprise, grant the plaintiff a declaration different from the precise relief sought in the prayer clause of the plaint (b).

It is doubtful whether S. 28 of the Limitation Act operates to extinguish the interest of the owner only or vests it in the adverse possessor also; if the latter, whether it holds good in respect of a non-transferable tenancy as between the disposessor and the landlord. *Nabin Chandra Ghosh v. (46) S. 45—Syndicate—If public body—Public officer—"Laws for the time being in force," meaning of.

The Syndicate being a statutory body appointed to carry out purposes of public benefit and vested with the executive Government of the University, the persons constituting it became ipso facto holders of a public office within S. 45 of the Specific Relief Act and could be proceeded against under the section.

Per Kumaraswami Sastri, J.—"Public office" means any office, created by the legislative or other lawful authority for the purpose of discharging functions which affect the public generally or any portion thereof. When a smaller body like the Syndicate is constituted from out of the members of a larger body the Senate, and certain specific functions are allotted to the former either by Statute or by Regulations having the force of law, a party aggrieved by an act of the smaller body, which act is within its special competence, can proceed against the smaller body.

The term "person holding a public office" in S. 45 of the Specific Relief Act is not used in the same sense in which the expression "public officer" and "public servant" are used in S. 2 (17) of the Civ. Pro. Code and S. 21 of the Indian Penal Code, respectively. The test under S. 45 of the Specific Relief Act is not whether the person receives emoluments for his

(51) S. 54, ill. (p)—Form of declaratory decrees—Award of larger relief than in plaint—Legality—Injunction against community—Penal Code, S. 296.

It is desirable that a Court by its decree should determine the rights in dispute as definitely as the evidence before it will permit. But a decree which is not more specific is not illegal (a).

A declaratory decree of a Civil Court should not be treated as authorising an act which is per se a criminal offence. In disposing of a charge under S. 296, Penal Code, arising out of a dispute between two rival religionists, the existence of a declaration regarding the rights of either party is doubtless only one of several factors which might have to be considered in deciding the guilt or innocence of the accused (b).

An injunction granted against a community sued in a representative capacity is good. That an injunction can be granted against a community so vaguely defined as "the inhabitants of a village" appears from ill. (p) to S. 54, Specific Relief Act, 1877 (c).

Award of larger relief than that claimed in the plaint is illegal. Mahomed Hanif Sahib v. Anagappa Mudali, 35 Ind. Cas. 106.

In a suit for redemption of an usufructuary mortgage, dated 1857 the documents on which the plaintiff relied to establish the mortgage was a certified copy of a petition of compromise filed in Court in that year. The suit was based on the recital in the petition relating to the mortgage and the certified copy in question bearing a one-rupee stamp was issued in 1857. The record of the proceedings in which the petition was filed was destroyed in the Mutiny. The defendants objected that the contract was not enforceable, inasmuch as the document was not properly stamped:

Held, that before the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) came into force, such mortgages could be created without any writing, outside the Presidency towns by simple delivery of possession; that the said petition recited the terms on which the then dispute was settled, among them being the agreement relating to the usufructuary mortgage; that the mortgage was verbal and was valid and the present suit was not based on an agreement contained in the petition; that if the petition was treated as the document creating the mortgage, it must be presumed that the officer before whom it was presented satisfied himself that it was properly stamped and no inference that it was not as stamped could be derived from the fact that the copy bears a one-rupee stamp. *Ahmad Raza v. (1) Chit given for an existing liability—Promissory note—Want of stamp—Inadmissibility of the document in evidence—Right to recover on the original cause of action—Payments endorsed on the back—Period of limitation extended by such payments—Payments treated as in discharge of the original debt.

Where in lieu of the amount due on a settlement of accounts a chit was given which in fact was equivalent to a promissory note and the chit was unstamped, the chit for want of stamp is admissible for any purpose. The giving of a security in lieu of existing antecedent debt does not extinguish but merely suspends the cause of action on the original debt which revives if the security be not discharged at maturity the giving of the security being merely a conditional discharge.

Where the security cannot be sued upon the creditor can fall back on the original cause of action, payments made towards the chit and endorsed on the chit itself can be treated as made towards the original debt and in reduction thereof and such payments will operate to extend the period of limitation for a suit on the original cause of action. *Chokkallagam Chetty v. (3) Ss. 2, cl. (3), 3, 19, 35, and Arts. (5) (c), 49—Account book—Entry—Undertaking to pay with interest—Promissory note or agreement—Stamp duty payable—Want of stamp—Character of document not altered thereby—Execution of promissory note outside British India—Absence of presentation, payment or negotiation within British India—Suit on the note without payment of stamp—Maintainability in British Indian Courts—Original consideration—Suit when maintainable on—Object of promissory note—Evidence Act, S. 91, Ill. (b)—Negotiable Instruments Act, S. 64.

An entry in the plaintiff's account books signed by the defendant in Russian Territory ran in the following terms—'.....Russian gold sums four thousand agreed to be paid with interest at eight annas per cent., at Shikarpur.....'

Held that the words 'agreed to be paid' amounted to an undertaking to pay and that the writing constituted a promissory note (a).

Held also that, there being no conditions or stipulations in excess of the bare agreement or undertaking to pay, the writing is chargeable as a promissory note and not as an agreement.

Held, further, that as the promissory note was made out of India, duty is chargeable under Ss. 3 and 19, Stamp Act, only when the note is presented, paid or negotiated in British India, and that, as none of these events happened, no duty is chargeable, and the note is not excluded by S. 35 and is admissible in evidence (b).

The object of a promissory note is to show that the particular transaction represented by the note is a separate transaction and it is intended that the remedies in respect of that transaction shall be separately pursued (c).

An instrument may be promissory note although it would not pass current as such among merchant. The test is not mercantile as has been suggested by the terms of the statutory definition (d).

Held, also, that the entry is not an acknowledgment of an existing liability but a promise to pay. Moreover the provision as to future interest takes it out of the definition of acknowledgment in the Stamp Act (e).

Held further that the plaintiff cannot sue on the original consideration because the promissory note itself is the agreement of loan and the promissory note must be proved. (Evidence Act, S. 91, Ill. (b), (f).)

The question whether a document is chargeable as an agreement under Art. 5 (c) or as a promissory note under Art. 49 of the Stamp Act, depends on the matter in the writing in excess of that included in the definition. If this excess matter is mere surplusage it does not

(4) S. 2 (5) (c), Sch. I, Arts. 5, cl. (a) of exemptions and 15—Attested agreement to deliver merchandise with a penal clause not bond.

An agreement to deliver merchandise for consideration under a penal clause providing against breach of the covenant is not a bond as defined in S. 2 (5) (c) of the Stamp Act so as to be chargeable ad valorem under Art. 15 of the 1st schedule, even though it be attested by witnesses. Such an instrument is an agreement under Art. 5 (c) and falls within exemption (a) of that article.

The distinction between a "bond" and a covenant with a penal clause is that the former creates an "obligation" the latter does not, and a breach of an obligation under bond does not "sound in damages," whereas breach of a covenant must be compensated in damages. The fact that it contains a penal clause will not of itself convert an ordinary agreement into a bond. Collector of Rangoon v. Maung Aung Ba, 9 Bur. L.T. 111=8 L.B.R. 382=33 Ind. Cas. 920.

(9) Ss. 26, 35, 61 and Art. 35—Document leasing land for 10 years for casuarina plantation—Construction—Document unstamped but registered—Liability for stamp duty—Unstamped instrument admitted in evidence—Effect—Procedure.

Under an instrument called a lease, the defendant was entitled to the exclusive possession of a certain land for 10 years. His obligation was to plant and rear at least fifty thousand casuarina trees. The trees when grown were to be cut at the expense of both the parties and the plaintiff was entitled to a moiety of the sale-proceeds. There was no date or period or periods fixed for that cutting.

The instrument was not stamped though registered. Plaintiff sued for damages for breach of the terms of the instrument. Defendant contended the instrument being unstamped, plaintiff could get nothing by reason of S. 26, Stamp Act. Held that the value of the subject-matter of the instrument was not one which could not be ascertained at the date of its execution, and S. 26 of the Stamp Act did not apply.

Per Abdur Rahim, J.—The cases which were interpleaded to be covered by S. 26 are like that of the produce of mines which is expressly mentioned in that section, where what will be realised is altogether uncertain; not merely the market value, but also the quantity of the article bargained for.

Per Srinivasa Aiyangar, J.—The document is really an assignment of the land for a term in consideration of recovering half the proceeds of the trees reared on the land when they were fit for cutting.

S. 26 applies only to cases where the instrument is chargeable with an ad valorem duty, and where no duty is payable at all, there is no question of any ad valorem duty payable on the instrument.

Where an unstamped document has been admitted in evidence, it cannot be called in question in appeal, except under S. 61 of the Stamp Act.

It is even doubtful whether Art. 35 of the Act applies to all leases. Kondapi Seshayya v. Grandhi Yenkata Subbayya Chetty, 31 M. L.J. 231.

(11) S. 35—Promissory Note—Insufficiency of stamp—Admissibility in evidence.

The defendants passed to the plaintiff on an eight-annas stamp paper an instrument which ran as follows:

"We have this day received from you Rs. 25,000 in cash. Interest thereon has been fixed at the rate of 12 annas per cent. per mensem. The said interest is to be paid every month as it accrued due, and the period fixed in respect of the above written amount is three years."

The plaintiff having sued on the instrument, the defendants contended that it could not be admitted in evidence for insufficiency of stamp.

Held, that the instrument was not a promissory note nor did it fall under the absolute prohibition of S. 35, Stamp Act.

Ordinarily where a person acknowledges to have received a definite sum of money on a certain date for a certain term, there can be no reasonable doubt but that what he means is that on the expiration of that term he is willing to repay the money on demand. *Pratapchand Gulabchand v. Stamp Act (II of 1899)—(Continued).

- (13) Ss. 35 and 36—Duty of Appellate Court where a document not stamped or not sufficiently stamped is admitted by lower Court—Admission of unstamped instrument

Held that the Legislature forbade the Courts acting upon an unstamped document when it is not produced before it, but did not forbid the giving of a decree upon an unstamped document which had been wrongly admitted in evidence, because the duty and penalty could be levied by the Collector.

Held further that the provisions of S. 35 are evidently intended to prevent injustice and it would be obviously unjust for an Appellate Court to dismiss a suit on the ground that a document, which the first Court had admitted in evidence, was unstamped or insufficiently stamped, seeing that if the objection had been taken in the first Court the document could have been properly admitted in evidence on payment of stamp duty and penalty. *M. Held, upon the construction of the document, that it is simply an agreement to hire the machinery in question, with an option on the part of the hirer to purchase, and as such it is liable to be stamped as an agreement within the meaning of Art. 5, cl. Straits Settlements Bankruptcy Ordinance.

S. 30, cl. (4) — Bankruptcy — Discharge by Singapore Court—Whether operates as discharge from debts in India—Discharge of father — Liability of sons in a joint Hindu family.

The first defendant and his undivided brother, the 3rd defendant, who were trading in Singapore were adjudicated bankrupts under Straits Settlements Bankruptcy Ordinance by the Singapore Court. They had some family property in India. The plaintiffs who were also trading in Singapore proved their debts, which were contracted by the bankrupts (defendants) at Singapore and were payable there, and received dividends. Finally the bankrupts were discharged under the Ordinance. The plaintiffs now wanted to make them liable in India since they had their domicile in India and possessed some properties there.

Held, that the discharge under the Ordinance operated as a discharge from the debts in this country.

Held also, that the sons of the bankrupts were not liable for such debts.

A Hindu son is not jointly bound with his father to pay his debts within the meaning of S. 30, cl. (4) of the Ordinance.

Adjudication and assignment of the bankrupts' property under the Ordinance does not operate as an assignment of immovables or moveables in India. Narayanan Chettiar v. Yeerappa Chettiar, 31 M.L.J. 386 = 20 M.L.T. 318 = (1916) 2 M.W.N. 271 = 4 L.W. 422 = 35 Ind. Cas. 918.

(1) Ss. 17 (1) and 22 — Death of partner leaving will—Executor if competent to sue for dissolution before probate obtained—Probate applied for in Court of domicile in India—Suit by administrator pendente lite, if may be brought more than three years after testator's death — Substitution of executor in place of administrator pendente lite—Suit if to be regarded as instituted on date of substitution—Civ. Pro. Code, Ss. 133, 169—Order competent only under latter section, drawn up erroneously, if may enable defendant to escape liability.

S., one of two executors named in a will left by a person who was a native of and domiciled in British India (his co-executor having renounced probate), applied in August 1907 in the Court of the District Judge of Madura in the Madras Presidency for proof of the will in solemn form (in view of caveats entered against the proof of the will) and probate was not granted till 10th March 1912. Meanwhile on the 7th March 1910, letters of administration pendente lite were granted to P by the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements to the estate of the testator situate within the jurisdiction of that Court, and on 23rd October 1911, P instituted a suit for dissolution of partnership against S. N., with whom the testator for some years prior to his death (which took place on 11th November 1904) carried on a money-lending business in Singapore. The defence was that the suit was time-barred, having been instituted more than three years from the date of the dissolution. Pending the suit, letters of administration pendente lite granted to P were cancelled and in lieu thereof letters of administration with the will annexed were granted to S, and on 14th April 1913, an order was made in the suit striking out P and substituting S as the plaintiff, whereupon it was further contended in defence that the suit must be deemed to have been instituted on 14th April 1913 under S. 22 of the Limitation Ordinance and so was time-barred.

Held—that the suit was time-barred when it was instituted by P on 23rd October 1911, S. 17 (1) of the Ordinance not being applicable to the case to save limitation.

That, if it had been within time when instituted by P on 23rd October 1911, the suit would not have been barred by reason of the substitution made on 14th April 1913 and necessitated by a change or devolution of interest pending the suit.

An executor derives his title and authority from the will of his testator and not from any grant of probate. The personal property of the testator, including all rights of action, vest in him before the testator's death, and the consequence is that he can institute an action in the character of executor before he proves the will. He cannot obtain a decree before probate, not because his title depends upon the probate, but because the production of probate is the only way in which, by the rules of the Court, he is allowed to prove his title.

An administrator, on the other hand, derives title solely under his grant and cannot institute an action as administrator before he gets his grant.

In the case of a cause of action arising in favour of the estate of a deceased person at or after his death, time will at once begin to run, if there be an executor, even though probate has not been obtained; but if there be no executor, time will run only from the actual grant of letters of administration.

S. 17 (1) of the Limitation Ordinance was probably intended to apply this rule.

There is nothing in the Ordinance to confine "legal representative" to a person to whom the —(Concluded).

Court has actually made a grant. But the words "capable of instituting an action" mean capable of instituting an action in which a decree might be obtained. The will under which the executor claims must be capable of probate.

According to English practice (which, in the absence of local law, was to be followed and adopted in the Straits Settlements) probate may be granted of a will of a person domiciled abroad upon proof that it is a valid will according to the law of the domicile and that there are assets within the jurisdiction. It is not necessary that it should be first proved in the Courts of the domicile.

That in this case, probate could be granted since August 1907 to S alone (his co-executor having renounced at some time before August 1907) and the suit instituted more than three years after August 1907 was time-barred.

Quære:—Whether one of two joint executors can properly institute proceedings on behalf of the estate.

S. 22 contemplates cases in which an action is defective by reason of the person or one of the persons in whom the right of action is vested not being before the Court. It has no application to cases in which the action was originally properly constituted as to parties, but has become defective because there has been a change or devolution of interest. Such cases do not fall within S. 133 of the Civ. Pro. Code (which provides against the defect of an action on the ground of a defect of the first sort and enables the proper party to be added or substituted) but within S. 169 of the Code, and the proper remedy is by way of an order to carry on proceedings, and not of an order adding or substituting parties. The proviso to S. 22 of the Ordinance may have been inserted per cautelam and cannot be relied on as controlling the operative words.

The fact that the order was not drawn up in accordance with S. 169 of the Civ. Pro. Code, the only section under which the order was competent, could not be taken advantage of by the defendant to escape a liability to which he would have been subject, if the order had been made in proper form. *Soona Mayna Kena Roona Meyappa Chitty v. The grant of succession certificate does not establish the title of the grantee as the heir of the deceased, but only furnishes him with an authority to collect the debts and allows the debtors to make payments to him without incurring any risk.

Two rival claimants applied for the grant of a succession certificate in order to collect debts due to the deceased. Each one based his claim on an alleged adoption by the deceased. On appeal by the one, whose claim was negatived, the objection was taken as to the jurisdiction of the trying Court.

Held: (1) that, inasmuch as the deceased at the time of his death had his ordinary place of residence within the jurisdiction of the trial Court and did his business there, the Court had sufficient authority under S. 5 of the Succession Certificate Act to dispose of the proceedings;

(2) that the application could be entertained even though the dispute between the parties as to the entire estate could be easily settled in proceedings taken under the Probate and Administration Act, and that S. 1 (4) did not offer any impediment to the grant of the certificate. Ram Saran v. —(Continued).

An unliquidated sum of money due under an insurance policy cannot be described as a debt accruing due to the estate (b).

An insurance policy is not contemplated by S. 3 of the Succession Certificate Act and the Act does not give any general power of administration of the estate of the deceased. It is confined and absolutely confined to the collection of debts which were existing in the lifetime of the deceased and have accrued due prior to his death. Charulla Das v. - (4) S. 4—Assignment of debt by certificate-holder—Right of assignee—Fresh certificate unnecessary.

A decree for possession of certain property and for mesne profits was passed in favour of A and his wife. The wife died after the date of the decree. A had obtained letters of administration in respect of the estate of his wife. He transferred his own rights under the decree, as also those of his wife to H. H applied for execution of the decree. The judgment-debtors objected, inter alia, that the decree could not be executed without either letters of administration or a succession certificate being granted to the transferee.

Held, that H could execute the decree without any fresh letters of administration being granted to him.

Per Walsh, J.—A person claiming as an assignee of a debt which was due to the estate of a deceased person is not claiming "the effects of the deceased." From the date of assignment, the debt due to the deceased ceases to be part of the deceased's effects.

The claim contemplated by sub-S. 1 of S. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act is a claim made by a person in the capacity of, and as a personal representative of, a deceased person.

A Government Promissory Note was transferred by a registered deed of assignment and the transferee applied for a succession certificate in respect of the note. The Court found that the applicant was the representative of his assignor, but being of opinion that it was not established that the assignor himself had a good and subsisting title to the note at the date of the assignment, the Court refused to grant the certificate.

Held, whether the assignor of the applicant had a valid title or not or whether the assignment conveyed any title to the applicant, or whether the debt secured by the promissory note was recoverable or not, were not matters which the Court had to determine upon an application for a certificate. The only question which the Court had to decide was whether the applicant was the representative of the person to whom the debt was alleged to have been due. *Radhika Prasad Bapull v. —(Concluded).

Whenever a fresh succession certificate is taken, even though it is to collect debts for which a succession certificate has already been taken out and the duty paid, the duty prescribed by the Court Fees Act must be paid.

R, the widow of a deceased Hindu, took out a succession certificate in respect of certain debts due to the deceased. After her death, S, the daughter of the deceased, applied for succession certificate in respect of the same debt and urged that stamp duty upon the debts having once been already paid by R, she was not bound to pay duty again:

Held—That it was an application for a certificate within the meaning of S. 14 of the Succession Certificate Act and Court-fee was payable on it as such.

Summons.

- (1) Suit, maintainability of—Summons, non-service of, effect of—Personal judgment against defendant, if can be set aside—Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, O. IX, r. 3—Decree indivisible—Effect of order setting aside decree on prior suit.

The law never acts by stealth, it condemns no one unheard so that a personal judgment rendered against a defendant without notice to him or an appearance by him is vitiated by the same infirmity as a judgment without jurisdiction. A judgment made under such circumstances may be set aside on the ground that the defendant must in essence be a party to the suit before the plaintiff can have judgment against him.

The first three defendants in the present suit instituted a suit against the present plaintiff and the fourth defendant for dissolution of partnership, for adjustment of accounts, for appointment of a receiver and for other incidental reliefs. At that time the plaintiff, who was then the second defendant, was resident beyond the limits of British India, namely, at Somaser in Rajputana. The summons was sent to the Political Agent at Rajputana. No attempt was made by him to serve the defendant, but the summons was returned to the Court. A decree was passed in that suit directing both the defendants to pay the plaintiff a certain sum with costs by six monthly instalments on the dates specified, subject to the proviso that, if default was made in the payment of a single instalment, the plaintiff would be at liberty to enforce the entire decree by execution:

Held, that the plaintiff's position in that suit in substance was the same as if no summons had ever been issued for service. Under these circumstances, a decree made against him could not bind him. That as the decree was indivisible and could not be set aside in part, the whole decree was set aside. The effect of the order was to discharge the entire decree in that suit and to revive it for re-trial. That as the second defendant (that is, the present plaintiff) was not served, he would have to be served, unless he chose to enter appearance voluntarily. *Chatterjee Brahmia v. Per Sanderson, C.J.—The rule in Clayton's case (a) applies only to the items in one current account and when there is no specific appropriation of the debtor.

Under S. 139 of the Contract Act, in order to discharge the surety, it must be shown that not only has the creditor omitted to do some act which his duty to the surety required him to do, but also that the eventual remedy of the surety himself has thereby been impaired.

A guarantor entered into an agreement with the Bank to the effect that he would pay to the latter on the 30th September, 1913, to the extent of Rs 3,00,000, all money then due from B on current account or otherwise howsoever, including all interest, charges and other expenses, which he might charge against B:

Held, under the circumstances of the case, that the Bank could claim interest at the rate agreed upon between them and the debtor before the closing of the contract.

Held also by Woodroffe and Mookerjee, JJ., that the Bank could claim interest by way of damages for the detention of the money due to them at the rate agreed upon between them and the debtor before the closing of the contract (b).

Surety—(Continued).

Per Mookerjee, J.—In the absence of special agreement a guarantor has no right to control the appropriation, by customer or banker of moneys paid in, subject to the qualification that the banker is bound to deal with the accounts in the ordinary way of business (c).

Thus, payments in may be appropriated to a pre-existing debt which is not covered by the security and of which the surety had no knowledge (d).

On the termination of the guarantee, the account may be closed and a new one opened to which all payments in may be carried, though the banker is not entitled, where an account is guaranteed to a limited extent, to split that account during the continuance of that guarantee and attribute all payments into the in-secured balance (e).

So long as an account is unbroken, a surety should not be prejudiced by any departure from the rule of appropriation of items in order of date (Clayton's case) unless his consent to such departure is expressed or can be implied from the character of his engagement (f).

It is contrary to ordinary business and good faith to open a new account during the currency of the guaranteed one and carry all payments into the new account.

If there is any agreement between the principals with reference to the contract guaranteed, the surety ought to be consulted, and if there is any alteration, which is not obviously either unsubstantial or for the benefit of the surety, he is to be the sole judge whether he will remain liable. *A K A Khan Ghuznavi v. (3) Execution and registration of lease deed—Passing of title—Intention of parties.

The execution and registration of a document are not always sufficient to pass title. It is a matter of the intention of the parties. Where it was found that there was no payment of consideration, no delivery of possession and no delivery of the document, the fact that the document was executed and registered, did not make the transaction complete so as to effect the transfer of title. *Nilmoni Behara v. (4) Suit for possession—Plea of jus tertii by defendant—Statement of such third person disclaiming title—Effect of such disclaimer on plaintiff's right.

In a suit for possession the defendant contended that the suit property belonged to a third person and not to the plaintiff. The said third party was examined by the plaintiff on his side and he disclaimed, as plaintiff's witness, all rights in the suit property. Held that the mere fact that the third party stated in his evidence that he made no claim to the property did not necessarily vest the title to the property in the plaintiff. A mere declaration on the part of such third person, that he did not want the property could not operate as a conveyance of the property to the plaintiff, in the absence of some act within the law having the effect of transferring the estate to the plaintiff. *Tilak Ram v. In a suit for damages for injury caused by the defendant's animal it is for the plaintiff to prove that the damage done to him was caused by the defendant's negligence (a).

In deciding whether the defendant was negligent or not his knowledge or want of knowledge that his animal was of a vicious disposition is an important point.

Where the animal that does the injury is a domestic animal, the burden of proving negligence lies in the first place on the plaintiff. It might be otherwise if the injury were caused by a tiger or a bear. Ngwe Ya v. Shwe Ye, 8 L.B.R. 388.

Trade Marks.

(1) Injunction restraining use of particular marks—Similarity of get-up—Existence of reasonable probability of deception—Proper test for granting injunction.

Where a trade mark is alleged to have been infringed and the help of the Court is invoked to prevent the continuance of the infringement the Court will not strain its jurisdiction to protect fools and idiots. On the other hand it will not require such minuteness of imitation as to deceive persons of unusual sagacity and information.

The proper test is whether the get-up of the defendant's goods is likely to deceive a purchaser who is acquainted with the plaintiff's get-up, but trusts to his memory. It is to be assumed that the purchaser will look fairly at the goods without distinguishing features being concealed, and the Court must also have regard to the class of purchasers by whom the goods would normally be brought. Some similarity in parts of the "get-up" is not sufficient to justify an injunction (a).

The test is whether an ordinary purchaser purchasing with ordinary caution is likely to be misled, that is to say, whether there is a reasonable probability of deception. Byramjee Cowasjee v. Vera Somabhai Motibhai, 36 Ind. Cas. 965.

Trade-names.

Numbers affixed to pieces of cloth by manufacturers—Goods ordered out by middlemen from manufacturers by numbers alone—The use of numbers as applied to the cloth protected—Actual deception of purchasers not necessary to be proved.

The plaintiffs manufactured, in their Mill at Nagpur, a certain quality of black twill cloth, which they put on the market in 1904. Each piece of such cloth was marked with No. 2051/10; it bore also a device of a serpent surrounded by a scroll containing the name of the Mill. It was by the designation of the number that the constituents of up-country middlemen were in the habit of ordering the plaintiffs' goods. In July 1913, the defendants began to manufacture black twill cloth in their Mills on Bombay, and put it on the market. They also affixed the No. 2051/10 on every piece of their cloth. It had a label representing the image of the Sun; and a white label indicating in the English, Gujarati and Urdu languages the places where it was manufactured and where it could be purchased. The plaintiffs having sued to restrain the defendants by injunction from passing off their goods as plaintiffs' and to recover damages, the trial Court passed decrees for injunction and damages. On appeal by the defendants:

Held, (1) that the plaintiffs were entitled to claim an exclusive right to the user of No. 2051/10 when applied to black twill cloth, for the particular mark was an invariable indication of the cloth of the plaintiffs' manufacture (a).

(2) That the relief granted was justified, for, though no actual deception had been proved, it appeared that the defendants were putting into the hands of up-country middlemen a means whereby ultimate purchasers were likely to be defrauded (b). *The Madhavji Dharamsey Manufacturing Co., Ltd. v. Trading with Enemy—(Continued).

(2) German, secular agent of Basel Mission—Lease by, of land in British India—Whether he can sue for rent—Limitation on alien enemy's right of suit.

On a declaration of war the citizens or subjects of the belligerents become enemies of each other and political status determines the question of enemy ownership (a).

On a declaration of war the Sovereign has in theory full right to take the persons and confiscate the tangible property of the enemy found within his territory; this right however is said to be a naked and impolitic right condemned by the enlightened conscience and judgment of modern times, and (b) in practice is not likely to be resorted to except in case of public necessity or by way of reprisal; but a declaration of war per se does not import a confiscation of enemy property found on land or on the high seas (c).

During war all commercial intercourse and trading between enemies is illegal unless sanctioned by the authority of the Government. Persons in enemy country whatever their nationality are treated as enemies as far as relates to their trade. Their commercial domicile during war or the war domicile determines their enemy character (d).

From this it follows that enemy subjects resident in British Territory who are permitted to remain there are not alien enemies, and can contract like subjects; whether such permission should be express or may be implied by a person being allowed to remain is a point on which there appears to be some diversity of opinion; but the weight of authority appears to favour the view at any rate in the case of aliens who were residing in British Territory before the outbreak of war, who continue to remain after such outbreak, that permission should be presumed, unless they are ordered to remove themselves within a certain time and they do not (e).

The prohibition as regards intercourse between hostile aliens is, on the best authority, confined only to commercial intercourse and does not render illegal all contracts whatever be their nature (f).

The prohibition extended only to intercourse between citizens of the two belligerents which was inconsistent with the state of war between them including any act or contract which tends to increase his resources, and every kind of trading or commercial dealing, but it did not prevent an agreement made in enemy territory to pay money there out of funds accruing there (g).

When a creditor although a subject of the enemy remains in the country of the debtor or has a known agent there, authorised to receive the amount of the debt during war, payment there to such creditor or his agent can in no respect be construed as a violation of the duties imposed by the war (h).

This was a suit to recover rent. The plea was that the lease was granted by and the covenant to pay rent entered into with an alien enemy and that the covenant was therefore void and unenforceable. The land leased was in South Canara in British Territory and belonged to the Basel Evangelical Mission. The lease was granted by a German, the then secular Agent of the Mission after war was declared, to the defendant, a British subject. The suit to recover rent was instituted by the present secular Agent of the Mission to whom enemy character was not attributed. Enemy character was also not attributed to the Basel Mission. Held that the suit for rent under the above circumstances was maintainable. Wuthrik v. David, 31 M.L.J. 860 = 5 L.W. 275 = (1917) M.W.N. 73.

Transfer of Property.

Transfers of preliminary and final decrees for foreclosure to different persons—Substitution of names—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), S. 41.

When there is a conflict between the transferees of a preliminary and a final decree of foreclosure on the same land, the transferee of the preliminary decree is entitled to have his name substituted in place of the decree-holder in preference to the subsequent transferee of the final decree. After a transfer of the preliminary decree the decree-holder has no interest or property in the decree, and the transferee cannot get more than the transferor's rights.

Transfer of a decree for foreclosure is not a transfer of land, and the transferee of a decree is not entitled to the benefit of the provisions of S. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act which apply only to transfers by ostensible owners of immoveable property. K. Transfer of Property Act.

(1) Making of a transfer and proving a transfer, difference between—Sale of immovable property, how made—Proof and incidents of—Evidence Act, S. 91.

The difference between the making of a transfer, and the proving of a transfer made, is not always appreciated. A registered deed of sale makes the transfer; it is not merely evidence of it. An unregistered deed of sale can never make a transfer, but, where it is not excluded from evidence by the Registration Act, it will always be evidence of a transfer made by any other legal method. When parties agree and execute a deed of sale the contract to sell is complete. If the sale is for more than one hundred rupees, the deed must be registered, otherwise no transfer ensues, and the Registration Act read with S. 91 of the Evidence Act will effectually prevent proof even of the contract to sell. But, if the sale is for less than one hundred rupees, then the deed is admissible in evidence to prove the contract; yet the sale will still be incomplete unless execution of the deed is followed either by registration thereof or by delivery of the property sold. A mere delivery of property does not of itself amount to a sale. It must be made in pursuance of a contract to sell, and the Transfer of Property Act merely uses it as a substitute for registration. The delivery is a publication of the transaction, and a symbol of its reality in lieu of registration; but, whether the delivery completes a sale or a mortgage, depends upon the contract in pursuance of which it is made. There is no law which prohibits the embodiment of a such a contract in a document, or which excludes such document from evidence

A mortgage document of the year 1879 did not purport to sell the mortgaged property, but provided "in default of payment of any instalment, the entire mortgaged property shall be relinquished as if I had sold it to you." Held that this document should be construed with reference to the law as it stood before the Transfer of Property Act, and the document must be deemed to be a mortgage by conditional sale (a).

Held also that the remedy given by S. 67, Transfer of Property Act can be availed of by the parties to the document.

The right to a relief arising from a certain relation existing between parties is a matter of adjective law, and consequently the parties are entitled, when a new remedy has been provided by a new Act at the time when the relation subsists, to take advantage of that remedy, in a Court of law (b).

If the right to sue is subsisting on the date of the new or amending Act, the remedy provided by it is available to the parties, though the new Act cannot be applied to take away any vested rights to relief existing under the repealed Act (c).

There is nothing in S. 2, cl. (c) of the Transfer of Property Act to disentitle the parties from seeking the relief given by that Act. *It is a provision intended to preserve existing rights and not a disabling provision. That section appears to have been intended to preserve the earlier remedies if the parties chose to avail themselves of them and not to take away the remedy given under the Act.

Held further that the article of the Limitation Act applicable to a suit for foreclosure of the suit mortgage was not Art. 135, but Art. 132 read with S. 31 of the Limitation Act, and consequently the suit was not barred. Bikkina Ramayya v. Adabala Seshayya, 30 M.L.J. 338=34 Ind. Cas. 475.

(9) Ss. 2 (c) and 108 (j)—Lease from year to year in existence from before 1882—Transferability—Custom—Onus—Sub-lease, transfer by way of—Landlord if may recover khas possession.

A lease of homestead land from year to year which was in existence before the passing of the Transfer of Property Act is not governed by that Act, and S. 108, cl. (j) of that Act does not make it transferable absolutely or by way of sub-lease.

Such leases are not transferable except by custom, the burden of proving which is on the party who sets it up.

Whether a tenant from year to year had power before the Transfer of Property Act to transfer the holding by way of sub-lease or not, where it appeared that the tenant had abandoned the lands without arranging for payment of rent, and no rent had been paid by him since the ijara, and that the transaction was in substance though not in form an assignment.

(16) S. 6—Rent—Assignment—Debt—Simple mortgage and subsequent lease of the hypotheca to mortgagee—Mesne profit.

The rent is undoubtedly a debt and it is included in the definition of the term "choses-in-action" and consequently there can be no objection to its assignment. The definition of the term "mesne profits" presupposes that the person liable to pay it, is a trespasser and consequently it being a claim in tort, is not assignable under S. 6 of the Transfer of Property Act (a).

A simple mortgage and a subsequent lease of the same property in favour of the same mortgagee with a direction to apply the rent payable under the lease towards the interest due under the mortgage must be deemed to be independent of each other and the simple mortgage could be held to be converted into a usufructuary mortgage on the execution of the lease (b). Chidambaram Pillai v Doraisami Chetty, 31 Ind. Held (i) that under S. 43 of the Transfer of Property Act the mortgage took effect on the interest acquired by A subsequent to the mortgage, (ii) but that under the last clause of that section the mortgage was subject to the rights of C and D, and that the plaintiff could not be allowed to urge in second appeal that he had exercised the option given by S. 43 before the transfer in favour of C and D, inasmuch as he had not urged that point in the lower Courts but had merely allowed the case to proceed on the assumption that the institution of the suit itself was to be regarded as the exercise of the option. *Beni Rai v. Where a contract is entered into by an agent fraudulently in furtherance of the agent's own interest, and contrary to the interests of the principal, the latter is bound by the contract only, if the person dealing with the agent acts in good faith (a). The burden of proving good faith lies on those persons who enter into transaction with the agent.

Plaintiffs sued the defendants on a mortgage deed. The suit document was executed by the second defendant as the constituted attorney of the first defendant. The circumstances which led to the execution of the mortgage were as follows: A suit had been brought against the first defendant to enforce the specific performance of a contract to sell the suit property. The first defendant engaged the second defendant to help her in the suit and executed a power of attorney in favour of the second defendant for that purpose. The first defendant pleaded that she executed the power of attorney in favour of the second defendant to serve the limited purpose of defending the suit against her and to free her from constant attendance in Court, and the power to mortgage contained in it was fraudulently written without her knowledge and consent. She further contended that the mortgage was not within the scope of the second defendant's authority and that the plaintiffs did not act in good faith but in collusion with the second defendant and therefore she was not liable to pay under the mortgage. It was found that the agreement between the first defendant and second defendant which resulted in the execution of the power of attorney was, that the second defendant should advance money for defending the suit which had been brought against her and that he should receive one-fourth of the property if the first defendant succeeded in the suit. The evidence further showed that there was fraud and misrepresentation by second defendant in the execution of the power of attorney and that the plaintiffs did not act in good faith in getting the mortgage from the second defendant as agent of the first defendant. Held that, as the circumstances showed that the second defendant had exceeded his authority and executed the mortgage deed for purpose not warranted by the power of attorney, the first defendant was not bound to pay the mortgage money. (b) Held also that the plaintiffs having acted in bad faith and in collusion with the second defendant, they were not entitled to recover the mortgage money from the first defendant. Held further that the plaintiffs were not entitled to any lien or charge on the sale prices due to the first defendant in the matter of the specific performance of the contract to sell, as the plaintiffs' mortgage was ineffectual under the provisions of S. 52, Transfer of Property Act. Bhagwanji v. In a case in which no consideration of the law of bankruptcy applies, there is nothing to prevent a debtor paying one creditor in full and leaving others unpaid, although the result may be that the rest of his assets will be insufficient to provide for the payment of the rest of his debts.

The transfer which defeats or delays creditors is not an instrument which prefers one creditor to another, but an instrument which removes property from the creditors to the benefit of the debtor. The debtor must not retain a benefit for himself. He may pay one creditor and leave another unpaid.

So a transfer made for adequate consideration, in satisfaction of genuine debts, and without reservation of any benefit to the debtor, cannot be impeached under S. 53, Transfer of Property Act. Mussabur Sahu v. (46) S. 53—Land granted by Deputy Commissioner transferred to another person with permission of Deputy Commissioner at a time when transferor was involved in debts—Transfer whether void.

On 3rd March 1903, the Government made a grant of land to M. On 5th July 1907, M applied to the Deputy Commissioner for permission to transfer the land to his brother A, and on 2nd April 1908 the transfer was sanctioned. In March 1907, i.e., before M's application to the Deputy Commissioner, M was hopelessly involved in debt and for that reason applied for the transfer to his brother. Plaintiff sued M on a pro-note dated March 1907 and got a decree in August 1909. Held that M's right to transfer with permission was a valuable right which he exercised in favour of his brother without any consideration and at a time when he was unable to pay his debts of which the plaintiff's claim was one, and the presumption, therefore, under S. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, was that the transfer was void as against the plaintiff. Maung Maung v. A sale of land worth more than Rs. 100 without registration, as required by S. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act, is in law a mere contract to sell and does not of itself create an interest in or charge on the land contracted to be sold.

A suit for the specific performance of such a contract is governed by Art. 113 of the Limitation Act and can be brought within three years from the date of the purchaser's knowledge that the vendor refused to perform the contract when no specific date is fixed for the performance.

Where the defendants were in possession of the land which the plaintiffs purchased, the plaintiffs must be held to have had notice of the title, if any, under which the defendants had possession of the land.

If the defendants had paid off money on account of the vendors and in consequence they were put in possession on the understanding that the vendors had to give them a registered deed of sale, then they had, under S. 55 (6) (b) of the Transfer of Property Act, a charge on the property for the amount paid as purchase money plus interest at 6 per cent. from the time of the contract of purchase (a).

A contract of sale followed by delivery of possession does not, when there is no registered sale, create any interest in the property agreed to be sold and cannot, even if enforceable at date of suit or decree, be pleaded in defence to an action for ejectment by one having a legal title to recover (b). Perhaps, the purchaser in such a case has a right to sue for specific performance within the proper time.

Delivery of possession does not, like part payment, create a lien or interest in the property (c). Maung Bo v. Maung Tun Byu, 33 Ind. Cas. 121.

Where the mortgage deed was not executed by the mortgagor in the presence of the attesting witnesses there is no proper attestation of the deed as required by law (S. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act). Where a simple mortgage deed fails for want of proper attestation to take effect as a mortgage deed it can be treated as a bond and being a registered deed the lender is entitled to a simple money decree, the period of limitation for the suit being six years. Even at a late stage the plaintiff can be allowed to amend the plaint by adding a new prayer for a simple money decree.

In a suit upon the document against the sons of a Hindu who executed the document where the sons raise a plea that the debt was contracted for immoral purposes and that they were in no way liable to satisfy the debt in question, the matter should be determined before any decree is passed and it is not proper to pass a decree leaving the question to be determined in execution. Chaudhuri Mahadeo Prasad v. (b) and 49—Instrument declaring interest in immovable property—What is—Stamp Act, S. 26, Sch. I, Arts. 5, 6 and 40—Evidence Act, S. 92.*

Along with a deposit of title-deeds to cover certain liabilities which might be incurred in the course of business a letter was given which recited: "I hereby give you full authority to make use of this property in any manner you think best and pay yourself up all these amounts, and if there should be any balance still left unpaid, you shall be at liberty to proceed on me personally and on the rest of my properties to recoup any short balances." The letter was neither stamped nor registered.

Held, that the letter was not a mere recital of an equitable mortgage, but contained all the elements of a simple mortgage and was therefore inadmissible in evidence for want of both stamp and registration.

It is the deposit of title-deeds that constitutes the equitable mortgage and a letter or writing, which simply contains evidence of the transaction cannot be said to create or declare any right or interest in immoveable property within the meaning of S. 17, cl. (b) of the Registration Act (a).

Seshagiri Iyer, J.—The document does not fall under Art. 6. of Sch. I to the Stamp Act as it does not secure any amount, and Art. 40 of the same Schedule does not apply as the instrument by itself does not create an equitable mortgage.

S. 26 of the Stamp Act does not refer to admissibility of documents but only deals with the quantum interest allowable in a suit when the document is sued on and admitted in evidence.

In order to bring an instrument containing declaration of a right to or interest in immoveable property within the provisions of S. 17, the declaration must, by its own force, have the legal consequences contemplated by the parties and should not simply be a statement of what has happened (b).

The letter not evidencing an equitable mortgage or its terms, S. 92 of the Evidence Act would be no bar to the reception of independent oral evidence to establish an equitable mortgage. *P. M. A. Held, that a document which was not executed in the manner prescribed by S. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, that is, the marginal witnesses not having seen the mortgagor sign it, did not operate as a mortgage, notwithstanding that the mortgagor did not deny the execution thereof. *Radhe Shyam v. (85) S. 59—Attestation—Scribe writing the name of a person as a marginal witness—No proof of authority to sign—Validity of mortgage—Charge.

A document purporting to be a deed of mortgage bore the signature of one attesting witness; and the name of another person was written in the margin by the scribe but there was no signature or mark made by this second person. In a suit brought upon the document it appeared that the man was dead; and there was nothing to show that he had authorized the scribe to sign for him.

Held, that the document was not duly attested by two witnesses within the meaning of S. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, and that it could neither operate as a valid mortgage nor create a charge. Param Hans v. Randhir Singh, 14 A.L.J. 673 = 38 A. 461 = 35 Ind. Cas. 748.

Apart from the exception to S. 60, Transfer of Property Act, it is open to a mortgagee to abandon part of his claim releasing one of the mortgagors and to sue to recover their proportionate share of the mortgage money from the other mortgagors (a).

But the mortgagee cannot affect the release so as to increase the burden on the other mortgagors. Subject to this restriction the mortgagee can release any portion of the claim and it is immaterial whether he releases gratuitously or otherwise (b).

The fact that the mortgagee obtained a fresh mortgage from the released mortgagor on the same security does not infringe the right of the mortgagee to sue the other mortgagors, but the mortgagee must make the released mortgagor also a party to a suit upon the mortgage as against the other mortgagors. Basanta Kumar Sarvagya v. Abdur Rahim, J.—In order that a right to marshal may arise, the contending creditors must be creditors of one and the same person and must claim against the same property. Where the defendant had notice of the plaintiff's mortgage, when he obtained his security, that would be sufficient to bar his claim under S. 81 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Whether the Full Bench decision in 31 M. 419 applies also to a mortgagee from the purchaser?

Srinivasa Iyengar, J.—S. 81 of the Transfer of Property Act does not avail the mortgagees of purchasers as their right to marshal is in the right of their assignor who is the vendee of the original mortgagor. The right to marshal is a discretion in the Court which however is not a right of any particular party to direct the sale of any particular item if that would be sufficient to pay off the mortgage debt. It is a discretion which the Court is entitled to exercise at the time when final execution is ordered.

There is no via media in the matter; either a full tender is made in which case interest stops altogether or an inadequate tender is made which the mortgagee is at liberty to ignore and which will not affect his right to recover interest at the contract rate up to the date of the suit.

As a general rule, the mortgagee is entitled to his costs in suit for redemption or foreclosure unless he has been guilty of any misconduct; and the fact that the mortgagee claims more than is found owing to him is not per se any sufficient ground for depriving him of his costs. Gauri Shankar v. Pro. Code, O. XXIV, r. 3—Deposit of money in Court after suit—Abatement of interest.*

The Legislature has drawn a distinction between the case of a tender and a deposit as to the date from which interest shall cease to run. A tender in order to be valid must be made to the person entitled to receive the money. But when only a deposit is made the mortgagor must do something more. He must do all that has to be done in order to enable the person entitled to the money to receive it.

Where the mortgagee, as in this case, is dead, and the mortgagor, not being sure as to who are the persons entitled to succession and thus unable to make a valid tender, deposit the money in Court, but withdraws it before the rightful heirs are ascertained, he cannot be said to have done all that he could do to enable them to receive the money. In such cases the mortgagor cannot claim the benefit of S. 84 of the Transfer of Property Act, for the money having been withdrawn before the persons entitled to it have established their right, it must be taken that so far as they are concerned the deposit has never been made. The deposit in order to be effective under S. 84 must remain in Court until the mortgagee or his successor in interest has been enabled or is in a position to draw it (a).

"There is no analogy between tender and deposit. When a debtor tenders money, he must do it only to the person legally entitled thereto. He takes the risk of deciding for himself whether the offer he is making is to the proper person; in the case of the person to whom the tender is made, the latter can have no claim for interest and can have no grievance if it is refused, as he had the option and right of claiming payment at once and had not availed himself of them. On the other hand, a deposit is ordinarily made when the debtor is in doubt as to who is the rightful claimant. He wants to absolve himself from future liability by leaving it to the Court to hand the money over to the true owner. Nobody may be in a position to apply for payment immediately as in the case of a tender. Consequently the money must be in deposit to be drawn out as soon as the legal rights of the parties are determined." Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.

In a suit, brought in 1907, to recover the mortgage amount by sale of the property mortgaged, a preliminary decree was passed on 30th June 1913; and a final decree was passed on the 15th March 1914. The defendants, in appealing against the final order, substantially raised points against the decree of 1910 as well. The lower Court held that the correctness of the preliminary decree could not be disputed, under S. 97 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908. It was contended in appeal that the right of appeal accrued under the old Civ. Pro. Code, which was in force at the date of the suit:

Held, that, even under the old Code of Civil Procedure, the correctness of the decree, passed under S. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, could not be questioned in an application for an order absolute under S. 89 or in an appeal from an order absolute made on such an application. Murlidhar Narayan Gujarati v. The Jenmi's (mortgagor's) title is not extinguished by an order for sale passed in a prior suit by the Melkanomdar (2nd mortgagee).

Synopsis.—An actual sale in the prior suit may extinguish the Jenmi's title. But a mortgagor defendant in the 2nd mortgagee's redemption suit cannot obtain an order for sale (a).

A mortgagor can apply for an order for sale only in the suit brought by himself.

Under S. 93, Transfer of Property Act, an order for sale extinguishes only the plaintiff's right to redeem and the security of the mortgagee is also extinguished thereby so far as the plaintiff is concerned. Ordinarily a redemption suit by a mortgagor is not barred as res judicata by reason of a previous suit by a 2nd mortgagee to redeem the first (b). Yanberl Manakal Purushotaman Nambudri v. Where, there being no written lease, the tenants were found to have been holding the land on an annual rent of Rs. 15 and not for an agricultural or manufacturing purpose:

Held—That from the fact that the rent was an annual rent, the presumption ought to be drawn that the tenancy was an annual tenancy.

That, in the absence of anything to rebut the presumption, S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, if it stood alone, would be inapplicable, there being "a contract to the contrary" within the meaning of that section. Trespass.

(1) Action for—Who may sue, tenant or owner—Title by adverse possession not pleaded, if may be allowed in the Court of Appeal—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), O. XLI. r. 24—Adverse possession against Municipality or the Crown—Public drains, filled up, if becomes public way.

Per Sanderson, C.J., and Mookerjee, J.—The tenant is the proper plaintiff to sue for trespass committed in respect of the land, and the reversioner can only sue for trespass if the alleged trespass is injurious to the reversion.

Per Sanderson, C.J.—Even though the trespass is accompanied by a claim of right, it is not necessarily injurious to the reversionary estate (a).

Per Woodroffe, J.—It is not sufficient for the plaintiff in an action in ejectment to prove possession. He must show title.

Per Mookerjee, J.—Mere previous possession will not entitle a plaintiff to a decree for recovery of possession, except in a suit under S. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (b).

The plaintiff may be allowed to succeed on a title by adverse possession pleaded for the first time in the Court of Appeal, provided such a case arises on the facts stated in the plaint, and the defendant is not taken by surprise (c).

To establish a title by adverse possession, the plaintiff must prove enjoyment possessing the same characteristics as are necessary for presumption of a lost grant and consequently that the possession was adequate in continuity, in publicity and in extent, to extinguish the title of the true owner (d).

Per Woodroffe, J.—Where, in a suit for declaration of title and possession, the plaintiff did not in the alternative plead title by adverse possession, the plaintiff cannot ask the Court to frame such an issue on appeal except by amendment, and O. XLI, r. 24, which authorises the Court to remodel the issues does not apply to such a case.

Per Curiam.—A public drain does not become a public way merely because it is filled up. Ram Chandra Sil v. Ramanant Das, 20 C.W.N. 773 = 36 Ind. Cas. 890.

(1) Plaintiff when may succeed on strength of his long possession—Defendant's occupation by permission of landlord—Plaintiff whether can sue for declaration of title and possession—Interference in second appeal.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration of title to and recovery of possession of a tank of which a third party was the admitted landlord. Defendant pleaded permissive occupation from the landlord. The lower Courts found that plaintiff had not proved the title set out in his plaint, but that he and his predecessors have been in possession of the tank for more than 12 years, and that defendant was a trespasser. It was also found that no settlement was made in favour of the defendant by the landlord, but that the defendant was being supported by the landlord in resisting this suit. Held, under the circumstances, that the defendant was not a trespasser, but must be considered a permissive occupant and in possession co-ordinate to that of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff's suit based on long possession must be dismissed.

In order to succeed on the strength of long possession, the plaintiff must show that the defendant is a trespasser.

The term "trespasser" is a term of law and it is competent for the Court in second appeal to examine whether the defendant may in law be described as a trespasser. Central Karkend Coal Co., Ltd. v. Kartic Rewani, 1 Pat. L.J. 47=34 Ind. Cas. 616.

(1) Temple trustee—Dismissal, when proper—Suit by some trustees joining others as defendants—Payment to some of the trustees, when valid.

Where a trustee is dismissed without being called upon to answer the charges in respect of which it was proposed to dismiss him, such an abuse of the rules of natural justice would invalidate the dismissal in the case of an officer of this kind. Where the managing member circulated the proposal to dismiss the trustee to the other members and before the answers were received the dismissal was communicated, it does not amount to a proper dismissal.

Where two trustees were improperly dismissed by the Temple Committee and three more trustees were appointed by them, it is competent for the two trustees to institute a suit by themselves without consulting the other trustee whom they have impleaded as defendants.

One out of many trustees can receive and give a good discharge for rent and similar payments of income if he has or is held out by his co-trustees as having authority to do so.

The majority of trustees have no power to usurp the duties of the trust and to say that payment should be made to them.

(3) Deed of trust—Construction—Joint property settled in trust—Each share settled upon each settlor and his heirs—Specific provision for the payment of profits of the settlor who died first—Absence of like provisions regarding settlors dying subsequently—Suit by predeceased son's widow to recover her share of profits on the death of the last settlor.

Three brothers, having acquired property which was held as joint family property, executed a deed of trust dividing the property, into three lots and allotting one lot to each of the brothers. The deed provided that the trustees should collect the rents and profits of the property and after deducting the outgoings pay to the three brothers "jointly for the use of themselves and their respective families during the joint lives of them all." On the death of any one of the three, each of the two surviving brothers was to be paid separately the rents and profits of his lot so long as he lived, and elaborate provision was made as to what the trustees were to do with the profits of the lot of the brother who died first. No specific provision was made as to the profits of the lots of the brothers dying subsequently. Two of the brothers died without leaving any issue. The third brother, who died last, left him surviving three sons (defendants) and the widow (plaintiff) of a predeceased son of his. The deed provided for them thus: "On the death of any son of the said.....during the life-time of his brothers the heirs of such deceased shall be entitled to be paid by the said trustees the proportionate share of the said rents and profits which such deceased son himself would have been entitled to if alive." The widow sued to recover as an heir one-fourth share of the profits of the portion of the lot constituting the share of her father-in-law:

Held, (1) that the remainder in favour of the sons of the third brother, who was the last to die, took effect although he was not the first settlor to die;

(2) that the substitutionary provision in favour of the heirs of a deceased son applied to the heirs of a son predeceasing the settlor;

(3) that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover one-fourth share of the profits of the share of her father-in-law. Pranjiwandas Kallidas v. Shamkorebal, 18 Bom. L.R. 516.

Though there is no statute governing charitable trusts in India, the general principles enunciated in S. 15 of the Indian Trusts Act, as regards the way in which a trustee ought to deal with the trust property in his hands is applicable to a trustee of a charitable or religious institution. But while in the case of private trusts in India the Legislature in dealing in S. 20 of the Trusts Act with the question of investments of proceeds according to the principle laid down in S. 15 thought that securities mentioned in the former section were the proper forms of investment and that no other form of investment should be authorised, a trustee of a charitable endowment is not confined to the modes of investment specified in S. 20, and may invest the trust funds in a bank possessing a good reputation.

Where a trustee of a religious institution who was enjoined by a decree of Court to invest in Government Securities whatever money was not required for immediate expenditure; invested all the money which he had reason to believe might be required to meet the probable expenditure of the temple during the year in fixed deposit in a Bank on terms which would enable the trustee to withdraw the deposit or any portion thereof on foregoing the interest on the amount withdrawn, held that in making the deposit the trustee did not contravene the decree of the Court or commit a breach of trust.

In a suit under S. 92 of the Civ. Pro. Code the Court is entitled to give any directions that may be necessary and proper with reference to the property and income of the trust though the parties interested have not come forward to complain. Sri Mahant Prayag Dassjee Varu, 33 Ind. Cas. 677.

Where the instrument of trust clearly provides for vacancies being caused by resignation, the resignation by a trustee operates to discharge him from his duties as trustee, and on such discharge the trust survives and the trust property passes to the co-trustees, unless the instrument of trust expressly declares otherwise.

Where an instrument of trust vested the management of a temple in five trustees and provided that suits by the temple must be filed by the five jointly and that the five must join together and defend suits against the temple and after the resignation of one of them (for which the instrument provided) the other four trustees instituted a suit on behalf of the temple and pending appeal another trustee died and there was no obligatory and imperative provision in the instrument as to the minimum number of trustees required to represent the temple; held that the temple was properly represented in the suit and that the suit was maintainable and could be validly continued by the remaining trustees (a).

In 1893, B (plaintiff's father) executed a San-mortgage of his property to defendant No. 1. In 1901, B's widow K took an advance by way of tagavi from Government and gave a charge on Survey No. 311 (one of the properties mortgaged) as collateral security for payment of the loan. K executed a possessory mortgage of the property (inclusive of Survey No. 311) in favour of defendant No. 1 and put him in possession. In 1906, Government sold Survey No. 311 to satisfy its claim in respect of the tagavi allowance: it was purchased by defendant No. 2 who was a gumasta and a benamidar of defendant No. 1. In 1909, defendant No. 1 assigned his mortgage rights to defendant No. 3; and, on the same day, defendant No. 2 also sold Survey No. 311 to defendant No. 3. Defendant No. 3 was the paternal uncle of the plaintiff; he had been cultivating Survey No. 311 as a tenant for a number of years past; and he had notice of every thing that occurred in connection with the property. The plaintiff sued in 1912 to redeem the property under the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879. Defendant No. 3 contended inter alia that Survey No. 311 was owing to the intermediate sale and purchase freed from the mortgage claim:

Held, (1), that, inasmuch as the sale took place at the instance of the Mamladar in consequence of a wilful default on the part of the mortgagee (defendant No. 1), he, in acquiring the property through his benamidar at such sale, had availed himself of his position as mortgagee to gain an advantage spoken of in S. 90, Trusts Act;

(2) that S. 56 of the Land Revenue Code, 1879, had no application, because there had been no forfeiture under S. 153 of the Code;

(3) that, the sale having taken place by reason of defendant No. 1's default as mortgagee and by his improperly availing himself of his position as mortgagee, he should not obtain immunity from his breach of trust by reason of the extinction of his position as mortgagee through his fraudulent action as mortgagee;

(4) that the defendant No. 3, who was not a bona fide purchaser without notice, was bound by the equities enforceable against defendant No. 1. Chitta Bhula v. Bai Jamni, 18 Bom. L.R. 438=40 B. 483.

After contracting to sell certain immoveable properties to defendants 4 and 5, defendants 1 to 3 sold the same to the plaintiff, who had notice of the prior contract to sell. About a month later, they again executed a registered conveyance in favour of defendants 4 and 5 and put them in possession. The plaintiff thereupon instituted the present suit for possession.

Held that, having regard to S. 91, Trusts Act, the plaintiff's suit did not lie. Malamel Thiruvankata Charlar v. Parl Seshadri Iyengar, 3 L.W. 457=30 M.L.J. 559=19 M.L.T. 369=34 Ind. Cas. 488.

(3) Courts of Equity—Time, stipulation as to—Jurisdiction, exercise of—Vendor, and purchaser—Sale, agreement for—Installments at specified dates—Forfeiture on default—Action for specific performance—If maintainable.

Courts of Equity which look at the substance as distinguished from the letter of agreements, no doubt exercise an extensive jurisdiction which enables them to decree specific performance in cases where justice requires it, even though literal terms of stipulations as to time have not been observed. But they never exercise this jurisdiction where the parties have expressly intimated in their agreement that it is not to apply, by providing that time is to be of the essence of their bargain. If the parties, having originally so provided, have subsequently expressed or by implication waived the provision made, the jurisdiction will again attach.

In an agreement for the sale of lands (a portion of the money having been paid on the date of the deed) it was stipulated, that the balance of the purchase-money, was to be payable in annual instalments at specified dates; that on any default the whole of the principal and interest secured by the agreement should at once become due and be payable, or the contract should be forfeited and determined at the option of the vendor, who should also be at liberty to retain any payments made on account of it as and by way of liquidated damages; and that time was to be considered as of the essence of the agreement. Default in punctual payment having occurred the vendor gave notice cancelling the agreement. The purchaser after making one or two tenders of the instalment, which the vendor declined to receive, brought an action claiming specific performance and in the alternative relief from forfeiture under the terms of the agreement.

Held that in the absence of any agreement to extend time, nor anything that amount to waiver of the right to treat time as of the essence, there could be no justification for decreeing specific performance; that the vendor could not insist on forfeiture in accordance with the strict terms of the agreement; and that the purchaser should be relieved from forfeiture of the sums paid by him under the agreement. Steedman v. Drinkle, 33 Ind. Cas. 323 (P.C.).

A purchaser of property who had paid off a mortgage that was subsisting on the property and the sale in whose favour was not made by a registered instrument as required by S. 54, Transfer of Property Act, cannot claim, as against a subsequent purchaser under a registered sale-deed, the rights of the mortgagee whom he paid off, unless there was an intention on his part to keep the mortgage alive.

The mutilation of a discharged document is evidence of the absence of an intention to keep the mortgage alive (a). Ma Kyun v. Myaling Shing, 34 Ind. Cas. 47.

- (5) Option by purchaser to re-sell—Specific performance—Action—Misconception—Redemption decree—Technical mistake.

An option by a purchaser to re-sell the land to the vendor on certain terms and conditions is a perfectly valid contract provided it is not subject to any possible question of perpetuity, and there can be specific performance of such contract as has been directed in many actions brought to enforce such options.

On a Court misconceiving an action as based on mortgage wrongly decreed redemption for specific performance, the decree is only technically wrong. It should not be interfered with in appeal as the parties are in exactly the same position as if there had been a decree for specific performance. Dharanidhar Mukherji v. - (6) Contract to sell immoveable property—Purchase-money paid—Suit for specific performance with an alternative claim for refund of purchase-money—Limitation—Act IX of 1908, Sch. I, Arts 62, 97.

Where in pursuance of a contract to sell immoveable property, a portion of the consideration was paid as earnest money at once and the balance was paid two months after, a suit by the purchaser for specific performance with an alternative claim for the return of the purchase-money instituted more than 3 years from the date of the payment of the balance of the purchase-money is barred by limitation. A suit for specific performance must be brought within 3 years of the date upon which the contract was to be performed. The claim for the return of the purchase-money is governed either by Art. 62 or Art. 97 of the Limitation Act. If Art. 62 applies, the suit should be brought within three years from the date when the money was received by the vendor. If Art. 97 applies, the date of failure must be taken to be the date when the balance of the purchase-money was paid. Fatmatus Sughla Begam v. Mariamunnissa Begam, 33 Ind. Cas. 49.

RICHARDS, C.J. and RAJQUE, J.

- (7) Sale—Specific performance—Misrepresentation as to extent of property—Compensation—Principle—Court of equity.

In exercising its jurisdiction over specific performance, a Court of Equity looks at the substance and not merely at the letter of the contract. If a vendor sues and is in a position to convey substantially what the purchaser has contracted to get, the Court will decree specific performance with compensation for any small and immaterial deficiency, provided that the vendor has not, by misrepresentation or otherwise, disintitiled himself to his remedy. If it is the purchaser who is suing, the Court holds him to have an even larger right. He may elect to take all that he can get, and to have a proportionate abatement from the purchase-money. But this right applies only to a deficiency in the subject-matter described in the contract. It does not apply to a claim to make good a representation about that subject-matter, made not in the contract, but collaterally to it. In the latter case the remedy is rescission, or a claim for damages for deceit where there has been fraud, or for breach of a collateral contract if there has been such a contract. Rutherford v. Acton-Adams, 32 Ind. Cas. 47 (P.C.).

- (i) Landlord and Tenant—Decree for ejectment—Institution of rent suit when right to eject had not accrued—Waiver—Waiver of conditional right.

On 18-7-1910, defendants sued plaintiff for rent of the years 1314-1317 and on 8-4-1911 obtained an ex parte decree which directed that, if the arrears were not paid within 30 days of the tenant's becoming aware of the decree, he was to be ejected. That decree was executed and possession was given to the defendants on 13-7-1911. On 30-4-1911, the defendants instituted a suit against the plaintiff for the rent of the year 1318, which apparently began in September 1910, and ended in September 1911. Previous to the institution of the suit the plaintiff (tenant) had on the 10th of April 1911, deposited Rs. 58-13 annas into Court in part payment of the rent of the year 1318; the total demand on account of which was Rs. 64 approximately. This second rent suit was decreed on the 16th July 1911.

On 20-1-1912, the present suit was instituted by plaintiff (tenant) to recover possession of the mauza on the ground that defendants were not competent to eject the plaintiff by reason of previous waiver.

Held that the institution of the suit coupled with the acceptance of the money deposited for the year 1318 constituted a complete waiver and estopped the defendants from proceeding in ejectment in execution of the decree of the 8th of April 1911.

There may be a waiver of a conditional right.

- (1) Construction of—Widow's right of transfer—“Aulad,” meaning of.

A Wajib-ul-arz contained the following provision: “Women who are without issue (aulad) are permitted to hold the shares of their husbands without any power of transfer. After the decease of childless widows the property devolves upon the uncles and nephews of their deceased husbands and thereafter upon the more remote collateral male relations.”

Held that the term “aulad” meant male issue only. Held also that the custom of exclusion of daughters and their issue from inheritance could not be inferred from the entries noted above. On a further construction of certain entries in the wajib-ul-arz, the Chief Court inferred that the powers of a childless widow in the matter of disposing of the estate of her husband in favour of a daughter or daughter's son had been extended. *Surajball v. A tribal custom excluding daughters from succession in certain families in a district must be proved with regard to the particular family in question (b).

Waste Lands.

(1) Shamilat in village patti Allanwala, Jhang District—Rights of Ala maliks to its proprietorship—No rights to Adna maliks—Acquisition of rights from Dewan Sawan Mal's—Right to lands actually held—No right to waste—Position of bathrakidar, talukdar and tarraddakhar—Entry in wajib-ul arz—No rights conferred thereby.

As Dewan Sawan Mal recognised no rights in land that was not being actually cultivated, it would follow that proprietorship acquired through him could only refer to the proprietorship of the actual holding, then under cultivation, and that he granted no rights to any one in waste land as waste.

Waste Lands—(Concluded).

As village boundaries have only been fixed since the advent of the British rule, it is impossible to hold that persons acquired any rights in the shamilat when they acquired proprietary rights in their holdings through Dewan Sawan Mal (a).

In the Jhang District, the adna malik may be said to be the present equivalent of the hathrakhiar or tarraddadkar or he may be a proprietor as created by Dewan Sawan Mal.

The land belonged to ala maliks but the adna maliks having been in possession of it for a long period and having paid revenue direct, were deemed to be entitled to the proprietorship of it, subject to the payment of a proprietary fee.

The enforcement of hathrakhai or talukdari right is a clear indication that the original owners were recognised as the superior proprietors by the British Government.

The rights of a proprietor in the shamilat lands are not a mere accessory to the land separately held by him. Therefore a sale of land by a proprietor without an express sale of his rights in the shamilat gave the vendee no rights in the shamilat (b).

Held that, in the village Path Allanwala in the tahsil and district of Jhang, it is the ala maliks and not the adna maliks who are entitled to the shamilat lands of the village.

Held further that no question of custom arose as this is the very first time that the shamilat has been partitioned.

Held, also, that the entry in the wajib-ul-ars Cl. (14) which gives to the khewatdars a right in the shamilat merely lays down a basis or mode of partition, and creates or gives no right to share to any person (c). *Sultan Ahmad v. (1) Due execution and attestation, proof of—Attesting witnesses, turned hostile—Court may find execution proved from other evidence—Proof that testator saw attesting witnesses sign, and latter saw testator sign, if necessary, where Will regular on its face — Presumption of due execution.

The mere fact that attesting witnesses to a Will have repudiated their signature does not invalidate the Will, if it can be proved by evidence of a reliable character that they have given false testimony.

When the evidence of the attesting witnesses is vague, doubtful or even conflicting upon some material point, the Court may take into consideration the circumstances of the case and judge from them collectively whether the requirements of the statute were complied with; in other words, the Court may, on consideration of the other evidence or of the whole circumstances of the case, come to the conclusion that their recollection is at fault, that their evidence is of a suspicious character or that they are wilfully misleading the Court, and accordingly disregard their testimony and pronounce in favour of the Will.

It is not necessary under the law that affirmative evidence should be forthcoming, that the testator did as a matter of fact see the attesting witnesses put their signatures or that the attesting witnesses did actually see the testator sign the document. It is enough if the circumstances show that their relative position was such that they might have seen the execution and the attestation respectively.

Every presumption will be made in favour of due execution and attestation in the case of a will regular on the face of it and apparently duly executed. Brahmadat Tewari v. Chaudan Bibi, 20 C.W.N. 192=34 Ind. Cas. 686.

(3) Revocation by parol—Actual destruction, whether necessary—Animus revocandi—Omission to make a subsequent Will, effect of—Custom—Intestate succession among Arains of Lahore—Brothers and their sons, rights of, as against widow and daughter's sons.

Held, that, in cases not governed by the English Law, the Indian Succession Act or any other Statute specifying a particular method of revocation, actual destruction or a formal revocation is not essential to constitute the revocation of a Will (a).

Under the Muhammadan Law, a bequest may be revoked by express declaration, oral or written.

Where, therefore, a testator expressed in a Court of Justice his intention of revoking a Will previously made:

Will—(Continued).

Held, also, that this was a case of the revocation of Will by parol and that the mere fact that the testator failed to destroy the existing Will or omitted to make a subsequent one, could not have the effect of reviving a Will which had been cancelled.

Held, further, that, among the Arains of Lahore, brothers and their sons are not heirs at intestate in the presence of the widow and the daughter's sons (b). Miran Baksh v. Mussamat Mehr Bibi, 6 P.W.R. 1916=41 P.L.R. 1916=31 Ind. Cas. 693.

When one of the properties so bequeathed comprised a mortgage and the whole of the money due thereunder was received by Pakkremmar from the mortgagor: Held, that he was bound to account to Mammad's mother's children for their share of the mortgage money. *Arippayil Kader v. (5) Construction of—Dedication of property for worship—Executors to divide profits after expenses—Trust property.

A testator bequeathed his property in the following terms:—

"In the other dwelling-house consisting of three sections of Thakurdwara including the staircase, both the executors aforesaid should reside, put up pilgrims and attend on them jointly and from the income thereof to daily perform the usual worship of the gods Mufli Dhar, Raj Rajesbri and Mahadeo and the worship on Basant Panchini, Ram Nauni, Janam Ashtami, Nauratri, Shivaratri, Dhanurmas, and Sami festivals and to look after its repairs. After this is done both the executors should make a receipt and disbursement account of the income annually and after deducting the above expenses should divide the profits between them in half and half and should grant receipts and acquittances as between themselves."

of the executors shall in any way be entitled to transfer, mortgage or sell this house, and if they do so it will be utterly null and void."

Held, that the will created a trust and the only beneficial interest given under the will to the nephews was the right to take surplus profits, if any, after the worship had been performed and the festivals duly observed. Murli Dhar v. Dewan Chand, 14 A.L.J. 249 = 38 A. 214 = 32 Ind. Cas. 945.

(6) Construction of—Dedication to idols—Completes dedication or charge—Surplus income arising from debutter estate—Accumulation—Power given to shebait to invest—Cash and money—Devise of residuary estate.

Held, on the construction of the will in question, that there was a valid trust for religious and charitable purposes with regard to the surplus income arising from the debutter estate.

That the clause relating to accumulation was merely incidental to the provisions relating to dedication and management of the property.

That a power was given to the shebait from time to time in the course of the management of the properties to make safe investment of surplus income and thus increase the debutter fund, and a direction was necessarily implied that the income not required for the specified expenses should be used within a reasonable time and in a reasonable way for other religious ceremonies and other charitable work. It was left to the discretion of the shebait to decide the exact form and the exact time when the income should be so used.

The term 'cash' used by the testator in cl. 12, did not include arrears of rent, debts due and the like properties.

Clauses 12, 13 and 14 of the will, contained a devise of the residuary estate to his two sons.

Per Sanderson, C.J. and Woodroffe, J.—The word 'cash' in the ordinary acceptance of the term has a narrower meaning than money, and when taken in conjunction with the words 'Government Promissory Notes,' means cash in the ordinary meaning of the word.

Per Mookerjee, J.—Cl. 1 of the will constituted a complete dedication of all the property to the idols. It did not create merely a charge on the property in favour of the idols.

Where there is an unconditional gift to charity, a direction for accumulation is invalid.

The trustees of a charity are not bound to spend the whole of the income of the charity every year; they can lay by money for an ulterior purpose, just as an individual can, provided the purpose is within the scope of the charitable trust.

In case of doubt, one should so read the will as to lead to a testacy and not to an intestacy. Sarajini Dassi v. Ganendra Nath Das, 23 C. L.J. 241 = 33 Ind. Cas. 102.

1. The duty of a Court in interpreting a testament is to ascertain the intention of the testator from all the clauses of the document and to give full effect to it.

2. Where a testator, having conferred an absolute estate upon his wives, attaches a condition in restraint of alienation, such a condition is void in law (a).

Where, therefore, a testator bequeathed his entire property to his two wives, and expressly conferred upon them full powers of alienation by sale, mortgage, etc., and there was a clause in a subsequent part of the will providing that, on the death of one wife, the other would succeed to her estate, and that, on the death of both, certain specified collaterals would inherit the property:

Held, that what the testator intended was that, after his death, the widows should have unrestricted powers of alienation, whether during their lives, or to take effect after their deaths, and that the later clause did not justify a distinction between gifts inter vivos and Wills, i.e., the property not covered by any alienation should devolve on his collaterals.

Where plaintiffs in a pre-emption suit were proved to have been proprietors in the village at the time of the sale as well as on the date of the suit and the defendants produced no evidence in rebuttal:

Held, that they had complied with the requirements of the proviso to S. 11 of the Pre-emption Act and were entitled to pre-empt. Nek Muhammad v. Maya Ram, 35 F.W.R. 1916 = 32 Ind. Cas. 605.

(8) Demonstrative legacy—Interest whether payable thereon—Time from which interest payable—Ss. 311, 312, Act X of 1865 (Succession).

Interest is payable on demonstrative legacies (a).

A legacy payable at a future day carries interest only from the time fixed for its payment. On the other hand, where no time for payment is fixed, the legacy is payable at, and therefore bears interest from, the end of a year after the testator's death, even though it be expressly made payable out of a particular fund which is not got in until after a longer interval (b). And S. 311, Succession Act, applies to such a case.

The Act provides 4 per cent. per annum which will be the rate of interest allowed upon

- (9) Genuineness, proof of—Clear and trustworthy evidence of attesting witness is to be rejected because appearance of document suspicious—Court, if in such a case may speculate as to what would have been a proper Will for the testator.

Proof of the genuineness of a Will depended mainly upon the testimony of a doctor who attested, on the last page of the Will, the signature of the deceased, and who deposed that, at the time the Will was executed, the deceased was perfectly capable of understanding a business transaction. The Will on examination showed that the writing on the last page was inconveniently crowded above the signature of the testator, and, on the last page but one, the writing at the foot was so placed as to lend colour to the suggestion that the page had been filled up after the signature had been attached. Upon this the Trial Judge built the theory that the Will had been written in blank pages over signatures of the testator previously obtained.

Held, that the doctor's evidence, if believed (and which the Judicial Committee did believe) completely destroyed this theory, and that the High Court was right in pronouncing in favour of the genuineness of the Will.

That it would be most unsafe and most undesirable, in circumstances such as these, to try to spell out, from the peculiar form in which a document written in the vernacular appears, a hypothetical answer to the clear, distinct and trustworthy evidence of the doctor who witnessed the Will.

Where a Will has once been made and is apparently in perfect form, and the evidence of the attesting witness is to be trusted, few things can be more dangerous than to attempt to re-create the kind of Will that the man ought, in the opinion of the Court, to have made. Once the man's mind is free and clear and is capable of disposing of his property, the way in which it is to be disposed of rests with him, and it is not for any Court to try and discover whether a Will could not have been made more consonant either with reason or with justice. *Sona Ana Arunachalam Chetty v. K, a Hindu gentleman of means and resident of a place called Sursand, went accompanied by his two wives and some of his servants and dependants to attend the bathing fair at Sonapur on 10th November 1905. Cholera having broken out at the fair, it was broken up by Government order, but K, who had been suffering from dysentery and had been made nervous about the state of his health by the out-break of cholera, (it was alleged) executed the disputed Will on 15th November 1905 and died at 9 A.M. on 16th November 1905. The Will was proved by such of the attesting witnesses as were available and other witnesses. The genuineness of the Will was challenged inter alia on the ground that the witnesses to the execution were not of a superior position. The Will however appeared to be one which a Hindu gentleman in K's position might reasonably and naturally have made, and the attesting witnesses were such as one would reasonably expect to be available on the occasion.

Held, that, there being nothing in the case to suggest that the Will had been forged or that the witnesses who gave evidence as to the preparation, and as to the due execution, of the Will had committed perjury, the contention that the Will should not be accepted as genuine because the witnesses to its execution were not of a superior position was not sound and was contrary to the view of the law as expressed in 22 I.A. 12 at p. 24, 41 I.A. 80=18 O.W.N. 521.

That something more than mere suspicion is necessary in such a case to make convincing an argument based on the social position of the witnesses.

One of the beneficiaries under the Will was C, a boy who, the Will recited, had been adopted according to Hindu rites, by K as his son. The caveators questioned the factum of the adoption:

Held, that the trial Judge was right, upon an application for probate, in declining to frame an issue as to the alleged adoption, though the matter had to be considered as bearing on the question of the genuineness of the Will, and the caveators were not precluded from questioning the adoption and were rightly allowed to cross-examine the propounder's witnesses on that subject and to call evidence to prove that C was not adopted.

For the purposes of the propounder's brief, a note had been obtained from a witness (subsequently examined at the trial) of the evidence that he could give:

Held, that the note was privileged from production and the caveators were not entitled to see it, and the Judges should not have allowed their minds to be influenced in considering the evidence by the fact that the note was not produced in Court for the information of the

- (12) Wording of a document called codicil—Modification of will—Oral will to be very distinct, etc.—Present and future intention to modify the will

Held, that:—

1. A person who wants to prove a modification of a Will by subsequent testamentary declaration is bound to establish an actual intention, but not expression declaratory only of a future design, of the testator to revoke its clauses imposing the conditions which he seeks to avoid.

2. Where a Will contains a clear and unambiguous disposition of the property real or personal such a gift is not allowed to be revoked by doubtful expressions in a codicil, i.e., a distinct disposition made by a Will cannot be revoked by a codicil except through the medium and use of the words equally clear and distinct (a).

3. If any party is bound to strictness of pleadings it is he who sets up a nuncupative will. He who rests his title on an uncertain foundation as the spoken words of a man since deceased is bound to allege as well as prove with the utmost precision the words on which he relies with every circumstance of time and place (b).

4. In the present case a portion of the will also provided as follows:—

"After my or my wife's death (whichever takes place afterwards) the big haveli with stable shall be possessed by both my grandsons Naringan Das and Narsingh Das, sons of Lala Naringan Das deceased for three years and none of my descendants can eject them from this haveli. They shall possess the whole of that part of the big haveli, and stable which is possessed by me now-a-days. Devi Das shall only remain in possession of the large room on the second storey towards the Bazaar and shall have no concern with any other part of the haveli and stable. sum of Rs. 6,000 (six thousands) to both my grandsons Naringan Das and Narsingh Das in equal shares.

The plaintiff in this case contended on the strength of the document containing certain words which he called codicil and some oral evidence that the testator during his life time had revoked the conditions after receiving the sum of Rs. 1,665 and that he had become absolute owner of the haveli.

Held, that the principles above enunciated that this document was a mere receipt and it including the oral evidence, was quite insufficient to revoke the said provisions of the will. Naringan Das v. Devi Das, 112 P.W.R. 1916=41 P. L.R. 1917=35 Ind. Cas. 899.

A testatrix described her title as "I am the sole owner in possession (malik-o-qabiz) of his (her deceased husband's) entire estate and possess all the proprietary powers" and bequeathed the entire estate of her husband to one F.C. with certain conditions, one of which was that "I shall continue to be the owner in possession of the entire estate the subject of the will and possess all the powers such as those of making sales, mortgages, &c." and condition 4 was in the following terms; "I have bequeathed Mauza Kludde, with all the property to Mussammat Gomti—After my death she shall be the owner in possession (malik-o-qabiz) of the entire property in Mauza Khudla aforesaid":—

Held, that the words "malik-o-qabiz" signify a full ownership in property; that by condition 4 the village in question was absolutely bequeathed to Mussammat Gomti; that expressions as to powers of alienation by the testatrix neither abate from, nor fortify, the completeness of the ownership and possession of the testatrix, and, being words which are thus surplusage, should be omitted in construing condition 4; and that inasmuch as the entire estate devised to F.C. was subject to conditions, an absolute gift of the village in question to another person was an exception but not repugnant to F.C. (15) Construction—Bequest by Hindu father—Absolute gift to two sons with gift over in the event of legatee's death—Effect.

B, a Hindu, left a will dated 19th December 1894, and died thereafter leaving him surviving two sons R and T. The will left by B contained, among others, the following provision, vis. '...The share of T shall be entrusted to B as T was subject to fits of epilepsy. In case he dies on account of the said disease, his wife shall be entitled to maintenance allowance and all the brothers shall be owners of his property in equal shares...' T begot a son, U, the plaintiff, and died ten months after U was born. T's share of the property was with B's widow and sons. U instituted the present suit for the recovery of a half share of certain houses left to his father T by B's will.

Held, that, on a true and proper construction of the will, the words 'in case he dies' occurring in the will, mean 'in case he dies without issue before me' and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the half-share of the properties assigned to T under the will (a). Udho Ram v. Mehr Chand, 114 P.R. 1916.

(16) Probate proceeding—Right of creditor to come in such proceedings.

The owner of a property by a will left it to his wife for life, after her death to his daughter-in-law for her life. After her death, he said the male children that should be born to his son, should on attaining majority get the property in absolute right. He further declared that no property left by him was to be liable for debt of his son. No executor was definitely appointed by the will, but the testator gave equal power to his wife and to his daughter-in-law, and directed that, in case of death, of one of them the survivor of the two should continue to be in enjoyment and possession in the manner stated above. His wife obtained Probate of the will and retained possession of the property during her life. The present appellant, who was a creditor of the testator's son, applied to be made a party to the probate proceedings. Held, that, it would only be in the event of a will being put forward possibly to defraud creditors, that a creditor would have locus standi to come in probate proceedings. In the present case there could be no question of fraud upon the appellant, as he was not a creditor at all and apparently had no prospect of being one when probate was granted to the widow of the testator. *Akshay Kumari Basu v. (18) Successive executors—Non-liability of second executor for his predecessor's account—Fistate in embarrassment—Sale of property by executor—Debtor appointed as executor, effect—Directions by testator as to marriage expenses, if valid—Suit for construction of will—Costs—Benami transaction—Test—Evidence Act, S. 145—Previous statements, when can be used as evidence.

Where a person makes a testamentary disposition of his properties and appoints successive executors, the second executor as such is not liable for the accounts of his predecessor or for his wrongful acts, but it is incumbent upon him to call upon the representatives of his predecessor to render an account and respond in damages for devastavit, mismanagement, or breach of duty whereby any property of the deceased testator was diverted from a due course of administration (a).

Where the estate of a testator which has come into the hands of the executor is admittedly in a condition of considerable embarrassment, his failure to raise money on interest with a view to save the property from sale is not necessarily a dereliction of duty, unless it is proved that damage has actually resulted to the estate from the sale.

The effect of the appointment of a debtor to the office of executor is that the debt due from the debtor executor is considered to have been paid to him by himself and that the executor is accountable for the amount of his debt as assets (b).

Directions given by a testator in respect of the marriage expenses of his great grandsons and great grand-daughters are valid in law (c).

In a suit for construction of a will, for administration of the estate of the testator, for settlement of the accounts of the executor and for partition of such properties as may be left after payment of the debts, costs of all Courts must be paid out of the estate (d).

In determining whether a conveyance was benami or not the source of the purchase money and possession of the property are the principal tests. Reliance must be largely placed, not only upon the surrounding circumstances and the position of the parties and their relations to one another, but also upon the motives which could govern their actions and their subsequent conduct (e).

Previous statements, unless used to contradict or discount the evidence of a witness given in the suit, cannot be legitimately used, and even then the particular matter or point must be placed before the witness as one for explanation in view of its discrepancy with the evidence tendered unless the specific statements are put to the parties sought to be contradicted, they cannot be used in evidence (f). Upendra Nath Nag v. (20) Construction of—Direction to trustee to invest testator's money in a company for a certain period—Change of investment after the period, whether necessary—Trust—Investment of trust money on first mortgage—Accumulation of debt in excess of value of mortgaged property—Breach of trust.

A Will contained a direction to a trustee appointed under it to collect the money due on a policy of insurance upon the testator's life and invest that sum in A and Co. and improve the principal and interest for three years; it also provided that in certain events the money that might accrue till then (i.e., till the end of 3 years) should be considered as belonging to the testator's wife and daughter, and that even then the testator's younger brother and trustee should continue to have the authority of supervision connected with that money as it was in the mean-time. The trustee deposited the money in A and Co. according to the directions in the Will, but did not withdraw it after 3 years, and the money perished in the Company's bankruptcy. In an administration suit brought by the testator's wife, seeking to make the trustee liable for the loss of the money on the ground that by allowing it to remain in deposit with the Company after 3 years, he had acted contrary both to his duties as trustee under the law and to the express terms of the Will.

Held that on the true construction of the will the defendant was directed to invest the money in A and Co. and to remain trustee of the fund until he transferred it according to law to the beneficiaries, and that he was accordingly entitled to retain the money in that Company if he liked, and was not bound to change the investment.

Where trustees who had invested trust money on a first mortgage of immovable property, knowing that the mortgagor was in embarrassed circumstances, made no attempt to obtain payment of principal or interest, till the total amount of debt considerably exceeded the value of the property, held that the trustees having done nothing to protect the interest of the cestui que trust, were liable to make good the loss caused by their default. Dhupati Srinivasachari v. (2) S. 98 (2)—Chief Court Regulation, S. 15 (3) as amended by Reg. III of 1911—Conflict—Material question—Difference of opinion between Judges constituting a Bench.

When two Judges constituting a Bench differ on a material question, it is open to them to take either of the courses laid down in S. 15 (3) of the Chief Court Regulation as amended by Reg. III of 1911 (the Code of Civil Procedure). Per Miller, C.J. and Paramasiva Iyer, J.—A material question may be a question either of law or fact. Per Chandrasekhara Aiyar, J.—There is no real conflict between S. 98 (2) of the Civ. Pro. Code and S. 15 (3) of the Chief Court Regulation. A question of fact dependent merely on an appreciation of evidence is not a material question within the contemplation of S. 15 (3) of the Chief Court

(3) O. II, r. 5—Joinder of causes of action—Claim by heir as such.

The suit was instituted by three partners for the recovery of two debts from the defendant. In respect of a portion of the claim the three plaintiffs were partners and in respect of the remainder the third plaintiff based his right on the footing that his right to recover from the defendant had devolved on him on the death of his father who was during his life a partner of the firm. Objection was taken that the suit as framed contravened the provisions of O. II, r. 5 of the Civ. Pro. Code.

Held, that the plaintiff was not prevented by that rule from joining a claim, to which he was entitled personally by reason that it had devolved on him by succession to a deceased person, with one to which his title was acquired otherwise. Iddaji v. Sunnilal, 20 Mys. 303.

Where a compromise effected on behalf of a minor without the leave of the Court is made the basis of a decree and that decree is subsequently set aside in a suit by the minor, after attaining majority, the parties are entitled to take up the litigation at the point where it was dropped in consequence of the compromise, and for that purpose, to apply to the Court which passed the decree on the compromise to restore the suit to file and continue it. That Court has jurisdiction to restore and continue the suit, and a refusal to do so may be corrected by the Chief Court under S. 115 of the Code. R. Pommiah v. Sangamma, 20 Mys. 263.

Costs.

Contribution, suit for—Joint wrong-doers—Previous judgment—Relevancy.

The judgment in a previous suit in which the present parties were ranged as co-defendants is relevant and conclusive in so far as it holds that both of them were liable for costs to the plaintiff in that suit. It is not conclusive on the question of the liability of the parties to contribute as among themselves or the extent of such liability; but it may be relevant for the purpose of determining the said question, as for instance where the direction in regard to the defraying of costs rested largely on a finding that the defence was false to the knowledge of the parties making it; such a finding would raise a presumption in the matter. The record of the previous litigation may be relied on as evidence in so far as it tends to establish the collusive conduct alleged. Brahmayya v. Nagarajayya, 20 Mys. 274.

As long as the authorized practice of the Courts requires a decree-holder to file a copy of the order passed for transfer or re-transfer of the decree from one Court to another for execution, the copy filed of such order must necessarily bear a Court-fee stamp. Consequently the presentation by decree-holder of a process memorandum along with the Court-fee required

Hindu Law (Widow).

Alienation by Hindu widow—Legal necessity—Extent—Reversioner's rights.

Where the alienee has done all that is reasonable to satisfy himself of the existence of necessity for the alienation by a Hindu widow, and where as a matter of fact necessity is established in respect of a very substantial portion of the consideration, the fact that there is a relatively small balance not properly accounted for does not necessarily vitiate the alienation, the true test being whether in the facts and circumstances of the particular case the transaction was a proper one and for the benefit of the estate.

Where money is borrowed in order to meet the expenses of the Upanayanam of a son adopted by a Hindu widow, the fact that the adoption is subsequently adjudged to be invalid does not affect the character of the debt as one covered by legal necessity. Subbanna v. Venkatesiah, 20 Mys. 293.

Where an instalment decree directed that, in default of payment of any two instalments, the whole of the decretal amount then due should be paid with interest at 12 per cent. thereon from the date of suit to that of payment.

Held that the expression "any two instalments" meant any two consecutive instalments.

Held also that the provision regarding payment of interest was of a penal nature, as the decree amount already included future interest, and that it could be relieved against by the executing Court. Sannapa v. Mallapa Jole, 20 Mys. 299.

Maintenance.

Hindu Law—Decree creating charge on family property—Right to execute against sons of defendants though not actually made parties.

A widow sued two undivided brothers of her husband and their father for maintenance and obtained a decree creating a charge on the family property. The plaintiffs who were the minor sons of one of the brothers sued for a declaration that their 5/18th share in the family properties are free from the charge on the ground that they were not parties to the suit for maintenance.

Held, that the decree could be executed against their shares in the family property. Dodda Nanjundappa v. Rudramma, 20 Mys. 245.

executed by the debtor in satisfaction of the three prior bond debts, but it was stated that the debtor had denied execution of this deed and left it unregistered. On these admissions in the plaint the Munsif found that the plaintiff had no cause of action on the three bonds since it was admitted that a hypothecation bond evidencing a new contract had come into existence notwithstanding the fact that it was unregistered.

Held, the unregistered document being valueless as a hypothecation, the novation agreed upon was not completed and it was open to plaintiff either to enforce specific performance by way of compulsory registration of the hypothecation deed or to accept a repudiation, put an end to the new agreement, and sue on the original bonds. *Mullingiah v.
